Againe here obſerue how ſhee prooueth her ſelfe to be a Propheteſſe, namely, by her owne teſtimonie onely, She calleth her ſelfe ſo. Where we may ſee the note and marke of a falſe Prophet: to wit, their owne bare word and teſtimonie. A true Prophet or Propheteſſe hath ſundry teſtimonies, beſides their owne words, to proue the lawfulneſſe of their calling: as in the primitiue Church, they had the gift of ſpeaking diuers languages without ſtudie, and of working miracles: they had alſo puritie of doctrine, ioyned with integritie of life; & laſtly, many excellent gifts of God, as zeale, courage, and conſtancie to maintaine the ſame.

Chriſt hauing deſcribed this woman, for her further diſgrace, as alſo to aggrauate the fault of this Church in ſuffering her, proceedeth to deſcribe her doctrine. And firſt hee ſheweth the end and ſcope thereof, namely to ſeduce and to deceiue. Wherein he giueth vs a further note of a falſe Prophet or Propheteſſe, to wit, to teach ſuch doctrine as drawes men to ſinne againſt the firſt or ſecond Table. True doctrine is according vnto godlineſſe,

neſſe, and leadeth men thereto; but the end of falſe doctrine is impietie againſt God and man: as was ſhewed by the doctrine of Balaam, verſ.14. and ſuch was the doctrine of this woman.

The Vſe. Sundry ſtudents now adayes are marueilouſly affected with the ſermons, commentaries and poſtils of monks and friers. Theſe they prefer before the writings of other godly and ſound Diuines, which is a lamentable caſe: for they are in their kind Iezabels; the ſcope of their doctrine is to draw men to errours and tranſgreſſions againſt the law of God; yea, to bring men from heauen to hell. And therefore this exceeding approbation of them is no ſmall offence: being in truth the right way to bring in againe errors, Atheiſme, and Poperie. For turne a Papiſt from a morall point (wherein he often erreth) and his doctrine and ſermons are nothing but falſe and erronious: and therefore as Chriſt would haue this Church to hate the doctrine of this woman, becauſe it did deceiue; ſo muſt wee labour to grow in diſlike with the commentaries and poſtils of monks and friers, which tend to that end.

Secondly, Chriſt ſetteth forth the end of her doctrine by two arguments: Firſt, by the perſons deceiued, his ſeruants: ſecondly, by the meanes whereby they are deceiued; to wit, by cauſing them to commit fornication, and to eat meates ſacrificed vnto Idols.

Touching the perſons. Whereas ſhee deceiued not all men, but the ſeruants of God (for here is a plaine diſtinction of men) this encreaſeth her fault, becauſe they belonged vnto God. But here two queſtions may bee mooued: Firſt, why ſome men are the ſeruants of God, and ſome are not. Secondly, whether the ſeruants of God may bee ſeduced by falſe teachers. To the firſt ſome anſwere, that God would haue all men to bee his ſeruants, and for his part doth all things needfull vnto all men, to make them his ſeruants; redeeming them, and giuing them ſufficient grace hereunto; yet ſome are not his ſeruants, becauſe they themſelues will not, but wilfully reiect his grace that is offered vnto them. But this doctrine is againſt common reaſon, and doth much derogate from the glorie of God: for hereby they make euery man an emperour, and God an vnderling, ſubiect vnto man; they make Gods good pleaſure to depend vpon mans pleaſure, and the accepting of his grace to depend vpon mans will. But God is the firſt cauſe of all things, his will ouerruleth mans will: and therefore it is abſurd to ſay, ſome men are not Gods ſeruants, becauſe they themſelues will not. The true cauſe hereof is Gods good pleaſure, electing ſome, and they alone become his ſeruants becauſe hee hath choſen them. But God did neuer chuſe all men firſt to grace, & then to glorie: and therfore as Luke ſaith, (a) ſo many as were ordained to euerlaſting life, beleeued. So wee may ſay: ſo many as are elected of God to grace and ſaluation, they become his ſeruants. (a) Act.13.48.

The ſecond queſtion. Whether may Gods ſeruants be ſeduced by falſe Prophets? Anſw. There bee two ſorts of ſeruants of God: ſeruants in appearance, and ſeruants in truth. Seruants in appearance are ſuch as outwardly onely embrace the word, and receiue the ſeales of Gods couenant: and the greateſt part of particular churches are ſuch ſeruants. Now theſe may fall away and that wholly: and hence it commeth, that whole particular churches may fall away, as did the church of Galatia, and many other: and theſe are called ſeruants, becauſe we muſt in charitie iudge, that all which make profeſsiō of true religion in Gods church, are the ſeruants of God. But the true ſeruants of God, though they may be ſeduced in part, and for a time, yet they can neither wholly nor finally fall away: for the promiſe of Chriſt is to the contrarie, (b) Thou art Peter and vpon this rocke, that is, the faith which thou profeſſeſt, will I build my temple: and the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt it. Which laſt word (preuaile) inſinuateth, that the diuell ſhall ſhew great malice and ſtrength to vanquiſh their faith, but yet ſhal neuer wholly ouercome it. And Matth. 6.13. we are taught to pray, Lead vs not into temptation. To be lead into temptation, is wholly to be ouercome in temptation, which being a lawfull petition, muſt needs haue Gods promiſe to graunt the ſame belonging vnto it. And therefore though Sathan may aſſay to ouercome the child of God, (b) Mat.16.18 yet he shall neuer get finall victory ouer him: for true faith purifieth the heart, and cannot stand with a purpose to continue in any one sinne: these two banish each other, sinne brings the child of God vpon his knees; but true faith doth raise him vp againe.

II. point. The means whereby she sought to seduce thē, was by drawing them to commit fornication: and to eate things sacrificed to Idols. Whereby it is plaine, shee was a fauourer of the sect of the Nicolaitans: whereof entreatie was made in the foureteenth verse. And thus much for the reproofe of the Church.

Verse. 21. And I gaue her space to repent of her fornication, and shee repented not.

Here Christ reprooueth this woman for her obstinacie and hardnesse of heart, whereby shee went on in sinne without repentance. By space to repent, wee are to vnderstand, libertie to liue: for though by her sinnes she deserued present death, temporall and eternall; yet God of his mercy gaue her libertie to liue, that shee might repent.

The Vse. In her example we are taught what to iudge of that space of time which God giueth vs to liue in this world, namely, that it is a time of repentance: for before a man be borne, and after this life, can none repent: but the time wee now liue, or haue liued, or shall liue, is the only time allotted for repentance. This point ought seriously to bee considered of all estates, for it doth plainely rebuke the shamefull practise of many at this day, who lead not their life as a time of repentance, but spend it wholly in another course: some in following their vaine pleasures, as carding, dicing, &c. some in heaping vp riches, seeking nothing but temporall profites: others in good fellowship (as they call it) that is, in companie keeping, in eating and drinking. God in iustice might haue cut off these men so soone as they were borne, and yet in mercie hee giues them time to repent, to some twentie, to others thirtie, fortie, or fiftie yeares: but they abuse this mercie of God, and in steed of repenting, imploy themselues in such workes as are contrarie thereunto. Their case is most fearefull, they treasure vp to themselues wrath against the day of wrath & declaration of the iust iudgement of God: like vnto a man that euery day for some certaine time, carrieth a faggot for his own burning in the end.

Secondly, from this end of life all that haue not repented, must learne not to deferre their repentance, but now begin, while it is called to day, and in the exercise thereof spend the whole time of their life. The end of all our endeauours while wee liue, should be this, to get a roome in the kingdome of God, which wee can neuer haue without repentance.

Next consider, who it is that giues this time of repentance: neither man nor Angell hath this time in his hands, but the power of appointing it belongs vnto Christ alone.

Hereby then all persons whatsoeuer are to bee admonished, without delay to repent. The young man will take his pleasure in his youth, and repent when he is old: but hereby he robbeth Christ of his honour, who onely hath power to point out the time of repentance. Vse therefore the time present while thou hast it, and deferre not repentance: for how knowest thou that thou shalt liue to bee old? And though thou doest, yet how canst thou tell whether God will giue thee repentance, considering thou diddest refuse, while he called for it? Men thinke, that if they die quietly and peaceably, all is well, they goe to heauen straight: but herewith many are deceiued; for vnlesse they haue truely repented, they goe straight to the deuill, let their manner of dying be what it will. A quiet death is a comfortable thing, but no sure signe of grace, because it may come by reason of some easie lingering sickenesse. Considering therefore wee haue no title vnto this grace of repentance, to clayme it at our pleasure, it being the rare gift of God; nor any lease of our life, but bee meere tenants at will; let vs seeke to turne to God with full purpose of heart, while it is called to day: and if we haue begun, let vs dayly renew this grace to the end of our life.

Third-

Thirdly, conſider to whome God giues ſpace of repentance: namely, to a wicked woman, as wicked as Iezabell. Wherein behold the endleſſe mercie of God, that vnto ſuch a wicked perſon, who blaſphemed God, in fathering her ſinnes vpon the ſpirit of grace, and diſhonoured God by ſeducing his ſeruants, doth yet vouchſafe a time of repentance: This hath beene and is the dealing of God with moſt grieuous ſinners. Manaſſes was one that ſold himſelfe to worke wickedneſſe, giuing himſelfe to ſorcerie and idolatrie; and yet vpon his heartie repentance God receiued him to mercie. And Salomon fell moſt fearefully, but yet before his death wee may perſuade our ſelues hee repented and was receiued to mercie: for hee was a penman of Scripture, all which were holy men of God, as Peter ſayth, 2. Pet. 1. 20. The Iſraelites were (a) a people of Sodome and of Gomorrha, as bad as thoſe who are condemned in hell, and yet mercie is offered vnto them vpon their true repentance and conuerſion.

(a) Iſa. 1. 10.

The Vſe. Hereby no man muſt take occaſion to liue in his ſinnes: but thoſe that feele themſelues laden with the huge burden of their tranſgreſſions, haue here a comfort to keepe them from deſpaire: for if they can humble themſelues, and turne vnto Chriſt, and pray for the pardon of their ſinnes, there is yet with the Lord mercie in ſtore, that they may bee ſaued.

Laſtly, Chriſt ſaith, He gaue her ſpace to repent of her fornication. No doubt ſhe had many other ſinnes whereof ſhee was to repent, for no ſinne goeth alone, but euery capitall ſinne draweth many with it: Chriſt his meaning therefore is not that ſhe ſhould let paſſe other ſins without repentance: but he nameth this one ſin of fornication, becauſe it was a principall ſinne in her: for ſhe both practiſed it in her owne bodie, and ſo made her ſelfe the ſtable of the diuell, who ſhould haue bene the temple of Gods holy ſpirit: and alſo maintained this ſinne, and ſo drew others thereto. Now ſpeciall and principall repentance muſt be of principall ſinnes.

The Vſe. Here then is a patterne for all ſinners how to practiſe repentance. They muſt beginne with their capitall ſinnes, which burden their conſcience, and whereto they are moſt addicted, and repent of them. For the man that truly repenteth of one ſinne, repenteth of all: for true repentance maketh the heart alike affected to all ſinnes: And that heart which is brought to hate his ſpeciall ſinnes, will neuer approue of pettie ſinnes. This leſſon ought carefully to be learned & put in practiſe: For the repentance of moſt men is onely in generall, to ſay wee are all ſinners, Lord haue mercie vpon me, or God forgiue me. But this confuſed repentance is not good, it ſtands with a purpoſe to ſinne againe. In particular therefore we muſt ſearch our conſciences, and ſee wherein we haue moſt diſhonored God, and what ſinne hath neereſt plunged our ſoules to the pit of hell; and with that we muſt beginne to bring our ſoules to heauen, by repenting truly for the ſame, and turning from it with all our hearts.

Hence the Papiſts gather that man hath free will to doe that which is truly good before God, as namely to repent: for ſay they, God gaue Ieſabell ſpace of time to repent, and therefore ſhee had power to repent, or elſe the giuing of that time vnto her had bene in vaine. Anſw. Their reaſon is nought: it followeth not becauſe God gaue her time to repent, therefore ſhe had power of her ſelfe to repent: as will eaſily appeare, if wee conſider the ends for which God giues men ſpace & time of repentance, and commandement ſo to do. The ends are two. I. That in that time of repentance, which hee allotteth to men, hee may giue his children grace, whereby they may be enabled to obey his commandement and to repent: for the Lord vſeth the commandements and threatnings of the law, and the promiſes of the goſpell as outward meanes of giuing grace vnto men by the worke of his ſpirit. II. He giueth commaundement and time to repent, that men may ſee what they ſhould doe, not what they can doe: and that the wicked may bee without excuſe at the day of iudgement, and be aſhamed of their ſlauerie & bondage vnto ſinne in this life.

And ſhee repented not. Here the ſinne of Iezabell is expreſſed, namely, her impenitencie

tencie and hardnesse of heart. Whereby without remorse shee liued in her fornication and idolatrie: For the vnderstanding of this her sinne, two points are to bee considered. I. Where this sinne of impenitencie is forbidden in Gods word. II. What is the greatnesse of this sinne: for the first, there bee two parts of Gods word, the Law, and the Gospell, which must not be confounded, but distinguished, or else wee shall ouerturne manie points of Christian religion. The law giues commandements touching things that were by nature in Adam before his fall, forbidding those things which are contrarie to those vertues which were in his perfect nature. But the gospell commands, & forbids things that are aboue nature, and in that part of Gods word is this sinne of impenitencie forbidden; for the law condemnes no more than it reuealeth, but it neuer reuealed repentance, and therefore it doth not forbid or condemne the want thereof. Secondly, for the greatnesse of this sinne, it may appeare, becausse hereby men heape sin vpon sinne, and (a) Wrath vnto themselues against the day of wrath. Some to aggrauate the grieuousnesse of this sinne, say that impenitencie is the sinne against the holy ghost: and that opinion is antient, but yet false and erronious, for the sinne against the holy ghost is a blasphemie, Mat. 12.31. but this is not a blasphemy. Again the sinne against the holy ghost is in this life, but finall impenitencie is neuer before the end of this life.

(a) Rom.2.5.

The Vse. Hence also the Papistes gather free will to good by nature: shee did not repent, therefore she had freewill & power to repent if she would. Answ. This reason is not good: thus much may hence be gathered, that she had freewil not to repent, and to sinne: for euery man sinneth freely, but yet it followeth not, that they haue the same power to cease from sinne, or to repent without Gods special grace, without which no man can will or doe that which is truly good before God.

Againe, the same sinne which is reproued in this wicked woman, may bee layd to the charge of the greatest number in our churches and congregations. God hath giuen vnto men a long time of repentance, to some ten, to some twenty yeares, but they repent not, as their liues do plainly testifie: for some liue in irreligion and prophanenesse, some in Saboath breaking, some in fornication and adulterie, some in idlenesse, some in couetousnesse and extortion, giuing themselues wholly and spending all their time in seeking the things of this life, neuer regarding with reuerence the things of God.

Verse. 22. Behold I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit fornication with her into great affliction, except they repent them of their works.

Christ hauing reproued this church and this woman for their seuerall faults, doth here giue speciall counsell and direction vnto them both, whereby they may auoid & escape the grieuous iudgements due vnto them for their sinnes, both in this life, and in the life to come. This counsell of Christ hath two parts: First to Iesabell and her company, vers. 22. 23. The second to the church of Thyatira, verse. 24, 25. The summe of Christs counsell to Iesabell is, to repent: which is not expressed, but insteed thereof the reason to moue her to repentance is propounded. And it may be framed thus, If thou repent not I will punish thee with sundry iudgements: But thou wouldest not be so punished, and therefore repent.

This reason hath two parts, A threatning: and an exception thereof. The threatning in these words, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit fornication with her into great affliction. And before this threatning, Christ prefixeth a word of attention (Behold) whereby hee would teach them and vs, that wee ought seriously to consider of the threatnings that are propounded in Gods word against sinne and sinners. When Iosias heard the booke of the law read, his heart (b) melted: which it could neuer haue done vnlesse it had first trembled at the iudgements therein denounced. And the pricking that was wrought in the hearts of the Iewes, (c) by Peters first Sermon, was nothing else but a compunction wrought in them vpon consideration of the iudgements and condemnation due vnto them for crucifying the Lord of life. The cause why sinne is so rife in euery estate and condition of men at this day is, for that men set light by the threatnings of Gods word. If men would tremble when they heare of Gods iudgements, it would make them crie out, Men and brethren, what shall we do? but because God is mercifull, therefore men feare him not, Isay. 57.11.

This threatning hath three seuerall parts according to the three seuerall sorts of persons whom it concerneth. The. I. is against Iesabell her selfe, who was the chiefe of them all, in these words, I will cast her into a bed. The meaning whereof may bee gathered out of the like words of Ieroboam to Ahiah, bidding him (a) lye downe on his bed and make himselfe sicke. So that Christs meaning is, that he wil strike her with some grieuous sicknes: the place of the sick person being put for the sicknesse it selfe: As if hee should say, Iesabell takes her pleasure in fornication, and thereto abuseth the bed, I will therfore send on her some great sickneſſe which shall cast her into her bed.

The Vse. Here note Gods dealing with sinners: In those things which they abuse for the furtherance of their sinnes, will the Lord plague and punish them. Iesabell abused her bed with fornication, & thither shee must bee cast with sicknesse: Dives in his life time abused his tongue and tast by gluttonie, and therefore in hell, therein most of all plaged and tormented, as his crying (b) for a drop of water to cole his tongue, doth import: gamesters take their pleasure in carding and dicing, which many times God turneth to their woe: for thereby they are vsually brought to extreame want and miserie. Ahab shed Naboths bloud to get his vineyard, and for that sinne must (c) his bloud, the bloud of Iezabell and his children, be shed. And now in these dayes the couetous for their gaine doe sucke the bloud of the poore, but that bloud will haue bloud from them againe, The Lord will spoyle the soule of him that spoyles the poore, Prou. 22.23. This must make vs to beware how we abuse any creature of God to serue vs for any sinne: for the Lord will cause that to bee a meanes of woe and punishment vnto vs which we misuse vnto our lusts.

(b) Luk. 16. 24.

(c) 1. Kin. 21. 23, 24.

Againe, note here who is the author of grieuous sicknesses, namely, Christ himselfe: For he saith, I will cast her into a bed. Sicknesses come not by chaunce or fortune, but from the hand of God. This wee must learne to beleeue, and it will cause vs to make better vse of sicknesses than vsually we do: If men did beleeue this, it would make the hardest heart to repent in time of sicknesse: for this they would say, Hath God cast me downe with sicknesse? no doubt it is to humble me for some of my sinnes, to make me know them, to leaue them, and to turne vnto him. This vse the seruants of God haue made hereof, (d) when the Prophet came to Hezekias, and told him hee should die, he turned his face to the wall and wept, as for other things, so for his sinnes especially. And Iacob being to die, (e) leaned on his staffe, and by faith worshipped towards the beds head, lifting vp his body to do reuerence vnto God, thereby testifying his humilitie, faith, and hope. And the like ought we to do, which if wee could, wee should find our sicknesse would become a blessing vnto vs.

(d) 2 Ki. 20. 2.

(e) Heb. 11. 21.

The second part of Christs threatning is the punishment of her followers, which receiued her doctrine, & committed fornication with her, They must bee cast into great affliction.

The Vse. First, this must teach all persons, that it is a diuelish speech to thinke and say, that fornication it but a sticke and shippe of youth, for great affliction is the punishment of this sinne, which notably argueth the haynousnesse thereof.

Secondly, hence we may gather some of the causes, why townes and kingdomes are afflicted with grieuous wars, famine, and pestilence; among the rest these are two, fornication, and embracing of errours and superstition. Sodome for fornication and other sinnes was burnt with fire & brimstone from heauen: The Israelits (f) for this sin suffered most grieuous afflictions: And among the Corinthians, for comming to the Lords table in this sin, among others, (g) many were sicke, many weake, and many slept. And this land of ours hath bene afflicted with famine and pestilence, as for other sinnes, so for fornication; which in time of peace is multiplied, and so will continue till it draw vpon vs bloudshed also and great afflictions: For that which is sayd of the followers of Iesabel must be verified of all that liue in the like sinnes.

(f) Num. 25: 9.

(g) 1. Cor. 11: 30. with cap. 6. 18. & 10. 8.

The second part of the reason is, the exception of these communications: except they repent them of their workes. Where we may see: First, that all the threatnings of Gods iudgements and of eternall destruction, must bee vnderstood, with the exception of repentance: Whence also this followeth, that men of yeares liuing in the church are not so much condemned for other particular sins, as for liuing in their sins without repentance: euery sin makes a man subiect to damnation, but it is this impenitencie that brings vpon the actuall danation. Want of repentance for sin is more dangerous than the sin it selfe; the consideration whereof, must teach vs not to lie in sinne, though wee haue committed it, but turne to God by speedie repentance: for it is the continuance in sinne without repentance that casteth the soule to hell. When thou shalt turne from thy sinne by true repentance, thou art free from the threatning and the curse of sinne. For they admitting the exception of true repentance, Ierem. 18.8.

Further obserue, how this exception of repentance is placed betweene two threatnings of iudgements, which sheweth how God mingleth his iudgements with mercie, hee sheweth not wholly either iustice or mercie, but tempereth them together in all the workes that concerne mans saluation.

Thirdly, here note that repentance preuents not onely eternall damnation, but also temporall iudgements, as grieuous sicknesses, and other plagues and afflictions. This point may haue speciall vse among vs: Wee haue by Gods mercie enioyed his gospell with long peace, but for our abuse thereof we may iustly feare it shall be taken from vs; and if we would escape that iudgement wee must repent both high and low.

Of their workes. That is, of their idolatrie and fornication, where hee sheweth of what things true repentance must be, namely, of bad workes in particular, whereto men giue themselues: euerie man that would truly repent must consider of his particular faults: The drunkerd in particular of his drunkennesse, and the couetous man of his couetousnesse: and instead of iniuries and hard dealing shew mercy vnto the poore. The common repentance of the world that is done in generall, is nothing but a visard of repentance, and yet it is all that is vsed of the greatest part of our people: for they will come to heare the word, and to receiue the Sacraments, and in generall confesse themselues to bee sinners, and then they thinke they haue done enough: But true repentance is of particular sinnes: As Dauid Psalm. 51. cried out of bloud guiltinesse.

Vers. 23. And I will kill her children with death, and all the Churches shall know that I am hee which searcheth the reines and hearts: and I will giue vnto euerie one of you according to his workes.

Here is the third part of Christs threatning against Iesabels children: by children wee are to vnderstand properly, those which are borne of her, and were of her husband, and not her followers, for they were threatned with grieuous afflictions in the former verse. It had bene sufficient to haue sayd, I will kil her children. But to note the certainty and greeuousnesse of this punishment, he saith I will kill them (with death.) Quest. How can this stand with the iustice of God, to punish the offences of the parents in the person of the children? Ans. God dealeth so for temporall punishments, not for eternall.

And though we could not perceiue the iustice of God in so doing, yet wee must reuerence the same, blaming our owne ignorance. Albeit, euen in reason wee may conceiue of the equitie of this course: for societies, as church, commonwealth, and families, are Gods ordinance, and the parties in them must bee considered as members of those societies: for God conceiueth of them when hee afflicteth the punishment deserued by one, vpon another; as of the Prince vpon the people, of the parents vpon their children. This hee may iustly do by reason of that neere bond which is betweene the members of the ſame ſocietie: like as in the naturall bodie when the ſtomacke is diſtempered, the head aketh: and when the head is wounded the ſtomacke is ſicke; and the bodie may bee ſmitten for the errours of the tongue. Thus when Dauid ſinned the child died, and when hee numbred the Iſraelites, the people were plagued. And thus is the child ſtained in bloud for the fathers treaſon againſt earthly Princes: and ſo God puniſhed this woman in her children, that ſhee might knowe the greatneſſe of her ſinnes, hee ſmote her children with death.

The Vſe. Hence parents are taught to make conſcience of euerie ſinne: For thereby they may bring iudgements vpon their children and familie euen to death. Now what bloudie hearted parents are thoſe, that will make no conſcience of doing that whereby they bring vengeance vpon their owne children? And by the ſame reaſon muſt euery man that liues in any ſocietie be admoniſhed to take heed of ſinne: becauſe thereby a man (eſpecially if hee bee a principall member of a ſocietie) may bring deſtruction vpon many; As Dauid did by numbring the people: And Achan by his couetous ſtealth, Ioſua. 7: And Ahab vpon his poſteritie. So that impenitent perſons which will not be reformed but go on in ſinne, ought to bee baniſhed both from church and commonwealth, as hurtfull members, yea enemies to all good ſocieties.

That theſe threatnings might take place in the hearts of Ieſabell and her followers, Chriſt remooueth two carnall conceits, whereby they might thinke to delude or eſcape theſe iudgements threatned. The firſt is this, Ieſabell and her company might thinke that their practiſes were ſecret, not knowne to the world; and therefore they were not in danger of Gods iudgements: This is a wicked imagination that comes into the mind of all ſinners, but this Chriſt cuts off ſaying, And all the Churches ſhall know that I am hee which ſearch the reines and the hearts: As if he ſhould ſay to Ieſabell and her companie: you may perſuade your ſelues that becauſe your ſinnes are ſecret, therefore my iudgements ſhall not befall you. But know, that I will diſcouer your ſecret ſinnes and practiſes in ſuch ſort, as all Churches ſhall know by experience in your perſons, that I do ſee and diſcerne the moſt hidden thoughts of mans heart.

Firſt, here obſerue to whome Chriſt will diſcouer their ſinnes; not to all the world, but to the Church of God, All Churches ſhall know; This Chriſt doth to terrifie Ieſabell & her companie: For as it is an excellent honour to bee well eſteemed of with the Churches of God, ſo it is a moſt ſhamefull diſhonour to bee in diſgrace with the Churches of God: For (a) whatſoeuer is bound or looſed by the Churches on earth, the ſame is bound or looſed in heauen. And therefore by due proportion it followeth, that they which are in diſgrace with Gods Churches on earth, are alſo in diſgrace with God himſelfe in heauen. (a) Mat. 18.

The Vſe. Hence wee are taught that howſoeuer we muſt (ſo much as in vs lieth) endeuour to approoue our ſelues to the whole world, yet eſpecially wee muſt labour to bee in good account with the Churches of God, and the members thereof: And on the contrarie, we muſt continually auoide the doing of all ſuch things as may iuſtly bring vs into diſgrace with the Church of God. Rom. 16.16. The Churches of Chriſt ſalute you. And 1. Cor. 16. 19. All the Churches of Aſia ſalute you. Where the Apoſtle meaneth not, that they did by word of mouth ſend greetings vnto them: But hereby hee would ſignifie that all Churches did approue of them, which hee ſaith for their great comfort. Paule receiued Timothie into the companie, becauſe the Churches gaue him a good report, Act. 16. 2. 3.

But what is the thing that all churches ſhould know by experience in the perſons of Iezabell and her company? namely, that Chriſt is he which doth indeed ſearch the reynes and the hearts: where, by Reynes and hearts wee muſt vnderſtand the ſame things, namely, the thoughts and affections of men: for in that ſence thoſe words are often vſed in the old Teſtament. Queſt. How can reynes ſignifie the thoughts and affections, ſee-ing the thoughts are seated in the braine, and the affections in the heart? Answ. The reynes are put for the thoughts and affections, not because they are seated therein, but for that resemblance and analogie that is betweene them: for as the reynes are seated in the most secret part of the bodie, so the thoughts and affections are seated in the most secret place of the soule: and the heart is put for the thoughts and affections, first, because the affections are there seated; secondly, because the thoughts, though they bee seated in the braine, yet they haue their operation in the heart: for ioyfull thoughts make a merry heart, and fearefull thoughts an heauie heart. Againe, the word (Search) signifieth a most narrow search, and such a one as goeth with finding; thereby shewing that nothing is so secret in man, but the Lord both can and doth see and discerne the same.

The Vse. Hence wee learne first, that Christ our Sauiour is not onely man, but very God, one person standing of two natures. That Christ is man, heretickes denie not: but whether he be God or not, there is the question. Which yet is here euidently prooued: for hee that hath in him the peculiar properties of God, must needs be God: But Christ hath in him the true properties of God, he can search and discerne all the thoughts and all the affections of the hearts of all men, which none can doe but God onely, Ierem. 17. 9, 10, The heart is deceitfull and wicked aboue all things, who can know it? I the Lord search the heart, and trie the reynes. And therefore Christ is the true and very God.

Secondly, hereby wee are taught to beware and take heed of hypocrisie in all things, but especially in the matters of religion. Hypocrisie is, when a man seemes outwardly to be that which hee is not inwardly. But wee must haue care to bee truly in heart that which we appeare to bee in life and profession: wee must come as neere Christ in thought and affection, as in our outward action: for Christ knowes as well the whole estate of euerie mans reynes and heart, as he doth their speeches and their deeds.

Thirdly, hereby wee must learne to suspect our selues of our vnknowne sinnes, as of our vnbeleefe and presumption; not contenting our selues with an acknowledgement of our known sinnes, for wee can neuer discerne the depth of our corrupt heart, and yet God knoweth them. This was Dauids practise, (a) after due examination of himselfe hee yet crieth, Lord cleanse mee from my secret sinnes: As if he should say, I haue O Lord searched my heart, but I cannot sufficiently know mine owne corruptions; therefore doe thou O Lord helpe to cleanse mee from them. If this were practised, true religion would flourish: for many iustifie themselues, when as they know not what is in their hearts, little considering what Christ sayth vnto the Pharisees, (b) You are they which iustifie your selues before men, but Christ knoweth your hearts.

(a) Psal. 19. 12.

(b) Luk. 16. 15.

And I will giue to euery one of you according to your workes. Here Christ proceedeth to remoone a second wicked conceit, whereby they might seeme to illude Gods iudgements threatened. For they might say, Let the Lord send iudgments and plagues vpon vs, yet wee shall escape them: as Isay sayd of the wicked in his time, That they made a league with death and hell, and sayd the iudgements of God shall passe ouer them, Isay. 28. verse 15. But to cut off this vaine conceit, Christ threateneth a iust reward to euery one, according to his workes. As if hee should say; You may sooth vp your selues, and falsely thinke, that you shall escape my iudgements: but know it, that I will reward euery one of you partly in this life, and principally at the day of iudgement, according to your workes, bee they good or bad. For these words must especially bee vnderstood of the day of iudgement, as they are vsed, Rom. 2. 6. and Reuel. 20. 12.

The Vse. Hence the Papists gather, that men are saued not onely by faith in Christ, but also by workes: for thus they reason; By that whereby wee must bee iudged, must wee bee iustified and saued: but by workes wee must bee iudged, and therefore saued. Answ. The Proposition is false: There is great difference rence betweene iuſtifying and iudging: for iudging is onely the declaration of a man to bee iuſt; but iuſtification is the making of a man iuſt: And becauſe the declaration of a man to bee iuſt, is by workes, therefore is iudgement by workes. Againe, it is not ſayd, I will giue to you for your works, but according to your workes. If he had ſayd, I will giue to euery one of you for your workes, then it might haue ſeemed they had bin iuſtified by them: But here Chriſt doth only make works an outward ſigne, or rule, whereto hee will conforme and ſquare the laſt iudgement.

Secondly, whereas euery man muſt bee iudged, that is, ſaued or condemned according to his workes; hence wee may gather, that good workes are neceſſarie to ſaluation, yet not as cauſes thereof, either efficient, or helping any way, but onely as a way or meanes to come vnto ſaluation: For faith is neceſſarie, and good workes are the tokens and fruits of faith, and ſo are neceſſarie.

Thirdly, here we muſt bee admoniſhed to bee carefull to abound in good workes; not to win heauen by them, but to get aſſurance of ſaluation in our ſelues. And theſe good workes are the doing of the duties of pietie vnto God, and of charitie vnto our brethren, euen the duties of the Morall law; or more plainely, the doing of the generall duties of a Chriſtian, and the particular duties of a mans calling: for if theſe bee done in obedience to God and to his glory, proceeding from faith and loue vnto our brethren, though the calling bee neuer ſo baſe, they are good workes. And on the contrarie, this muſt admoniſh vs to make conſcience of euery euill way: for ſinnes be the markes of condemnation: and ſo many wicked workes as we commit, ſo many markes and brands doe wee ſet vpon our ſelues of our iuſt and deſerued condemnation, vnleſſe wee repent.

Laſtly, hence wee may gather, that there bee degrees of ioy in heauen, and of torments in hell. For iudgements and rewards goe according to mens workes: And therefore they that teſtifie their faith by great and many good workes, ſhall haue great reward: they that teſtifie their faith by leſſer and fewer workes, ſhall haue leſſer reward: and ſo for ſinnes, the more heynous they bee, the deeper condemnation they doe procure.

Verſ. 24. And to you I ſay, the reſt of them of Thyatira, as many as haue not this learning, neither haue knowne the depenneſſe of Sathan (as they ſpeake) I will put vpon you none other burden.

25. But that which you haue already hold faſt till I come.

Here Chriſt commeth to a ſecond part of his counſell, which concernes the Angell, and the better part of this Church of Thyatira: and firſt hee beginneth with the Preface of this counſell; wherein wee may obſerue two points: Firſt, who ſpeaketh: Secondly, to whom hee ſpeaketh. For the firſt, hee that ſpeaketh is Chriſt. I ſay, hereby Chriſt challengeth vnto himſelfe the abſolute and all ſufficient authoritie of the ſupreme Doctor of his Church, in that hee ſpeaketh in his owne name. Whereby hee putteth a plaine difference betweene himſelfe and all other his Miniſters, either Prophets, Apoſtles, or ordinarie teachers: for they muſt not propound any thing vnto Gods people in their owne names, but in the name of Chriſt. But Chriſt teacheth in his owne name, being the fountaine of all diuine knowledge and vnderſtanding, that is reuealed in the word of God. And thus Chriſt himſelfe ſpeaketh in his owne name, to ſtrike the hearts of the Angell of this Church and the better part thereof with reuerence, and to mooue them to receiue and obey the counſell following, conſidering it comes immediately from Chriſt, the Doctor of the Church.

II. point. The parties to whom he ſpeaketh, To you: that is, the Angell and the better part of this Church: for ſo Chriſt expounds it in the words following, though firſt hee ſay in generall To you: that is, The reſt of them of Thyatira.

When as Chriſt will behaue himſelfe as the doctor and chiefe Angell of this Church, note, that he maketh a diſtinction of the perſons in the Church, and alſo deuideth his counſell, giuing one doctrine and one iudgement to one part, and a diuers doctrine and iudgement to another.

The Vſe. This giueth vs good direction for ſundry actions: for ſome may aske, how muſt doctrine bee deliuered in a mixt congregation, where ſome are Papiſts, ſome Proteſtants, ſome are hardened, others deſpaire? Anſw. The perſons muſt bee diſtinguiſhed after the example of Chriſt, and ſutable doctrines deuided for them, that euery one may haue his due. Impenitent ſinners muſt be terrified, and threatenings deliuered againſt them, with exception of them that repent: Comforts muſt be propounded and applied to them that deſpaire, with reſtraint from all impenitent perſons that goe on in ſinne.

If any demaund more particularly, who theſe bee whom Chriſt calleth The reſt of them of Thyatyra, Chriſt anſweres directly (as the words import) to as many as haue not this learning, neither haue knowne the deepeneſſe of Sathan. Where Chriſt giueth two notes whereby to diſcerne who bee the reſt of them of Thyatira: The firſt is, the not receiuing or maintaining of the falſe doctrine of Iezabell, whereof entreatie hath beene formerly made: The ſecond note is, ignorance in the deepeneſſe of Sathan, neither haue knowne the deepeneſſe of Sathan: that is, neither haue acknowledged nor approoued the doctrine of Iezabell, which is the deepe and profound learning, as themſelues doe iudge.

In this obſerue a moſt wicked practiſe of Iezabell and her followers: they eſteemed highly of their owne opinions, calling them profound and deepe learning: but for the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles in the Old and New Teſtaments, in it there was no ſuch matter. This in all ages hath beene the practiſe of wicked perſons, highly to eſteeme their owne conceits, and baſely to neglect the word of God. The teachers of the Iewes doe hold to this day, That the Lord gaue to Moſes a moſt plain and eaſie law which he deliuered to his people; but the moſt ſecret and profound doctrine was vnwritten, ſhewed to Moſes by reuelation, and by him deliuered to the Prieſts and Leuites, which they keepe ſtill in their Cabbala. And of the like iudgement touching Scripture are the Popiſh Churches: The Word written is but an inkie word, a dead letter, or a noſe of waxe: but the moſt perfect Scripture is vnwritten; which is, the conſent of faith and of doctrine in the hearts of all Catholickes. And by ſuch great tearmes the Anabaptiſts, Libertines, and Arrians, maintaine their doctrine, and abuſe Scripture, calling the written Word milke for euery nouice: but the conſent of heart among themſelues, with reuelations, that is, the ſtrong meates. Yea, this opinion hath crept in among vs in part: men thinke baſely of Scripture, and preferre other mens writings before it. For let a man preach plainely the bare word of God, and deliuer doctrines and exhortations out of the ſame, this is but plaine preaching: But let another come and vtter his mind partly in Latine, and partly in Greeke, and other languages, alleadging withall the teſtimonies of Fathers, Counſels, and other Writers; that is the learned preaching. And thus doe moſt men abaſe Scripture, and exalt the writings of men aboue it. But ſeeing this is the practiſe of Iezabell and wicked men, let vs on the contrary learne to reuerence the written word, and giue place thereto aboue all the teſtimonies and ſayings of men whatſoeuer.

The deepeneſſe of Sathan. As if he ſhould ſay: They count it deepe learning; but it is the learning of the deuill, wherein you may ſee his profound craft and pollicie. Where note, that when Chriſt will alleadge the ſpeech of Iezabell and her followers, hee doth it with diſgrace vnto them: for they counted their doctrine deepe learning; but Chriſt repeating their opinion, calleth it the deepeneſſe of Sathan.

Hence I gather, that Chriſtians cannot ſafely act and play the Comedies of heathen men: for they are full of many The Vſe.

blaſphemous ſpeeches and oathes flat againſt the word of God: which they ought not to repeat, but with diſgrace vnto them. For Chriſts practiſe muſt bee a patterne for our imitation: hee would not repeat ſo much as one word of a wicked woman, without ſome note of diſgrace. If it bee ſayd, they repeat theſe ſpeeches with diſgrace and diſlike: I anſwere, it is not ſo: for if they did, that would take away the whole Comedie, being full of ſuch bad ſpeeches. And this I take to bee the equitie of Gods word, thus to reaſon from Chriſts example.

As they ſpeake. Theſe words Chriſt addeth: Firſt, to ſhew that the words going before were not his owne, but the words of Iezabels followers touching her doctrine. Secondly, to ſhew the proud and preſumptuous minds of heretickes, in maintaining their wicked opinions. Thus haue falſe teachers vpheld their errours by proud and ſwelling words, as Iude the 16. and 2. Pet. 2. 18. The pure word of God is not ſo maintained, but in the humilitie and lowlineſſe of ſpirit, and in the practiſe of pietie from an humble heart: for God teacheth the lowly his wayes, and giueth grace to the humble, Pſal. 25. 14. And therefore this is a note of falſe doctrin, by ſwelling words to maintaine the ſame.

Hitherto we haue ſpoken of the Preface before Chriſts counſell: now followeth the counſell it ſelfe in this ſentence: Though I lay no other burden vpon you, yet I would haue you to hold faſt that which you haue alreadie, till I come. This ſentence is a diſtinction, containing two parts: Firſt, in theſe words, I will lay no other burden vpon you, than that which you haue alreadie: that is, howſoeuer I threaten my iudgements vnto Iezabell and her followers, yet I will lay none other puniſhment vpon you but my reproofe onely, for ſuffering Iezabell among you with her falſe doctrine and followers.

This braunch of this diſtinction containeth a moſt comfortable inſtruction: namely, that all thoſe that giue themſelues to maintaine puritie of doctrine and ſynceritie of life, ſhall be ſafely preſerued in the time of common iudgements, vnder the bleſſed protection of God, ſo farre forth as is for Gods glorie and their good. And conſidering this mercie is offered to the godly, wee muſt hereby learne to become followers of this Church of Thyatira: that is, we muſt endeuour to maintaine the pure truth of Gods holy word, and withall haue care to ſhew foorth ſynceritie of manners, in making conſcience of euery ſinne, and endeuoring our ſelues to walke in all the wayes of Gods commaundements with cheerefulneſſe. Hereby we ſhall get protection from common iudgements, when they are layed vpon the wicked: but if wee partake with the wicked in their ſinnes, wee ſhall receiue part in their plagues.

The ſecond part of this diſtinction is in theſe words: But that which you haue alreadie, hold faſt till I come: that is, mine Apoſtles haue deliuered vnto you the pure and ſound doctrine of ſaluation; now I charge you that you hold that faſt, and maintaine it vntill I come to iudgement. Here is a plaine and moſt excellent commaundement, containing ſpeciall inſtruction meet for this Church of Thyatira, and all Churches. Before, our Sauiour Chriſt had commended this Church for not approouing the doctrine of Iezabell and her companie: but here hee giueth them another commaundement, To hold faſt the true doctrine of Chriſt, taught them by his Apoſtles. Wherby he would teach them, and in them all Churches, to content themſelues with the pure doctrin of the Apoſtles, and not to affect or approoue any other doctrine beſides whatſoeuer: According as Paule biddeth the Galatians (a) though wee, or an Angell from heauen preach vnto you any other doctrine than that which we haue preached vnto you, let him be accurſed. Verſ. 25. (a) Gal. 1. 8.

The Vſe. By the light of this commaundement wee are directed in ſundry duties. Firſt, not to regard vnwritten traditions, which the church of Rome doth ſo highly magnifie, for it cannot bee prooued, that the Apoſtles euer taught them.

Secondly, not to regard the doctrines of men, which ſome bring vnto vs vnder colour of Reuelation from God ſince the Apoſtles times.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, hereby wee learne what to thinke and iudge of the three great religions of the Turkes, the Iewes, and Papists at this day. The Turkish religion is not to bee regarded: for it had it beginning sixe hundred yeares after the Apostles time, with whose doctrine onely we must content our selues. Also the Iewish religion wee must not regard, for they reiect the doctrine of the Apostles. And the religion of the Papists we must renounce, because it is not of the Apostles teaching, but had it beginning by little and little long after their times. If this commaundement were safely kept, which is laid on this Church, men would not bee of so many religions: but all would bee of one religion, cleauing fast to the doctrine of the Apostles, and contenting themselues with it, which is the true rule for reformation of life, and the right way to attaine saluation.

Lastly, here is a rule and direction for those which will bee of no religion, because of the diuersitie of opinions touching the same. They must haue recourse to the doctrine of the Apostles, and content themselues therewith, nothing regarding new doctrines, bee they neuer so glorious.

Till I come. Here Christ sheweth how long the doctrine of the Apostles must bee held fast: namely, not for a short time, but till his second comming to iudgement. Whereby wee learne, that it is the dutie of Gods Church to preserue and maintaine the puritie of true religion vnto the end of the world. This is no small matter: but a most needfull dutie enioyned vnto vs by speciall commaundement, and withall a matter of great consequence: for the puritie of religion is the foundation and marke of the Church, and the right way to direct mens soules to eternall life. For this cause Paule chargeth Timothie,

(a) 2. Tim. 1. 13 & 3. 14. (a) To keepe the true patterne of wholesome words, and to continue in the things which hee had learned. And in regard of this du-

1. Tim. 3. 15. tie, the Church is called, The pillar and ground of truth. And Christ for this cause

Ephes. 4. 11. gaue to his Church both Pastors and Teachers: Pastors to instruct in righteousnesse, for the maintenance of puritie in manners: and Teachers, to maintaine the puritie of doctrine in soundnesse of iudgement. This therefore must admonish vs, that we haue care not onely to learne religion in our owne persons, but also to convey the same to ages following, that the puritie thereof may bee preserued to the comming of Christ. This dutie especially concernes the preachers of the Gospell, they should teach the truth, and confute errours, and beat downe false doctrines, which poyson the truth of God. If in the night season a man set vp a false light in the hauen, all the ships that are comming to land are in danger of shipwrack. So in Gods Church, if the bright light of pure religion bee not set vp and aduaunced, the soules of men are cast into the gulfe of hell. The want of care in performing this dutie, is the cause why God sends heresies and Apostacies into his Church. Thus came in the Apostacie of Antichrist, 2. Thess. 2. 10, 11, Because men loued not the truth. And so no doubt will the Lord deale with vs, if we haue not care to maintaine the puritie of Apostolicall doctrine.

Verse. 26. For her that ouercommeth and keepeth my workes vnto the end, to him will I giue power ouer nations.

27. And he shall rule them with a rod of yron, and as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken.

28. Euen as I receiued of my father, so will I giue him the morning Starre.

29. Let him that hath an eare heare what the Spirit saith to the Churches.

Here is the conclusion of this Epistle, which containeth two parts: First, a promise, vers. 26, 27, 28. Secondly, a commaundement, vers. 29. In the promise note two things: the parties to whom it is made, and the benefit promised. The parties to whom, are euery one that ouercommeth; whom Christ describeth by a propertie of syncere obedience, To keepe his workes vnto the end.

Here then we haue a description of true obedience. First, the forme thereof consisteth in obseruing the workes of Christ: which we must not vnderstand, of doing them them according to the rigor of the law, but of a purpose and indeuour to keepe them. For this is a priuiledge belonging to all that are in Christ, that God accepteth their wils and indeuours of obedience, for perfect obedience it selfe. This we must know and hold for truth, for many haue but little knowledge, and thereupon are driuen to despaire: yet they must know for their comfort, that if they haue care to get more knowledge, and make conscience to obey that which they know, then they are keepers of the workes of Christ, and shall haue the reward promised.

Secondly, obedience is here described by the obiect or matter thereof, to wit, the workes of Christ: that is, all such workes as Christ hath ordained in his word, and those whereof he is the author by his spirit in his members.

The Vse. Hereby we learne: first, that he that will obey God in Christ Iesus, must not thinke his owne thoughts, speake his owne words, nor do his owne deeds; but he must thinke, speake, & do that which Christ would haue him: Secondly, that no worke is, or can bee acceptable to Christ, but that which is ordained by him. Esay (a) complaineth of them that would teach the feare of God by mens commandements: so that there is no true feare of God, but that which is taught by Gods commaundements: and the like may bee sayd of all other our obedience. This rule ouerthroweth all other religions besides the true religion, as of the Iewes, Turkes, and Papists: For almost all their workes are of mens inuenting, and were neuer ordained by Christ: such are most points in poperie, as saying of masse, going on pilgrimage, fastings, vowing, and praying to saints, &c.

(a) Isa.29.13

Thirdly, whereas he saith, my workes, meaning not one or two, but all his workes; we learne that true obedience consisteth in doing all the workes of Christ: For Christ and the diuel will neuer part stakes, God must either haue all our workes or none: And therefore Dauid saith, I shall not be confounded, because (b) I haue respect vnto all thy commandements. And good king Iosias is commended, For that he turned to the Lord according to (c) all the law of Moses. This point must be learned of al: For many thinke if they doe many good things with (d) Herod, all is well; and for this cause many a man abhors couetousnesse and pride, and yet is a contemner of the Gospell: But true obedience must bee in all things.

(b) Psal.119.6

(c) 2 Kin.23.25

(d) Mar.6.20

Vnto the end. Here is the fourth branch of true obedience, it is constant. That obedience which Christ will reward must not be for a day or a yeare: but from time to time through the whole course of our life to the end of our dayes. And thus wee must iudge of obedience, not by some particular actions, but by the whole tenour of a mans life. Put case a man hath made conscience of all his wayes, through the whole course of his life, and yet in sicknesse by reason of the extremitie thereof is distrasted, and raueth, blaspheming God, and so dieth; What must wee iudge of this man? Surely, we must not censure him by his behaviour in his sicknesse, but consider what hath beene the tenour of his life; if that haue beene vpright, then his obedience was good and shall bee rewarded.

II. Point. The benefits promised and they are two. The first is, power to rule, verse. 27. And he shall rule them with a rod of iron: And as the vessels of a potter shall they bee broken: euen as I receiued of my father. The second is the morning starre, verse. 28. where note by the way, that these words, Euen as I haue receiued of my father, are referred amisse in our English translation, to the giuing of the morning starre, when as they properly belong to the former words in this sence: As I haue receiued power ouer nation of my father, so will I giue to him that ouercommeth power to rule with the rod of Iron, &c. Now come to the benefits.

Verse 27.

First, here is promised by Christ, A power to rule ouer nations. Christs power as he is mediator is very great: and here it is set foorth by three arguments, borrowed from the second Psalme verse. 8. 9. First, by the largenesse of it, it reacheth not to one countrie alone, but to all countries, and to all men, in all nations. Secondly, by the Soueraigntie of it: Christs power is absolute in ruling and

ouer-

ouerruling. And this his Soueraigntie consisteth in two things: First, in making lawes vnto the consciences of men; so as if they be not kept, hee may iustly condemne them: and in ouerruling the wils of all men, conforming them to his wil, will they nill they: which is signified by this, He shall rule rule them with a rod of iron. Secondly, in that hee hath this absolute power in himselfe to saue and to destroy, and therefore is sayd to haue (a) The keyes of heauen and hell. Which is signified in the next words, And as the vessell of a potter shall they be broken. Thirdly, by the fountaine of it, Christ receiueth this power from his father. Indeed as Christ is God he is equall with his father, and hath this power of himselfe; But as he is mediator his power is giuen him of his father, Mat. 28.18.

(a) Reu.3.18.

For the better vnderstanding of this place, two questions must bee handled: First, how farre foorth doth Christ giue this his power vnto men? Answ. Christs Soueraigne and generall power ouer the whole world is not indeed giuen to any creature, nay it is incommunicable, and cannot bee conueyed from the person of Christ to the person of any creature man or Angell: this truth wee must hold of all Christs offices, they are onely in the person of Christ, and cannot passe from him to any other. II. Quest. How then doth Christ say truly, that hee will giue him that ouercommeth, power ouer nations. Answ. Not that his Soueraigne power is actually giuen to the creature; but because the creature being in Christ, hath the fruit & benefit of this power in his saluation. And this power is in them two wayes: First, hereby Christ makes all his seruants (being his mẽbers) partakers of his glorie in heauen, whereas the whole world besides is condemned in hell: and therefore we are sayd to (b) be raised vp together, and made to sit together in the heauenly places in Christ Iesus. And againe he saith, The (c) saints shall iudge the world, not in giuing sentence vpon them; but as witnesses and approuers of Christ his sentence: For the elect shall first receiue the sentence of absolution, and then beeing taken vp into the clouds shall sit with Christ, and there approue of the iust condemnation of all the wicked. Secondly, by this power he enableth those that bee his, in their owne person to ouercome all the enemies of their saluation. His meaning then is this, as if he had sayd, Howsoeuer my Soueraigne power ouer all creatures in my selfe, cannot bee deriued to any other; yet by vertue of this my power, I will exalt them that ouercome, to partake of my glorie: and will giue them power in themselues ouer their sinnes, ouer death, hell, the world, and all the enemies of their saluation.

(b) Eph.2.6.

(c) 1.Cor.6.2.

Here then behold vnto what exceeding dignitie euerie true seruant of God is aduanced, not in himself, but in Christ: He hath rule ouer nations, and victorie ouer all the enemies of his saluation, yea he is made partaker of Christs glory.

Hence we are taught to make conscience of euerie sinne whatsoeuer; for the priuiledge of euerie christian is to haue power to iudge the wicked world: Now as it is a shame for a iudge that sitteth and condemneth a murtherer or a theefe, to be a theefe, or a murtherer himselfe; so it is for any christian to liue in any one sin, seeing hee himselfe must condemne the world of those sinnes. Neither can we thinke that Christ will euer aduance him that liues in sinne, to condemne the same in others, vnlesse hee first reforme it in himselfe. The Vse.

Secondly, the consideration of this priuiledge of a christian, must bee hid in our minds against the time of aduersitie and affliction, and of the pangs of death. For hee that hath kept faith and good conscience all his life, is a prince in Iesus Christ, and shall rule ouer all his enemies. And therefore though now he bee afflicted and wronged by them, yet in Christ he is their iudge, and shall one day condemne them that do him wrong. And as for death, it is subdued in Christ, and shall bee no death vnto him. 1. Corin. 15. *vers.*54.

Againe, the words in the originall are thus, He shall feede and rule the nations, as a shepheard ruleth and feedeth his lambes with his hooke. The Papists vpon the words of Christ to Peter, Iohn. 21. 16, Feed my sheepe, that is, feede and rule my sheepe, would gather Peters supremacie ouer the church in Ποιμανεῖ.

in al the world. But their groſſe abuſe of that place will appeare, by comparing it with this promiſe of Chriſt, to euery one that ouercommeth: for if their collection be good, then hence will follow, that euery Chriſtian man ſhould haue the like ſupremacie, and be a Pope: which how abſurd it is, euery man may iudge. Therfore that place in Ioh. muſt not be vnderſtood of any ſupremacie: for there Chriſt teacheth Peter the faithfull diſcharge of his office and dutie. From this firſt gift of Chriſt the Papiſts gather two things. I. That the ſeuerall ſaints in heauen are patrons of countries & kingdomes, as Saint George for England, Saint Denis for Fraunce, Saint Patricke for Ireland, &c. Secondly, that wee may pray vnto Saints, for the Saints rule the nations, and therefore know all nations; and if they know them, then they muſt bee prayed vnto. But they ſwarue from the meaning of this text: for firſt, it is not ſayd, that the Saints ſhall haue power, one ouer one countrey and another ouer another; but euery Saint hath power ouer al nations: ſecondly, they haue power ouer all nations, not becauſe they rule them actually, but becauſe they haue the fruit and benefit of Chriſts power, whereby they are ruled. And for their ſecond collection: wee muſt by nations vnderſtand not all churches but vnbeleeuers, for the wicked are they that muſt be broken like potters veſſels. Now the faithfull haue not power ouer the churches but ouer infidels; & therfore both their collections are abſurd.

Verſe.28. I will giue him the morning ſtarre. Here is the ſecond benefit promiſed by Chriſt to him that ouercommeth. The morning ſtarre properly ſignifieth that bright ſtar which riſeth a little before the Sun, ſome time of the yeare, which the heathen call Venus. And hereby is ment Chriſt himſelfe, as Reu.22.16, I am the bright morning ſtarre. Chriſt is called a ſtar: Firſt, becauſe he illuminateth all men with the light of vnderſtanding, and his church with the knowledge of the will of his father, and that ſufficiently in all matters that concerne ſaluation. Secondly, to ſhewe that the propheſie vttered by Balaam touching Chriſt whom he calleth (a) the ſtar of Iacob, is now fulfilled, when as Chriſt by his Apoſtles hath plentifully reuealed himſelfe to all nations.

(a) Num.24. 17.

Further he is called a morning ſtarre: for that ſpecial reſemblance which is betweene him and it; for the morning ſtar riſeth not in the beginning or middle of the night, but in the end of the night towards the beginning of the day when the ſunne is about to riſe, and then it ſhineth brighter than all other ſtarres. Euen ſo Chriſt, he came not in the beginning or middle of the darke time vnder the law; but in the laſt age of the world, wherin after his incarnation he did ſhine moſt fully to all nations, ſo as there was no ſuch light of knowledge before his comming as hath bene ſince. This Peter verifieth when he ſaith, (b) We haue a moſt ſure word of the Prophets, to which ye do well that ye take heed, as vnto a light that ſhineth in a darke place, vntill the day dawne, and the day ſtarre ariſe in your hearts. Where the time of the law and prophets is called a time of darkneſſe: and their preaching then, as a candlelight: but the preaching of Chriſt vnder the Goſpell, is as the day ſtarre which ſhineth moſt brightly; he is not called the morning ſtar, becauſe hee ſhineth to al the world in al time as the morning ſtar doth, but becauſe he ſhineth vnto men in the laſt age of the world.

(b) Pet.1. 19.

It is further ſayd, I will giue him it. Where is promiſed fellowſhip and participation with Chriſt, as here is this day-ſtarre. And herein are two benefits comprized: Firſt, perfect illumination, whereby ignorance ſhall be wholly taken away after this life, when as men ſhall know God fully, ſo farre foorth as a creature can know the creator. Secondly, the light of perfect glory, for by fellowſhip with Chriſt wee ſhall bee made to ſhine as the ſtarres, as Daniel (c) ſpeaketh: yea, wee ſhall become (d) Saints in light, as the Apoſtle ſayth.

(c) Dan. 12.3.

(d) Col.1.12.

The Vſe. Whereas Chriſt compares himſelfe to the morning ſtarre: Firſt, wee ſee the groſſe errour of many among vs, who liue in blindneſſe of mind and ignorance, walking in their wicked luſts and pleaſures, without care of keeping faith or good conſcience, and yet perſuade themſelues that they haue part in Chriſt,

and

and shall bee partakers of his light and glorie. But they are deceiued: for all such as liue in blind ignorance, and in sinne, are meere darkenesse, and so can haue no fellowship with Christ, who is that bright morning starre: for what fellowship can bee betweene light and darkenesse? This bright morning starre serueth onely for them that receiue the light thereof, and walke by it: but those that walke in the darkenes of their sinnes haue no benefit by it.

Secondly, seeing Christ is this morning starre, wee must haue care to learne Peters instruction; namely, Labour that this bright Starre may rise and shine in our hearts. This wee shall feele, when we vse those meanes wherby the beames of this starre may shine vpon vs, not onely for the enlightening of our minds, but also for the heating and reuiuing of our frozen and dead hearts. For as the Sunne in the Spring time quickeneth by it warme beames some things that lye dead all Winter: so Christ Iesus this morning starre by the beames of his grace, doth enlighten our minds, and reuiue our dead and frozen hearts. And till such time as wee feele these things wrought in vs, we cannot say, that this morning starre is risen vnto vs, or hath shone into our hearts.

Thirdly, whereas Christ appeareth in the morning, when darkenesse is past, wee are hereby taught to lead our liues in godlinesse, righteousnesse, sobrietie, and in all manner of vpright and godly conuersation, For the night is past, and the day is come, wherein wee may see to walke vprightly, And therefore wee must cast off the vnprofitable workes of darkenesse, as the Apostle exhorteth vs, Rom. 13. 12. And know this, That those who in this light doe not walke accordingly, but delight in sinnes, the workes of darkenesse, shall one day haue their fill: Hee that loueth the darke, (a) for the hiding of his talent, must bee cast for his reward into vtter darkenesse. Let him that hath an eare to heare, heare what the Spirit sayth vnto the Churches. Here is Christs commaundement, the second part of this conclusion: But hereof we haue spoken before. Verse 29.

THE THIRD CHAPTER.

Verſe.1. And write vnto the Angel of the Church that is at Sardis, Theſe things ſaith hee that hath the ſeuen Spirites of God, and the ſeuen Starres, I know thy workes, for thou haſt a name that thou liueſt, but thou art dead.

THeſe words containe the fifft particular Commandement of our Sauiour Chriſt vnto Iohn, wherein he is inioyned to write & ſend a ſpeciall Epiſtle to the Church of God in Sardis: of this commandement we haue ſpoken before. The Epiſtle it ſelf, is contained in the ſixe firſt Verſes, & it hath three parts. A Preface, the matter of the Epiſtle, & the Concluſiō. The Preface in theſe words, Theſe things ſaith he which hath the ſeuen Spirits of God, and the ſeuen Starres. In this Preface, firſt is ſet downe in whoſe name this Epiſtle is written, to procure authoritie vnto it: it is in Chriſts name, whoſe ſoueraignetie is deſcribed by two royalties: that is, by two prerogatiues or priuiledges belonging to him, as he is a ſoueraigne king of his Church: the firſt is, The hauing of the ſeuen ſpirits of God. The ſecond, his hauing of the ſeuen Starres. For the firſt royaltie: In the firſt Chap. verſ. 4. I ſhewed that by ſeuen ſpirits, were meant the holy Ghoſt; from whom proceed all the gifts and graces that any men enioy: and therefore whereas Chriſt is ſaid to haue the ſeuen ſpirits of God: the meaning is, that he hath the holy ghoſt. And this is a royaltie of Chriſt, as he is the King and head of his Church. If it be ſaid, that other ſeruants of God, as Dauid, Peter, and Paul, had the holy Ghoſt Anſw. It is true: but not in the ſame manner with Chriſt, for he hath the holy Ghoſt two wayes: in regard of his diuine nature, & of his manhood: as Chriſt is God, hee is the beginning of the holy Ghoſt: for the holy Ghoſt is a perſon in the Trinitie, proceeding from the ſonne as well as from the Father; in regard of which proceeding, Chriſt is ſayd to ſend the holy Ghoſt, and to doe whatſoeuer hee doth by the holy Ghoſt: as to ouercome death by the eternall ſpirite, and to riſe from death to life.

Secondly, as Chriſt is man he hath the holy Ghoſt: becauſe, the holy Ghoſt powred into him the perfection of all graces and giftes whatſoeuer. And for this cauſe, he is ſaid to be (a) anoynted with the oyle of gladneſſe aboue his fellowes, and to be inriched with the perfection of all graces, and that two wayes: both for number and degrees. For number: with men, ſome haue ſome graces, and ſome men others; but Chriſt hee hath the graces of all men, and all Angels: nay moe graces in number then all men and all Angels haue. And as they are in number perfect, ſo they are perfect in degree: for in meaſure they exceed the graces of all creatures, men or Angels: and therefore the Father is ſaid, to haue giuen the ſpirit vnto his ſon, (b) without meaſure: & thus much is meant by this firſt royaltie of Chriſt. Now the end why Chriſt is ſaid to haue the holy Ghoſt is, to ſhewe that hee is a moſt liuely head of his Church, who is filled with plentie of all ſtore of graces, whereby he is able to inrich his Church, and to reuiue the members thereof who are dead in their ſinnes; and ſuch indeed was the ſpeciall ſtate of this Church.

(a) Pſal. 45.7.

(b) Iohn. 3. 34.

Firſt hence we learne, no man can haue true fellowſhip with the holy Ghoſt but by Chriſt: it is manifeſt, that none can haue fellowſhip with the Father but by Chriſt. And here the ſame is verified touching fellowſhip with the holy ghoſt, eſpecially for the obtaining of thoſe graces that concerne eternall life. This ſerueth for our ſpeciall inſtruction, for among the Papiſts there are many, that haue worthy and excellent gifts of God, as knowledge, memorie, &c. And yet in them be wanting the ſpecial giftes of the ſpirit, as faith which iuſtifieth, & regeneration: for touching aſſurance of theſe in themſelues, they profeſſe themſelues to be ignorant. And whence cōmeth this, but onely from their want of Chriſt: for the Chriſt of the Papiſts, as they teach him, is an idoll Chriſt and therefore wee are not to maruell though wee ſee the moſt learned among them to ſcoffe and The vſe.

mock at our doctrin of assurance of Faith & certainty of electiō. Secondly, we haue many among vs that will say, they looke to be saued by Christ, & to haue their sins pardoned by him, and yet you shall perceiue in them no grace of knowledge or conscience of true obedience. But these things cānot stand together, to wit, loosnes of life, and forgiuenes of sins: & therfore these men deceiue themselues, for if they had Christ, they should haue his spirit, and the graces thereof purging their hearts, for Christ and his spirit are neuer seuered: he that hath the spirit of Christ working in him faith & good conscience, hath an infallible token that Iesus Christ is his. This must admonish vs to labour for true vnion with Christ Iesus our head, to become flesh of his flesh, & bone of his bone: that in him we may haue fellowship with the father and with the holy Ghost, for till we be vnited vnto Christ we shall neuer haue the graces of saluation wrought effectually in our hearts.

The second royaltie of Christ is, that he hath the seuen starres: that is, the seuen Pastors of the seuen Churches of Asia, they are called starres, because in their ministerie they inlighten men in the way that leadeth vnto life. And Christ is said to haue them, because hee is a soueraigne Lord ouer them, & they bee his seruants. For he appointeth that person that shall be his minister among men, hee giueth him gifts meet for his calling, he prescribeth also vnto him his office and duties. But the Pastors of Churches (will some say) are made by the Church? Answ. The right of ordaining Pastors belongs to Christ, as his royaltie: the office of the Church is to testifie, ratifie, & according to the word of God to approoue of them whom Christ maketh and indueth with gifts: and for that cause is the Church said to call and ordaine Ministers.

The end why Christ is said to haue soueraigntie ouer the Ministers, is to strike the heart of the minister of this Church of Sardis with conscience of his former negligence, & to stir him vp to diligence and carefulnes in his place. And indeede, the consideration of Christs soueraigntie ouer them, is an excellent motiue to stir vp all Ministers to bee diligent in their place, and so likewise all Christians. For considering that they are Christs, and the gifts they haue come from him, this must moouе them to make conscience of all good duties, for being Christs they must giue themselues wholy to do the will of Christ, whose they are. If he would haue vs liue, we must be thankefull because he is Lord of life: if our death will glorifie him, we must be content, because wee are his. Thus much of the Preface.

The matter of this Epistle, containeth two parts. A reproofe of a vice, with the remedie thereof. Vers. 1. 2. 3. And a praise or commendation: vers. 4. The reproofe in these words, I know thy works, that is, I know all thy workes: they are all manifest vnto me, and I mislike of them. So must these wordes be vnderstood in this place, as may appeare by the reason of this reproofe in the wordes following, Thou hast a name that thou liuest, but thou art dead. Wherein is set downe the fault of this Church, namely, Hypocrisie: for that they pretended christian religion in outward profession, but yet wanted the life of christianitie, & the power of godlines: for the meaning of the reason is this: Thou hast a name that thou liuest: that is, Churches round about thee iudge and speak of thee, as of a church that is borne anew in Christ, and is guided by his spirit (for by life we must vnderstand spirituall life not corporall) but yet for all this thou art dead: that is, thou wantest true spirituall life by regeneration, and art indeed dead in thy sinnes: this is a great and a sharpe reproofe.

That which is here said of this Church of Sardis, may be truly verified of diuers churches in this age. As first, of the great church of Rome, who are guided by the Pope as by their head. That church hath a name to be aliue, & in their owne pretence it is the only true church of God in the world, but in truth and before God it is dead. Some say, it is as a body full of diseases, and whose throat is cut: but yet the heart panteth, & life remaineth therin. But we may say, it hath no manner of spirituall life, but lyeth starke dead as a carkasse in the graue. The reasons that some alledge for it, are of small moment: first, they say it hath the Sacramēt of baptisme, which is a note of a true Church: and therefore it hath some life? Ans. First, Baptisme is not alwayes a note of a true church: for circumcision, in whose stead

commeth baptiſme, was a ſacrament vſed
(a)Hoſe.1. 9. of the Samaritans when they were (a) no people of God, and ſo no church of God. Againe, Baptiſme without the true preaching of the Goſpel, is no infallible ſigne of a church: it is but a ſeale pulled from the writing, or ſet to a bare paper to no vſe: and further outward Baptiſme without inward Baptiſme, is no note of a church: but ſuch is baptiſme in the church of Rome; it hath not inward baptiſme ioyned vnto it, neither the true preaching of the word; for the doctrine which they teach, is a quite ouerturning of Chriſt and his Goſpel: and therefore outward baptiſme may bee where there is no church. Secondly, I anſwer, that baptiſme in the church of Rome, is a Sacrament not to their ſynagogue, but to the hiddē church of God among them. For God had his Church among them, euen in the midſt of Poperie. There were alwayes ſome among them that renounced their religion, whom God called home vnto himſelf by the meanes which were among them; as the vſe of this Sacrament, the Apoſtles Creed, and of other books of holy Scripture. For as God ſaid to Eliah in Ahabs
(b)1.Kin.19. 18. time, (b) I haue reſerued ſeuen thouſand that neuer bowed the knee to Baal: So may it bee ſayd of many among the Papiſts; God hath there his ſecret Church, who neuer yeelded to the Popes gouernment, and doctrine.

Second reaſon, Antichriſt (ſay they)
(c)2.Theſſ. 2.4. ſitteth in the (c) Temple of God. Now the Temple of God, is Gods Church; & therfore the church of Rome is Gods church? Anſw. He ſitteth there, not as a member thereof, but as an vſurper and deceiuer. For in the Church of Poperie is the hidden church of God: they are therein mingled as a little wheat with much chaffe, and as little gold with much droſſe. So that though the church of God be where Antichriſt ſitteth, yet the Church whereof hee is head, is no church of God: for whether we regard their doctrin, or worſhip of God, there is no meanes to beget or preſerue ſpirituall life in their Church. Further, this which Chriſt ſayth of Sardis, may be ſayd not onely of the Papiſts, but of the churches of the Proteſtants, as of this our Church of ENGLAND, & of the moſt congregations in the great townes thereof, though not for doctrine, yet in regard of meanes & conuerſation: for the body of our people ſeeme to be aliue by their outward profeſſion, but indeed they are dead in reſpect of the power of godlineſſe; for by occaſion of outward peace theſe ſins abound, fulnes of bread, pride both inward in heart, & outward in attyre, alſo cruelty, couetouſnes, & carnal ſecurity; like as it was in Noahs time. Now where theſe ſins raigne, there the power of godlines is wanting: men content theſelues with an outward profeſſion, but the ſpirituall life of grace is not to be ſeen. And yet this doth not preiudice the ſtate of our church, to nullifie it from being the church of God: for God hath his choſen among vs in all places, who liue indeed a ſpirituall life: though the body of our people be dead in ſin, & ſo will continue while peace abideth; the threatnings of the miniſters, will not awake mē out of the ſleepe of ſin; it muſt be the rod of correctiō that muſt put into them the power of religion. Men are like to little children, who beſides admonition, muſt feele the ſmart of the rod to bring them to their dutie.

Further, in this Church of Sardis, whom Chriſt calleth dead, though they had a name to liue. Note the ſtate of the Church of GOD, for this was a true Church of God, who among the reſt was waſhed in the blood of Chriſt. Chap.1.verſ.5. And yet Chriſt ſaith, it is dead in ſinne: that is, in part, not wholly. And therfore a Church that is in a very corrupt ſtate, both in regard of outward conuerſation, and of ſundry erronious opinions, may yet remaine the true Church of Chriſt, if ſo be they erre not in the foundation. Which ſerueth for anſwere to them, that thinke our Church to bee no Church, becauſe it maintaineth not that out-ward order which they thinke ſhould be in it. And therefore though wee muſt preferre Church before Church: yet we muſt not condemne a Church to bee no Church, for ſome corruptions that bee therein. A true body may haue ſome blemiſh, and a true Church ſome wants.

Againe, the Churches of God ſay, this is a Church: yet Chriſt ſaith, they are dead. How can theſe two ſtand? Anſw. The Churches about Sardis iudged this to be aliue, according to the rule of charitie; because of their outward profession of true Religion: for as Infants are not indeede all holy, as experience sheweth, yet till wee see the same made manifest, wee are in charitie to iudge them to bee holy that are borne of faithfull parents: euen so ought the Minister and euery one in GODS Church, to thinke the best of euery one in Gods Church, till God make manifest what hee is. Paul following this rule, calleth whole Churches elect.

But thou art dead. Here are two iudgements, one of neighbour Churches, the other of Christ, and Christs iudgement is preferred. Wee must therefore regard specially the iudgement of Christ, and labor to approue our selues & our conuersations vnto Christ, rather then to men: for let men say what they will of vs, it is Christ that must saue and condemne: this made (d) Paul to say, I passe little to bee iudged of you, or of mans iudgement: why so? for hee that iudgeth mee, is the Lord. (d) 1. Cor. 4. 3. 4.

And indeed, without Christs commendation, the iudgement of men is nothing: for Christ may condemne vs, when men thinke well and speake well of vs: and therefore hee saith, Woe bee vnto you when all men speake well of you, Luke 6. 26.

Verse 2. Be watchfull, and strengthen the things that remaine, that are readie to die: for I haue not found thy works perfect before God.

There be two degrees of hypocrisie: first, when men professe that which is not in their heart at all. The second, when men make profession of more then is in their heart. This second kind of hypocrisie oft befalleth the children of God; and it is that which Christ reproueth in this Church of Sardis, in the former vers. After which reproofe, here he propoundeth a remedie to their vice, and a reason to mooue them to vse the same. The remedie is in the beginning of the verse, where are two duties prescribed: To bee watchfull, and to strengthen or confirme the decayed graces of God in them. For the first, Be watchfull: to bee watchfull here, is a most worthy and excellent dutie, it is not bodily, but spirituall: and it is practised when any man hath a circumspect care and diligent heed in respect of the saluation of his soule. This dutie of watchfulnesse concerneth two things; sinne, and death. Watchfulnes against sinne stands in two duties; First, a man must daily and continually bethinke himselfe before hand of all sinnes and vices into which he may happily fall: & for the doing of this, he must consider in himselfe two things: his Nature and his Calling. Touching his Nature, he must consider, that in him remaines the seed and roote of all sin, and therefore that hee may fall into any sinne whatsoeuer. Againe, a man considering his nature, shall finde himselfe more inclined to some sinnes then to others: and those hee must especially marke and obserue. Secondly, for his Calling: a man must marke the sinnes thereof: for since the fall of man, euery calling hath his especiall sins, wherto men that walke therein are more incident. The Magistrate hath his sins, the Minister his: the Lawyer his, the Physition his, and the Trades-man his. And touching these, a man must consider vnto what vices and abuses men are most subiect, that walke in that calling wherein he liueth, and so shal he haue a foresight of the sinnes that he may fall into. Secondly, after this foresight of sin: he must watch his heart with all diligence, that though it bee tempted and assaulted, yet it bee not tainted with any one sin; as the wise man counselleth, (e) Keepe thy heart with all diligence, that so the fountaine of al thy actions may be kept holy and pure. The second part of this, watchfulnesse respecteth death, or the second comming of Christ. In this, two things must bee practised: first, a man must euery day bethinke him selfe of his ende, and of the comming of Christ, either in generall to all the world, or particularly vnto him by death: and in this consideration he must esteem and iudge of euery day, as of the day of his death, or the day of iudgement. Secondly, he must prepare himselfe against death, & against the day of iudgement, euery day, euē this present day, as though hee should now die, or meete Christ in iudgement; and the next day do the like, and so goe on continually to the day of his death. And for our furtherance in this Christian watch, we must be mindefull of temperance and sobrietie, that we keepe mediocritie in the vse of the creatures of God, and of the things of this life. (e) Pro. 4. 23.

For

For when men plunge themſelues, either in the cares of this world, or in earthly delights, they quite forget both ſinne and death, and the day of Iudgement; and thus wee ſee what Chriſt meaneth by watchfulneſſe.

The vſe. As Chriſt preſcribeth this dutie vnto this Church: ſo are we in the name of Chriſt to bee enioyned the ſame Chriſtian watchfulneſſe, both againſt ſinne and death, and the day of Iudgement. And to mooue vs hereto, conſider theſe reaſons. Firſt wee are watchfull for the preſeruation of the things of this life: as if a towne be in danger of ſacking or burning, there is watch and ward kept continually: and if a mans houſe bee in danger of robbing, hee will ſit vp night and day to ſaue his goods: yea euery man is verie painfull and watchfull to heape vp to himſelfe, the things of this world: Now, what a ſhame is it, that men ſhould bee watchfull for temporall things, and yet haue no care of their ſoule that muſt liue for euer? Againe, want of watchfulneſſe is the forerunner of death, and eternall deſtruction. I. Theſſ. 5. verſ. 3. When men ſay peace and ſafetie, then ſhall come vpon them ſudden deſtruction. When the rich man had enlarged his barnes vpon the encreaſe of his ſubſtance, he promiſed to himſelfe eaſe and ſecuritie: ſaying, [a] Soule, ſoule, take thy reſt, &c. but it was ſayd vnto him, Oh foole, this night ſhal thy ſoule be taken from thee. And the [b] old world knew nothing, till the flood came and deſtroyed them all. Now, if the want of watchfulneſſe bee the forerunner of deſtruction, how great a cauſe haue wee to watch?

The ſecond dutie inioyned, is to confirme the graces of God decaied in them. Strengthen the thinges which remaine, that are readie to die: as if hee ſhould ſay, ſundry be the graces which I haue beſtowed on you: but many are loſt and gone: and thoſe which remain, are about to periſh, vnleſſe you confirme them; therefore ſee nowe that you ſtrengthen and repaire the ſame.

In this dutie, Chriſt teacheth this church and vs an excellent leſſon, that whoſoeuer hath receiued any gift of God, muſt haue care to preſerue it, and to make the ſame gift ſtrong in him by continuall increaſe. If a man haue receiued knowledge, faith, and repentance, or any other gift of grace, he muſt not ſuffer the ſame to lye dead in him, but ſtirre vp, increaſe, and confirme it dayly, that hee may bee a perfect man in Chriſt. For the gifts which men haue are not their owne, but Gods alſo, who looketh to receiue his owne with aduantage. And therefore men like good Stewards muſt ſo vſe the gifts receiued, that they may returne them to God with increaſe. Thus Paul perſwadeth Timothy, [c] ſtirre vp the gift of God that is in thee: for elſe the receiuer is an vnfaithfull ſeruant, and ſo ſhall be rewarded. And for the better performance of this dutie: we muſt often read the word of God, and meditate therein: we muſt heare it often preached; and with due reuerence and preparation receiue the ſacrament. And pray continually: ſtriuing earneſtly againſt the corruptions that bee in vs; and dayly ſtirring vp our heart to all good duties: Thus did Dauid checke the corruption and deadneſſe of his heart: [d] Why art thou ſo caſt downe oh my ſoule? and alſo ſtirre vp the ſame vnto all good duties, ſaying, I haue applyed my heart to fulfill thy ſtatutes alway, euen to the end. Pſ. 119. 112.

(c) 2 Tim. 1. 6.

The vſe. Hereby are reproued, the common ſort of profeſſors & hearers of the word: who ſtand at a ſtay, and goe not forward in grace. This is a great fault, for as we haue receiued grace, ſo we ought to ſtirre vp the ſame, that we may confirme, and increaſe it dayly.

Further Chriſt addeth, Which are about to die, where he anſwereth to a queſtion, that is mooued by ſundry at this day, namely: whether graces that concerne ſaluation, may be vtterly loſt or not? Chriſt anſweareth by a diſtinction, that ſome graces that pertaine to ſaluation, may be loſt quite: and others may be decayed, ſo as they are about to die. For the graces of God that pertaine to ſaluation, be of two ſorts: ſome be abſolutely neceſſarie, ſo as without them a man of yeares cannot be ſaued: and ſuch are faith and regeneration. Others bee leſſe neceſſary, which ſometime goe with faith, but not alwaies; ſuch are, A plentifull feeling of the fauour of God, ioy in the holy Ghoſt, and boldneſſe in prayer; theſe may be loſt wholy for a time in the ſeruants of God. Yea, faith and regeneration themſelues, may decay greeuouſly, and be readie to die, as this text ſaith. Secondly, conſider fayth and regeneration in themſelus, and they may be wholly loſt, for nothing in it ſelfe is vnchangeable, but God. The ſtate of the elect Angels by nature is changeable, for they ſtand by the power of God. Thirdly, theſe graces may periſh and decay finally, vnleſſe thy bee confirmed. Queſtion. Why then doe not the elect finally fall away after their calling? Anſ. Their ſtanding cometh not from the conſtancie of grace or faith, but from the promiſe of God made vnto them, & to their

a Mat. 16. 18 faith, ſo Chriſt ſaith to Peter, a Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke, that is, vpon thy faith which thou haſt profeſſed, will I build my temple, and the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt it: that is, though they may aſſault it, and greeuouſly weaken it, yet they ſhall neuer bee able finally to ouercome it.

The vſe. Seing ſundry graces of God may be loſt, and the moſt neceſſary graces greatly decay, yea of themſelues quite die: wee that haue receiued from God any grace, either of faith or repentance, are hereby taught not to bee preſumptuous, or ouer confident in our ſelus, but with feare and trembling worke out our ſaluation, Phillip. 2.13.

The reaſon to enforce the former remedie is this: For I haue not found thy workes perfect before God: and therefore watch, and confirme the decayed graces of God that be in thee. In this reaſon, Chriſt giueth thē & vs to vnderſtand, that he maketh a ſearch in his church of al the works that men doe in the ſame, that he may accordingly reward them; for not finding, doth preſuppoſe a ſearch. And ſo the ſcripture ſpeaketh of God vſually. Before the old world was deſtroyed, it is ſayd;
b Gen. 6. 5. The b Lord ſaw that the wickednes of man was great vppon the earth, as if he had looked from heauen vpon the earth, and beheld that it was corrupt, ſpeaking after the manner of men, to ſignifie that ſearch which he maketh into mens actions. And ſo he is ſayd to come down from heauen, at the building of Babell, Gen. 11. and before he deſtroyed Sodome and Gomor-
c Gen. 18. 21 rha, c He came downe to ſee whether they had done according to that crie, which was come vp to him: and ſo before the Lord puniſhed the wickednes of the Iſraelits, d He made a ſearch into their waies: and the ſecond Commaundement is this, God will viſite the ſinnes of the father vpon the children: that is, he will make a ſearch, whether the ſinnes of the fathers be among the children, and if they be, he will puniſh them. d Ierem. 2. 22

The vſe. Seing Chriſt makes this ſearch into all mens actions, we are taught in all things to haue care to conforme our ſelus to the will of Chriſt: and to ſet our ſelues to the doing of all good duties, according to his word: If we knew a Magiſtrate would come to make ſearch in our houſe, wee would bee ſure to ſet all thinges in order againſt he came: ſhall we be thus circumſpect to prepare for the comming of an earthly man? & ſhall we not much more prepare our ſelues againſt the ſearch of our Sauiour Chriſt the euerliuing God, from whom nothing can be hid?

I haue not found thy works perfect. Works are perfect two waies; by the law, or by the Goſpell. By the law, whē in our works wee doe all that the law requireth: and thus are no mans workes perfect in this life. By the Goſpel, our works are perfect when they proceed from a beleiuing hart, that hath a care to pleaſe God in all things: & theſe works are perfect not in thēſelus, but in the acceptation of Chriſt. Here by perfect works Chriſt meaneth not the perfection of the law, but of the Goſpell, as if he had ſayd, I haue ſearched into your waies; you doe many workes in ſhew, but they proceed not from ſincere faith, nor from a heart that hath care to pleaſe God in all his commandements, and a full purpoſe not to ſinne againſt him: you haue a ſhew of godlyneſſe, but you want the power thereof.

Here obſerue that Chriſt condemneth this church, not becauſe their works were not outwardlye conformable to the will of God; but becauſe they proceeded not from a beleeuing hart, that had a full purpoſe to forſake all ſinne, and to pleaſe God in all things.

The vſe. Wee therefore muſt take heede of all hypocriſie by the Example of this Church: and labour to bee of Dauids minde: and praye with him; e That our harts may be vpright in the Statutes of the Lord: that wee may ſay with Hezekias; f Behold Lord how I haue walked before thee with an vpright minde: for this is a notable token of grace, and an infallible badge of him that is the child of God.

Before God. Some may ſay, Chriſt here diſtinguiſheth himſelfe from God, and therefore hee is not God. Anſwere. By (God) in this place we muſt vnderſtand not God ſimply, but God the father. For Chriſt here ſpeaketh of himſelfe, not as he is God, but as he is mediator God & man; in which reſpect, euen as he is now glorified, he is inferiour vnto his Father.

Where note that Chriſt being now glorified in heauen, carrieth himſelfe as mediator, whence we gather that we may lawfully, and without preſumption pray vnto Chriſt, without the meanes or interceſſion of Saints or Angels. The church of Rome denie this; and ſay, becauſe Chriſt is now in full glorie in heauen, therefore wee muſt vſe vnto him the mediation of Saints: but Chriſt being now in heauen, marks our workes in particular: and therefore we may without preſumption come vnto him by prayer.

Verſ. 3. Remember therfore how thou haſt receiued and heard, and hold faſt, and repent: If therefore thou wilt not watch, I will come on thee as a thiefe, and thou ſhalt not know what houre I will come vpon thee.

When Chriſt hath reproued them for their ſinne of hypocriſie, and preſcribed them a remedie with a reaſon thereof; he doth as a good Phiſitian & paſtor, ſhew them the way how they may practiſe that remedie. For they might ſay; we are commanded to watch, and to renew our decayed graces, but how ſhall we doe this? Chriſt anſwereth, by doing three things. I. by remebring that which thou haſt receiued by hearing. II. by holding faſt. III. by repenting of thy ſinnes.

For the firſt, Remember therefore, that is, call to mind the doctrine of ſaluation which thou haſt been taught by mine Apoſtles. This remembrance is a moſt excellent meuns to mooue a man to ſubiection to Gods will, to repent, and to practiſe all good graces. When Dauid ſaw the proſperitie of the wicked, his feet had almoſt ſlipt, but his remedie againſt that temptation was his [b] going to Gods ſanctuarie, and there calling to mind the end of thoſe men.

b Pſa.73.17.

Againe, [c] I haue remembred thy name, oh Lord in the night, and haue kept thy law. Peter denied his Maſter, when he forgot his words: but when hee was put in mind thereof by the looke of Chriſt, and the crowing of a Cocke, he then repented, and wept bitterly, Luk. 22. 61. 62. Sinnes committed by men of ignorance, are many and grieuous: and therfore all ſins are called ignorances: Heb. 9 7. but if men wold by faith keepe in mind the word of God, it would bee a notable meanes to keepe them from ſinning.

c Pſa.119.55

Here then we haue a ſoueraigne remedie againſt ſinne: namely, whereſoeuer we are, or whatſoeuer we doe, we muſt call to minde the word of God, and the promiſes of God: and thoſe will bee a lanterne vnto our ſteps, and a light vnto our paths. The Diuell laboureth aboue all things, to bring vs to forget the word, for then he knowes he can eaſily draw vs into any ſin. Queſt. How ſhall we keepe in minde the word and promiſes of God? Anſw. That is a grace of God, and for the attayning vnto it, we muſt firſt labour to haue our hearts affected with the loue of Gods word and promiſes: for a man can neuer keepe in mind that, whereof he hath no liking. Secondly, we muſt labour to belieue the word of God: For faith giues it rooting in our hearts, Coloſ. 2. 7. The cauſe why there is ſo little remembring of that which is taught is, for that it is not mixed with faith in thoſe that heare it. The vſe.

Againe, the thing to be remembred is, How thou haſt receiued and heard: that is, looke what Doctrine thou haſt receiued by hearing, and that remember. Where we ſee Chriſt ioineth receiuing and hearing together. Whence wee may gather, that teaching and receiuing of the word of God by hearing, is the preſcribed generall meanes, whereby God reuealeth his will, counſell, and purpoſe touching the ſaluation of mankind: neither is there any other meanes appointed hereunto in the word of God.

This ſheweth, that their opinion is falſe, who teach that God calleth all the world effectually vnto ſaluation, for how can they bee called, that neuer heard of the word of God? but all in all ages neuer heard of the word of God; Albeit ſince the comming of Chriſt, their ſound hath gone The vſe.

gone foorth into all nations. Secondly, this ſheweth the fondneſſe of their opinion, who defend the Doctrine of vniuerſall grace: that God ſhould giue grace pertaining to ſaluation, vnto euerie man in the world, ſo as he may be ſaued if he will: for the meanes to receiue grace, is the hearing of the word, which all men in all ages neuer had vouchſafed vnto them.

The ſecond dutie, preſcribed, is the holding faſt of this doctrine. To hold faſt here, ſignifieth two things; firſt, to maintaine the doctrine of the Goſpell receiued and taught by the Apoſtles. Secondly, to put the ſame in practiſe in a godly life: of theſe wee haue ſpoken before. cap. 2. 25.

The third dutie is to repent: where by repentance is not meant the beginning of repentance: but the renewing and reſtoring of the ſame, for their hardneſſe and deadneſſe of heart, whereby they did ſlackly and coldly practiſe the good duties which they did profeſſe.

The vſe. Hereby we are taught not to content our ſelues with the begining of repentance, but we muſt renue the ſame continually, & that not for groſſe ſins only, but euen for the wants that bee in vs, as for our dulneſſe and deadneſſe of heart, and for our hypocriſie, and decay in Gods graces.

And becauſe this Church was verie dead and dull of heart; therefore Chriſt addeth a reaſon to mooue them to the practiſe of this dutie: which is, a moſt terrible threatning, in theſe words: If thou wilt not watch, I will come on thee as a theefe, and thou ſhalt not know what houre I will come vpon thee.

Here marke Chriſts order and dealing: hauing preſcribed a remedie for their fault, hee giueth them a direction to practiſe the ſame; and after addeth a moſt terrible threatning to driue them therevnto; as if he ſhould ſay, if thou wilt no watch againſt ſinne, and againſt death, and for that end remember my word, hold faſt the ſame, and repent; then look as a theefe comes vpon a man on a ſuddaine, and ſpoyles his goods and cuts the throate of his children; ſo will I come on thee on a ſuddaine, and power vpon thee my wrath, whereby I will euen cut the throat of thy ſoule, and thou ſhalt haue no means to eſcape my puniſhment.

Here Chriſt threatneth ſuddaine and ſpeedie deſtruction, but yet with condition and limitation of repentance. Now, becauſe we be like this Church (as hath been ſhewed) by reaſon of the long peace which we inioy: we may alſo vſe the ſame reaſon and threatning at this day to ſtirre vp our dead harts. We muſt watch againſt all ſinne, and againſt death: and for this end muſt haue in memorie the word of God, and hold faſt the faith vnto the end, and repent continually of all wants: but if we doe not this, then are the vengeances and eternall puniſhments of God to be powred vpon vs without meaſure, and that ſodenly, when wee cannot preuent them. If a man haue but a ſparke of grace, the conſideration hereof will mooue him to repentance, and to watchfulnes; but if this will not awake a man out of his ſinnes, then nothing remaineth but a fearfull expectation of the wrath of God, which ſhall be vnauoidable, and endure for euer. Indeed if a man had ſome thouſand yeares allotted for the puniſhment of his ſins, there were ſome cauſe why hee might continue in them: but ſeeing this puniſhment is eternall, and when many thouſand yeares are expired, they are as farre from the end of their woe as euer they were; therefore it muſt ſtirre vp all dead and drowzie harts vnto repentance, and cauſe them to ſhake off ſecuritie, ignorance, and coldneſſe in Religion, and to breake off the courſe of euerie ſinne.

Verſ. 4. Notwithſtanding thou haſt a few names yet in Sardie, which haue not defiled their garments, and they ſhall walke with mee in white; for they are worthy.

Heere beginneth the ſecond part of the matter of this Epiſtle, namely the praiſe and commendation of ſome part of this Church. The words doe thus depend vppon thoſe which went before; wheras Chriſt had ſayd, that this Church was dead in ſinne, and had onely a name to liue; ſome man might aske, how it could bee a true Church. To this Chriſt anſwereth in the beginning of this verſe, that though the greateſt part in this Church were dead in their ſinnes, yet ſome few there were among them that were aliue in Chriſt, and did teſtifie the ſame the ſame by true and ſincere obedience.

In this coherence we may obſerue two inſtructions. 1. that a particular congregation on earth is made a Church of God, and ſo called in regard of Gods elect therein, who doe truely beleeue. For the priuiledges of a Church belong vnto particular congregations, onely by reaſon of the faith of the elect among them. The Catholick church is the whole Company of the elect truly beleeuing in Chriſt, & particular congregations are members of it ſo farre forth as they doe truely beleeue; the reſt that doe not truely beleeue are not members of the Church before God, but only in the iudgement of men: like vnto ſuperfluous humors which are in the bodie, but no parts thereof. This confuteth the Doctrine of the Church of Rome, who teach that wicked men that are reiected in Gods decree, may yet bee true members of the Church of God.

Secondly, in this coherence Chriſt intimateth vnto vs a diſtinction betweene man and man in this Church, for all that were in this Church were men called, profeſſing Chriſt and his Goſpell: and yet of them, ſome were dead in their ſinnes, and others were aliue in Chriſt. Touching this diſtinction of men, wee muſt ſearch the cauſe thereof. It muſt not be aſcribed to any power or will in man but to the good pleaſure of God, as the ſcripture teacheth; for when the bodie of the Iſraelites had giuen themſelues to Idolatrie, there were yet a ſeuen thouſand that neuer bowed the knee to Baall: what was the cauſe why they did not liue like to the other Iſraelites? Surely nothing in the will of man, (though the Idolatrie of the other, was to bee aſcribed to themſelues) but the text is cleare, it was the good pleaſure of God, who had preſerued and kept them.

a Rom. 11. 4.

The vſe. By this wee ſee, how erronious and falſe the Diuinitie of ſome Proteſtants is, which aſcribe the cauſe of this diſtinction betweene man and man, to the libertie of mans will being renewed by grace: ſaying, That GOD giues to euerye man ſauing grace, by vertue whereof, hee maye repent and beleeue if hee will: but yet becauſe the will of man doth ſtill remaine ſinfull, hence it commeth, that hee hath libertie, to obey, or not to obey. And therefore the cauſe why ſome men lye dead in ſinne is, becauſe they ſet their will to refuſe the grace of GOD; and the cauſe why ſome men liue in Chriſt is, becauſe they incline their will to embrace the grace of GOD. But this Doctrine doth greatly diminiſh the grace of GOD, in that it maketh the acceptance thereof to lye and depend on the pleaſure and will of man: when as the power of almighty GOD ioyned with his will, is the true cauſe thereof, leauing ſome to themſelues who doe fall, and enabling others to ſtand by his grace.

Nowe followe the wordes of this commendation. Notwithſtanding thou haſt a fewe names yet in Sardis; that is, There bee yet in this Church a fewe perſons knowne to mee by their names (for by Names, wee muſt vnderſtand perſons named) which haue not defiled their garments. Heere (to omit many expoſitions) is an alluſion to the Ceremoniall law, wherein GOD ſet downe a diſtinction betweene thinges cleane and vncleane, not in themſelues, but by his appointment: and among the Iewes, if any man had but touched an vncleane thinge with his hand, or with his garment, thereby hee was defiled, and his garment defiled legally; and ſo he or his garment were reputed vncleane: wherevpon they had a ſpeciall care not to touch the thinges that were defiled, no not with their garments. Now this ſignified another thing vnto them: namely, That they ought to abſtaine, not onely from the outward ſinnes of the morall Lawe, but euen from all occaſions, intentions, ſhewes, and appearances of euill. And in this place, this is meant hereby: that ſome in this Church of Sardis, had ſo farre made conſcience of ſinne, that they would not meddle with the verie occaſions and appearances of euill.

Hereby wee ſee, that the ſeruants of GOD are but fewe in number: for the bodie of this people were dead in ſinne, and a fewe onely in this great place liued in Chriſt; ſo Chriſt ſayth to his Diſciples, The flocke to whome the father b will giue the Kingdome of Heauen, is but a little flocke. The Prophet

[a] Iſay. 6.9. Iſay is ſent, [a] To harden the hearts of the bodie of the people for their iniquities: and [b] the tenth part onely muſt bee ſaued: and in the Goſpell it is ſayd, The way to hell is broad, and many there be that walke therein: but the waye to heauen is ſtraight, and fewe there bee that enter into it.

[b] Verſ. 13.

[c] Mat. 7. 13. 14.

The vſe. Hereby then wee are taught not to follow the example of the multitude, but of the fewer and better ſort. It is a foule ſinne that keeps many from religion, and brings them to deſtruction, when they will liue after the manner of the world, and as their Forefathers haue done. This is a falſe rule, and a dangerous courſe.

Thou haſt a few names, That is, perſons whoſe names I know & haue recorded. They are called names, becauſe Chriſt obſerues and knowes them by their names. Where note, that thoſe that are the true ſeruants of God, are particularly knowne vnto Chriſt [f] The haires of your head are numbred (ſayth Chriſt to his Diſciples) much more were their names knowne. Againe, hee biddeth them reioyce that their names [g] were written in heauen. And Chriſt the good Sheepheard knowes his ſheepe, and cals them by their names. Ioh. 10. 3.

[g] Luk. 10. 2.

This is a matter of endleſſe comfort vnto the people of GOD: for what can cauſe a man more to reioyce, than to knowe that his name particularly is knowne to the King of Kings, and that accordingly he hath ſpeciall regard vnto him? when the Lord would comfort Moſes, and put courage into him in doing the duties of his calling; hee telleth him, That hee was knowne vnto him by [h] name. Yea, this is the foundation of mans ſaluation: [i] The Lord knoweth who are his.

[h] Exod. 33. 12, 13, 14, ad 17.

[i] 2. Tim. 2. 19

Which haue not defiled their garments: Heere they are commended for vprightneſſe and ſincerities of life and conuerſation, in that they kept themſelues from the verie ſhewes and appearance of euill; when as the reſt of this Church was dead in ſinne.

In their example Chriſt preſcribeth vnto vs a patterne of true pietie, howe wee ought to carry our ſelues in the Church of GOD on earth: wee muſt not content our ſelues with a bare profeſſion of Religion, and keepe our ſelues from groſſe ſinnes only, but abſtain from the verie ſhewes of euill. Yea more particularly, here are three things taught vs touching ſinne. Firſt, that wee ought to make conſcience of euerie ſinne in our owne perſon. Secondly, that wee ought to keepe our ſelues from the contagion of ſinne in others, either by giuing conſent vnto them, or furthering & allowing them any way therein. Thirdly, that wee ought to abſtaine from the verie occaſions, and ſhewes, and appearances of ſinnes, ſo Paul teacheth vs [k] to abſtaine from all appearance of euill. Epheſ. 5. 3, Hee will not haue ſundrie ſinnes, as fornication, vncleanneſſe, &c. ſo much as once named, thereby to giue the leaſt approbation vnto them. We muſt therefore looke on this example, lay it to our hearts, and conforme our liues vnto it: ſo ſhall wee bee good ſeruants of GOD, and haue the ſame commendation with theſe few: for true Religion ſtands not in knowledge, but in obedience, and this is true obedience to make conſcience of euerie ſinne in our owne perſons; to take heed of the infection of ſinne in others: and to abſtayne from the appearance of euill. A happie Church ſhould we haue, if theſe thinges were practiſed: but this is the ſhame and reproach of our profeſſion, that wee haue no care of true obedience in our ſelues and others, whereby we ſhould glorifie God, and grace our holy Religion.

[k] 1. Theſ. 5. 22.

The church of Rome hence gather, that a man after baptiſme, may liue without mortall ſinne. For theſe few perſons in this Church in their baptiſme, put on Chriſt, and after kept themſelues from all occaſions of ſinnes, ſo as they had not committed any mortall ſinne. But their collection is vnſound; for firſt, though they had to this time abſtained from all mortall ſinne, yet how can they prooue that they ſinned not afterward? Secondly, they are ſayd not to haue defiled their garments, not for that they had not committed any ſinne, but becauſe they endeauoured to keepe themſelues from the appearance of all ſinne: and ſo muſt the obedience which is aſcribed to Gods children in ſcripture be vnderſtood: namely, of their ſincere purpoſe and endeauor to obey, & ſo among vs, thoſe that haue a ſetled purpoſe & reſolution to make conſcience of euerie ſin, and in all things to doe the will of God, they are reputed for keepers of the law. For GOD in his children accepts the will for the deed. And they ſhall walke with mee in white. After the commendation of theſe fewe Chriſt addeth a promiſe, of liuing with him in glorie. For ſo white garments haue alwayes beene vſed to ſignifie ioy, happineſſe, life and glorie. Eccleſiaſt. 9. 8. At all times let thy garments bee white, that is, take the delight and pleaſure in vſing the creatures of God; So that heere theſe fewe haue a promiſe to bee freed from all want, and to liue with Chriſt in all glorie, ioy, and pleaſure.

This benefite, hath beene in effect further vrged in the former Chapter: heere onely I will note one Doctrine; namely, That they which liue in the world amonge the wicked, and doe not communicate with their ſinnes, ſhall not partake with them in their puniſhments; for the bodie of this Church muſt haue Chriſt to come amongeſt them as a Theefe, but the godly muſt walke with Chriſt in white, in glorie. [a] Lot was freed from the deſtruction of the Sodomites, becauſe hee partaked not with them in their ſinnes: and amonge the Iſraelites, [b] Thoſe that mourned for the ſinnes of the people, are marked in the fore-head, that when Iudgements came vppon the wicked, they might bee ſhared. This point muſt bee remembred, for by reaſon of longe peace and proſperitie among vs many ſinnes abound, as Ignorance, Atheiſme, contempt of Religion, and prophaning of the Lordes Sabbath, with innumerable ſinnes of the ſecond table. All which call for Iudgements from heauen, and no doubt they will bee puniſhed, partly in this life, and partly in the life to come, vnleſſe our people doe repent. Thoſe therefore that would not partake of the common Iudgements that are to come, muſt nowe beware that they communicate not with the common ſinnes that doe abounde, and ſee that they keepe faith and good conſcience, hauing their righteous and zealous hearts grieued, for the abhominations among which they liue.

b Ezek. 9. 6.

After the promiſe, is adioyned the reaſon thereof, For they are worthy. Hence the Church of Roome doth conclude, That a man by his workes may merite heauen, becauſe they bee worthie of reward. A moſt blaſphemous concluſion, and a manifeſt abuſe of the word of GOD. Gods children indeede are worthie life euerlaſting; but not by the merite of their works: for then they ſhould bee done according to the rigour of the Lawe: but for the worthyneſſe of their perſon, when as they ſtand righteous before GOD in Chriſt; for when GOD will ſaue any man, he giues Chriſt vnto that man truely and really; ſo as hee may ſaye, Chriſt is mine. And with Chriſt GOD giues his ſpirite which worketh in his heart true ſauing fayth, whereby hee doth receiue Chriſt: and ſo Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe belonges vnto that man reallye, and by vertue thereof hee is worthie life euerlaſting; and this is the worthyneſſe which Chriſt meaneth in this place, and not any worthyneſſe of their workes: ſo that this doth helpe them nothing at all, and yet it is the moſt probable place of Scripture, to prooue and iuſtifie the Doctrine of mans merits.

Two kinds of worthyneſſe.

Verſ. 5. Hee that ouercommeth ſhall be cloathed in white array, and I will not put out his name out of the Booke of life; but I will confeſſe his name before my Father, and before his Angels.

Verſ. 6. Let him that hath an eare, heare what the ſpirite ſayth vnto the Churches.

Heere is the concluſion of this Epiſtle: and it containeth two partes: a promiſe, and a commaundement. The promiſe in the fift verſe, and the commaundement in the ſixt. In the promiſe note two thinges: firſt, the parties to whome it is made, To him that ouercommeth, whereof we haue ſpoken [c] before. Secondly, the things promiſed: to wit, glorie and eternall happineſſe, which is expreſſed three wayes. Firſt thus: hee ſhall bee cloathed in white array: that is, hee ſhall haue euerlaſting

life and happineſſe, ſo much is ſignified by white rayment as wee haue alreadie ſhewed.

The vſe. Hence the Church of Rome conclude, that a man may doe good workes reſpecting a reward. Anſwere. In ſome ſort it is true; for ſo it is recorded of Moſes, Hebr. 11. 26. Hee had reſpect to the recompence of reward. But yet the recompence of reward, muſt not bee the principall end of our good works: for cheefely wee muſt thereby intend to teſtifie our faith, and our obedience vnto God, and with that wee may haue reſpect to euerlaſting life.

The ſecond thing promiſed; And I will not put out his name out of the booke of life. For the vnderſtanding of this, two queſtions muſt bee ſcanned: Firſt what this booke of life is; Secondly, whether a man may bee blotted out of this Booke. For the firſt: this booke of life is nothing elſe, but Gods predeſtination or eternall decree of Election, whereby he hath choſen ſome men vnto ſaluation vpon his good pleaſure. And this is called a Booke, becauſe it is like vnto a Booke. For as the Generall in a Campe, hath the names of all his ſouldiours that fight vnder him, in a Booke; and as the Magiſtrate of a Towne hath the name of euerie free man and Deniſon inrowled: ſo GOD in the booke of his Election, hath the names of all that ſhalbe ſaued.

For the ſecond Queſtion. A man may bee written in the Booke of life two wayes: either truely before God, or in the iudgement of men onely. Thoſe whoſe names are truely before GOD written in this booke, cannot be blotted out; For Gods counſell touching the eternall ſtate of euerie man, is vnchangable. This the goulden Chayne of Gods decree, doth plainely ſhew: For a Rom 8.30. whome hee hath predeſtinate, them he hath called; and whome hee called, them alſo hee iuſtified; and whome hee iuſtified, them hee alſo glorified. Others there be that haue their names written in this Booke, only in the iudgement of men: and thus are all men written in the Booke of life, that profeſſe the Goſpell of Chriſt in his Church: for ſo charitie bindes vs to iudge of them: And theſe may haue their names blotted out. In this ſence doth the Scripture often ſpeake: as when the Prophet wiſheth, b That God would blot his enemies out of b Pſa. 69.28. the Booke of life (meaning Iudas principally) his meaning is, that it might bee made manifeſt, his name was neuer written therein. This then is the meaning of this promiſe: that they who doe auoid the occaſions of ſin, and haue care to keepe faith and good conſcience vnto the end, haue their names written in the booke of life, and they ſhall neuer bee blotted out.

Hence I gather two things. Firſt, that the number of the elect, in reſpect of God is certaine: for the names of thoſe which are to bee ſaued, bee as it were written in a booke, and being once written in, they remayne there for euer. Some doe teach, that all may bee ſaued, if they will: but this is a meere fancie of man: for what ſhould there need any booke of life, if that were ſo? Secondly, hence I gather, that this number can neither increaſe, nor be diminiſhed, let men doe what they can: If they had been of vs they would haue continued with vs. 1. Ioh. 2. 19. All that thou haſt giuen me haue I kept, and none of them is loſt. Ioh. 17. 12.

Whereas a man may bee written in The vſe. the booke of life, to wit, in the iudgement of men, and yet bee blotted out: hereby wee are to bee admoniſhed, to looke vnto our ſelues, and to make conſcience of euerie ſinne, and to auoide and ſhunne the verie occaſions thereof. For ſo long as wee profeſſe the Goſpell, and obey the ſame, our names bee in the booke of life: but when wee commit any ſinne, we doe as much as in vs lyeth make a penne, and reach it vp to heauen to blot our names out of that booke: and they, that keepe a courſe in ſinning, doe plainely ſhewe that they were neuer truely written therein.

Secondly, conſidering that the number of the elect is certaine, it muſt bee a motiue to cauſe vs to labour for ſome aſſurance of election, that wee maye truely ſay, wee haue our names written in Gods booke. But here ſome bad perſon will ſaye, ſeeing the number of the Elect is vnchangeable, I will liue as I liſt; for if my name bee in the the booke of GOD, it ſhall neuer bee blotted out; and if it bee not in, it can neuer be added. Anſ. Theſe men deceiue their owne ſoules: for they that haue their names written in the booke of life, ſhall liue as theſe few did in this Church of Sardis, in true faith and holy obedience. For he that is ordained to glorification, is ordained to iuſtification and ſanctification: and it is impoſſible for him that ſhall be ſaued, to liue alway in ſin, and therefore theſe men muſt rather labour to repent and beleeue, and to get ſome ſignes of their Election, that they may know that their names are written in the booke of life.

The third benefite is this: I will confeſſe his name before my Father, and before his Angels. That is, in the day of iudgement I will acknowledge and profeſſe him to be mine: one of mine Elect, that keepeth faith and good conſcience vnto the end. I will take him from the companie of the wicked world, and ſet him on my right hand, and aduance him to glory, pronouncing vpon him the bleſſed voyce of abſolution: Come, Thou bleſſed of my father. Mat. 25.34. The end why this benefit is thus propounded, is to draw this church to profeſſe the name of Chriſt in this world: for if they would profeſſe Chriſt before men, hee will acknowledge them for his owne at the laſt day.

The vſe. This ſame reaſon here propounded, muſt induce vs to make a true confeſſion of Chriſt againſt the world, & all Chriſts enemies: which to doe is a very hard matter, and man of himſelf cannot ſtand out; but yet the conſideration of this, that Chriſt will confeſſe him at the laſt day, will be a notable motiue and means to inable him thereto. If an earthly Prince ſhould come to a man among a great company and call him by his name, ſpeaking kindly vnto him, hee would eſteeme it a great honour vnto him; and for that he would not ſticke to die in the Princes cauſe. Oh then, what honour is this, that Chriſt Ieſus will in the laſt day vouchſafe to all thoſe that in this life doe ſincerely confeſſe him, and ouercome! he will confeſſe them to bee his, and receiue them to his owne glorie. But on the contrary, thoſe that will not confeſſe him heere, but diſgrace him; either by falſe doctrine or profaneſſe of life, will Chriſt at the day of iudgement vtterly diſgrace, by denying them to be his, and there pronounce vpon them the fearefull ſentence of condemnation, Goe ye curſed, &c. Which if we would then eſcape, and alſo procure vnto vs the ioyfull voyce of abſolution: we muſt here labour to hold the truth of Chriſts doctrine, & alſo keep a good conſcience vnto the end. But if we only profeſſe him in iudgement, and not in the practiſe of a holy life, ſurely Chriſt will profeſſe that he knows vs not, and then giue vs our portion with the diuell and his angels.

The commandement followeth: verſ. 6. Let him, &c: of which wee haue ſpoken.

Verſe 7. And vnto the Angell of the Church which is of Philadelphia, write: Theſe things ſaith he, which is holy and true; which hath the key of Dauid, which openeth and no man ſhutteth, and ſhutteth and no man openeth.

Here beginneth the ſixt particular Epiſtle of our Sauiour Chriſt, from this verſe, to the 14. And before it (as to the reſt) is prefixed a ſpeciall Commandement vnto Iohn, whereby he is enioyned to write this Epiſtle vnto the Church of Philadelphia; the end of which commandement, is to warrant the calling of Iohn to write this Epiſtle: but of this we haue ſpoken before.

The Epiſtle it ſelfe containeth three parts: a Preface; the matter of the Epiſtle; and the Concluſion. The Preface, in this verſe: Theſe things ſaith hee &c. wherein is ſet downe, in whoſe name this Epiſtle is ſent; namely, in Chriſts: where (as in the former Epiſtles) he is excellently deſcribed, for the winning of more credite vnto this Epiſtle. And that, firſt, by his properties: Holyneſſe and truth. Secondly, by his kingly office, in the words following.

For his properties. Firſt, Chriſt is ſayd, to be holy. Queſt. How can Chriſt be ſaid to be holy as he is man, conſidering hee deſcended from Adam, who conueyed his ſinne and the guilt thereof, to all his poſteritie? The common anſwere is this; That indeed, Chriſt deſcended from Adam, as hee is man: but his ſubſtance was ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt in the wombe of the Virgin, and thereby hee was freed from Adams sinne. This answere is true, but not sufficient: for men besides the corruption originall, take from Adam the guiltinesse of that sinne which Adam committed. Now sanctification taketh away the corruption of sin, but not the guilt thereof, therefore a more full answere is this: That all which come of Adam by naturall generation, doe receiue by that order which God set in nature at the creation, saying, increase & multiply, both the nature of Adam and the sin & guilt thereof. But God for the preuenting of this in the Incarnation of Christ, ordained that Christ should not come of Adam by naturall generation, but by a miraculous Conception of the holy Ghost: whereby hee tooke the nature of man with the infirmities thereof, without the sinne of mans nature, or the the guiltinesse thereof. And thus is Christ free from sinne as he is man.

Further, Christ is holy two wayes. In himselfe; and in regard of his Church. In himselfe, hee is holy sundry wayes: first, in regard of his Godhead, for his diuine nature is holinesse it selfe. Secondly, as hee is man; for his man-hood was not only freed from all manner of sinne, by reason of his miraculous conception, but it was also inriched and filled with holinesse, and that in greater measure than all men and Angels, for he receiued the gifts of the holy Ghost without measure. And againe, as he is man; Christ is holy in regard of his obedience and actions, for liuing on earth he did actually as our suertie fulfill the Law for vs. Secondly, Christ is holy in regard of his Church. First, because hee is the authour of that holynesse, which is in euery member of his Church. Yea, hee is holy in regard of men in a further respect; namely, as the roote of all mans holinesse, as he is Mediator. For looke as from Adam is actually conueyed originall sinne to euery one of his posteritie that commeth by naturall generation: so from Christ is righteousnesse and holinesse conueyed to all that beleeue in him: and for this cause hee is called (a) our righteousnesse and sanctification: and in this sence especially is Christ said to be holy in this place.

a 1. Cor. 1. 31

The vse. Whereas Christ is said to bee holy not only in himselfe but for vs: here we must marke what is the principall thing in Christian Religion; namely, to haue care to bee ingraffed into Christ, that from him wee may receiue grace to become new creatures: and feele in vs his power to kill our corruptions, and dayly to renew his owne Image in vs, in righteousnesse and true holinesse; and that as truely, as wee feele in vs Adams corruption. It is not sufficient for vs to plead, that Christ will bee our Sauiour, and will free vs from all sinnes: but wee must labour to haue Christ conuay holinesse into vs, and that as sensibly as wee see the roote conuay sappe into the branches: and this holinesse wee must make to appeare in our liues, as the branches by their fruit, and leaues doe shew they receiue sappe from the roote.

Secondly, here note, Christ propounds himselfe vnto vs and to all Churches, as a notable patterne to be followed; giuing vs to vnderstand, that all that beleeue in him and looke to be saued by him, must bee holy as hee is holy: making conscience of euery euill way, for Christ is holy to make vs holy. Let vs therefore behold Christ, and see wherein hee expresseth himselfe to be holy; and therein let vs follow him. So Iohn saith: Hee that hath this hope, purifyeth himselfe as hee is holy: that is, vseth all good meanes to conforme himselfe to Christs holinesse.

Thirdly, hereby wee learne, that the common title giuen to the Pope, whereby hee is called (Holinesse) is a blasphemous title: for to be holy, is here made a propertie of Christ. And yet more is giuen to the Pope, than to Christ in this place, for he is called Holinesse, which is a title of God alone.

The second propertie, whereby Christ is described, is Truth: Christ is sayd to bee true, in three regards: First, because hee is without all error or ignorance, knowing euery thing as it is. Truth is in Christ properly, and in the creatures onely by meanes of him. Secondly, because whatsoeuer hee willeth and decreeth, he doth it seriously, without fraude, deceit, change or contradiction, as the whole tenure of Scriptures doe shewe, wherein euery part is sutable and agreeable to another; because hee maketh good good euery promiſe made in his word, for in him all the promiſes of God are yea, and Amen. 2.Cor.1,20.

Tous Whereas Chriſt is ſayd to bee true, yea, Truth it ſelfe: Firſt, Wee learne a full difference betweene him, and all falſe wicked ſpirites, for they are ſpirites of error and falſhood, for the diuell is the father of lyes, and the author thereof.

Againe, whereas Chriſt is true in all his wayes, we ought without all doubting to beleeue his word, and all the promiſes made therein, that concerne our ſaluation. If Chriſt could erre or lye, and men bee deceiued by him, then they might iuſtly doubt of the truth of his word: but ſeeing hee is true in all his promiſes, wee muſt beleeue in him: and in all our diſtreſſes either of bodie or mind, depend vpon him: for he hath made a promiſe to helpe, and he will neuer faile them that reſt on him.

Thirdly, in this Propertie, hee propounds himſelfe an example, to be followed of his Church and of vs, that as Chriſt is ſerious in his decrees, and conſtant in his promiſes; ſo muſt wee purpoſe euery good thing ſeriouſly, and alſo make good whatſoeuer good thing wee promiſe. For, Lyers muſt bee deſtroyed. Pſalm.5. Verſ.6. They that loue, or make Lyes, muſt neuer come into Heauen but be ſhut out thence, and caſt into the burning Lake of fire and brimſtone. Reuel. 22.15. But it is a note of a man, that is a good member of Gods Church in this world, and that ſhall bee inheritour of Chriſts Kingdome in Heauen, to ſpeake the trueth from his heart. Pſal. 15. Verſe 22. And Lying is a note of the childe of the diuell. *Ioh.*8.44.

Secondly, Chriſt is deſcribed, by his kingly office; Which hath the key of Dauid, which openeth and no man ſhutteth, and ſhutteth and no man openeth. Where firſt, let vs ſee the meaning of the words: For which purpoſe wee muſt haue recourſe to Eſay. 22. verſ. 22: whence theſe wordes are borrowed, being there ſayd of Eliachim. The circumſtances of that Text, will eaſily ſhew the meaning of the wordes in this place: Shebna, who had been an ancient Steward to many of the Kings of Iſrael, was Treaſurer alſo vnto King Hezekias: And becauſe hee was an hinderer of Reformation intended by Hezekias, the Lord threatned to caſt him out of his office: and further, the Lord ſignifieth that Eliachim ſhall come in his roome, and haue the ſame office; now to expreſſe this thing, the Lord ſayth: The Key of the houſe of Dauid ſhall bee layd vpon his ſhoulders: That is, Eliachim ſhall bee made a Steward of the houſe of Dauid euen of the Kingdome of Dauid, whereof Hezekias was Gouernour: (for ſo the Houſe of Iuda, and the Houſe of Iſrael, are often put for the whole Kingdome of Iuda and Iſrael.) And the giuing of a Key was an ancient token of placing and inueſting men in chiefe rule and authoritie; ſo that the meaning of this place, is this: that God hath giuen vnto Chriſt ſouereigne power, and authoritie of gouerning his Church. Queſt. But why is Chriſt ſayd to haue the Key of Dauid, for Dauids kingdom was a temporall kingdome, but Chriſts Kingdome is not of this world, Iohn. 18. 36. And yet it is ſaid, The Lord God ſhall giue vnto him the Throne of his father Dauid: and hee ſhall raigne ouer the houſe of Iacob. Luk. 1. 32. 33. Anſw. Chriſt may bee ſayd to haue the Keyes of Dauid, two wayes. Firſt, Properly; for when hee was borne of the bleſſed Virgin Marie, he was borne King of the Iewes, by right deſcent from his father Dauid, as his Genealogie plainely ſheweth, *Luk.*3. And alſo the queſtion of the wiſe men at Ieruſalem, ſaying: Where is the king of the Iewes that is borne? Mat. 2.2. And therefore when the Publicans asked tribute of him, he pleaded the priuiledge of a Kings ſonne: albeit, to auoyd offence, he was content to yeeld of his right, & to pay tribute; Thereby ſhewing, that he had right to the Kingdome of Iſrael, though he would not take it vpon him & therefore came in ſuch a time when the Kingdome was taken of the Romane Emperour. Secondly, he may bee ſayd to haue the key of Dauids kingdome, Tipically; for Dauids kingdome, was a figure of Chriſts kingdome; and Dauid himſelfe a type of Chriſt: as it is moſt excellently dyſciphered in the Prophets: *Ier.*23.5.6. & *Hoſea.*3.5. where Chriſt is plainly called Dauid, by the name of him that was his type, ſigne, & figure. Queſt. Why were not as well the Kingdomes of Nebuchadnezzar and Pharaoh, types of Christs kingdome, as Dauids? Answ. Because Dauids kingdome, was a kingdom of light and pietie; but theirs were kingdomes of sinne and iniquitie. And he is said, to haue the key of Dauids kingdom, because his kingdome and the righteousnesse thereof, was figured by the pietie in Dauids kingdome. And this kinde of speaking is iustifiable by Gods word. So Mat. 2. 23. Christ is called a Nazarite: which place hath relation to that which is said properly of Sāpson (c) who was a most excellent figure of Christ, and did most notably represent him in his death, wherein hee killed more than in his life. Now Christ is called an Nazarite, not because he obserued their rites, and orders, for that he did not: he dranke wine, so did not the Nazarites: but because he was the truth, and substance of that order; for in him was fully accomplished that holinesse, which was figured by that order; for he was perfectly seuered from all sinne and pollution. And so here, he is said to haue the key of Dauid, because hee had the soueraignetie which was figured by Dauids Kingdome.

Nebu-

c Iudg. 13.

Which shutteth and no man openeth, and openeth and no man shutteth. Here Christs kingdome is compared to a house, which can bee opened and shut, by none but Christ; whereby is signified, that none hath power aboue Christ in his Kingdome, and that his power therein, is soueraigne and absolute. So that hereby is meant, that Christ Iesus sitting in heauen, hath soueraigne power and authoritie ouer the whole Church of God, to gouerne the same. That we may the better vnderstand this soueraigne power of Christ, we must know, it hath three parts. I. To prescribe. II. To iudge. III. To saue; or destroy. In Prescribing, Christ hath absolute power, and that in sundry things: as first, in prescribing doctrines of Faith, and Religion vnto his Church, to bee beleeued and obeyed, and that on paine of damnation. This power he puts in execution, when in the bookes of the old and new Testament, hee prescribeth the doctrine of the Law & the Gospel, to be obeyed and beleeued. And none but he can make an Article of Faith, or a law to binde the conscience: and therefore Paul saith, Whosoeuer shal teach any other Doctrine, then that which ye haue receiued of vs, let him be accursed Gal. 1. 8. Secondly, for regiment; he hath absolute power to prescribe how he will haue his Church gouerned, and by whom: and therefore Moses, when he was to make the Tabernacle, (d) did all things according to the patterne that the Lord gaue vnto him. So Dauid gaue to Salomon patternes of all things that were in him, by the spirit touching the building of the house of God, 1. Chron. 28. 12. Thirdly, hee hath absolute power to appoint the time of keeping his Sabbath: for as the ordaining of a Sabbath belongs to Christ, so doeth the changing thereof; hee that prescribeth worship must prescribe the ordinary set time thereunto, which is to continue to the end. And therfore it is but an opinion of men, to hold that the church may make two, or moe Sabbath dayes in a week, if they will. Fourthly, In prescribing the Sacramēts; and therefore (e) Paul saith, What I haue receiued of the Lord, that deliuer I vnto you; speaking of the Lords Supper. For hee that giues grace, must also appoint the signes and seales of grace.

d Exod. 32. 42. 43. Heb. 8. 5.

e 1. Cor. 11. 23.

The second part of Christs soueraigne power, is power of Iudgement: which is a soueraigne power to determine on his owne wil, without the consent of others, or submission to men or Angels. And in determining, Christ hath two priuiledges. First, to expound scripture; the absolute power of expounding the Law, belongeth to the Law-giuer; and his exposition is Authenticall. Secondly, to determine of all Questions, and Controuersies in Scripture. And therefore it is a wicked opinion of the church of Rome which hold, that the principall Iudge of interpreting Scripture, and decyding controuersies, is the Church.

The third part of Christs soueraigne power, is to saue, and destroy. This is expressed in these words: Hee openeth and no man shutteth, and shutteth and no man openeth: and for this cause he is sayd (f) to haue the keyes of hell and of death. Whereby is signified; first, that hee hath power to forgiue sins: for that hee procureth at his Fathers hands. Secondly, that hee hath power to condemne: for when men beleeue not his word, hee hath power to hold them in their ſins, for which he can caſt them into hell. The ground of this three-fold power of Chriſt is this, becauſe hee is ſouereigne Lorde ouer his Church, and the members thereof.

The Church of Rome ſaith, that this key of Dauid, hath more in it then ſouereignetie ouer his church: to wit, a power to make and depoſe Kings that bee in his Church. This they teach, that they might proue the Pope to haue right in ordayning and depoſing of kings, by vertue of the keyes. But they erre groſly; for though Chriſt as he is Mediatour, bee aboue all kings, yet in that regard hee neither maketh nor depoſeth any kings: and g Ioh.18.36. therefore he ſaith plainly, (g) My kingdō is not of this world. This cauſed him to refuſe to take vpon him the office of an h Luk.12.14. earthly Iudge or prince, to (h) deuide an inheritance betweene two brethren. Hence i Ioh.8.11. it was, that he (i) refuſed to giue ſentence of the adulterous woman. And yet as Chriſt is God, hee maketh or depoſeth earthly kings: for the wiſe man ſpeaketh of him in k Pro.8.15. the perſon of wiſdōe (k) by me kings raign.

For the further cleering of this, we muſt handle another point, which is deriued hence; concerning the power of the keyes: which is a power whereby the power of the keyes of Dauid is put in execution. This power of the Keyes is mentioned, Mat.16.19, when Chriſt ſaith vnto Peter; I will giue vnto thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, and whatſoeuer thou ſhalt binde vpon earth ſhall be bound in heauen; and whatſoeuer thou ſhalt looſe on earth, ſhall be looſed in heauen. This power of the keyes, is a miniſtery granted to Godschurch, to open and ſhut the kingdome of heauen. First, I call it a Miniſterie: that is, a ſeruice; becauſe whatſoeuer the church doth in Chriſts name, is nothing but the duetie of ſeruantes vnto their Lord: from whence it is, that the moſt worthy members and officers that euer were in the Church, as the Prophets and Apoſtles, were but the Miniſters of Chriſt. That this is a ſeruice, I ſhew more plainely thus; When Adam fell, in his ſinne all mankinde fell with him, and thereby were all barred from the kingdome of heauen. Now ſince that fall, Chriſt became man, and in his manhood ſatisfied the iuſtice of God for mans ſinnes. And this ſatisfaction of Chriſt, is properly that key whereby heauen is opened, being oppoſite to mans ſinne whereby it was ſhut. And Gods Church and Miniſters cannot properly open Heauen by any power they haue, but onely reueale vnto men what Chriſt hath done for them; and withall apply vnto them, the doctrine of Chriſts ſatisfaction which is reuealed. And in this regard they are ſaid, to open and ſhut the kingdom of heauen; not as Lords, but as miniſters & ſeruants.

Next I adde, that this power is giuen to the Church; that is, to the companie of of true Beleeuers called to ſaluation by Chriſt, and to none other: and therefore it is ſayd of them; (l) Whatſoeuer you bind l Mat.18.18. on earth ſhall be bound in heauen, &c.

Thirdly, I adde the end of this power of the keyes: To open and to ſhut heauen. How the Church doth this, Chriſt that gaue this power knoweth beſt, and hee hath ſet it downe, Iohn.20.23, Whoſoeuers ſinnes ye remit, they are remitted: and whoſoeuers ſinnes ye retayne, they are retayned. The Church therefore opens heauen, when it pardons mens ſinnes: and it ſhuts the ſame, when it lawfully retaines their ſinnes, and holdeth them vnpardoned: beſides this, there is no opening and ſhutting of heauen committed to the Church. Queſt. Can the Church pardon ſinne, or retaine the ſame? Anſw. Yes, for theſe are the wordes of Chriſt: but let vs ſee how. It is one thing to giue ſentence of the pardon of ſinne, and another to pronounce the ſame ſentence giuen. To giue the ſentence of the pardon of ſinne, is onely proper to Chriſt, the head of the Church; no Saint, nor Angell hath that priuiledge: but yet the Church pronounceth the ſentence of pardon giuen by Chriſt. If wee ſhould ſay, the the Church ſhould pardon ſin; we ſhould rob Chriſt of his honour, for that is a priuiledge of his Godhead. Thus wee ſee what the power of the keyes is.

The power of the keyes.

The right vſe of this power, is when the Church doth vſe the ſame for the opening and ſhutting of heauen: Firſt, in the name of Chriſt alone, as a ſeruant; Secondly, according to the rule of Gods word, not after mens affections or inuentions; Thirdly for this end, to bring ſinners to repentance, & to continue them therin that they may be ſaued: and to the Church thus vſing this power, Chriſt hath promised: that whatsoeuer they binde in earth, shall be bound in heauen; and whatsoeuer they loose in earth, shall bee loosed in heauen. Mat. 18. 18.

Further, this power of the keyes, hath two parts: the ministerie of the word; and spirituall iurisdiction. The key of the Ministerie of the word, is set downe & established by Christ. Mat. 16. 19, I will giue vnto thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen &c. This ministery of the word is a key, because it opens & shuts heauen; this it doth two wayes. First, by teaching and explayning the substance of religion, the doctrine of saluation, whereby men must come to heauen; & in that regard, is called the key of knowledge; Lu. 11. 52. Secondly: by applying the promises of the Gospel, and the threatning of the Lawe: For when in the ministerie of the word, the promises of remission of sins & life euerlasting, are applyed to beleeuers that repent, then the kingdom of heauen is opened; & when as in the same ministerie of the word, the curses of the law are denoūced against impenitent sinners, then is the kingdom of heauē shut. Yet touching the ministerie of the word, this distinction must be remembred; that otherwhiles the church is certen of the faith & repentance of some men, or some congregation; and then they may pronounce remission of sins absolutely. But otherwhiles they are vncerten of their faith and repentance, or of their impenitencie; & then they must accordingly remit or retaine mens sins, that is, conditionally; pronouncing the remission of sins to all that repent: & denouncing damnation to all that repent not. And thus is the word to be publikely handled in Gods church at this day, because our congregations are mixt companies, consisting of some that repent & beleeue, and of others that doe not truely repent nor beleeue.

The second part of this power of the keyes, is spiritual iurisdiction: I call it spirituall, to distinguish it from that outward iurisdiction whereby the commonwealth is gouerned. That this spiritual iurisdiction is a key, may appeare, Mat. 18. 16. 17. 18, If thy brother offend thee (saith Christ) admonish him priuately: if hee heare thee not, yet take with thee two or three: if he heare not them, tell it to the Church, & if he refuse to heare the Church, let him bee vnto thee as an heathen man, and as a publican. Then followeth the promise; Verely, I say vnto you, whatsoeuer ye bind on earth shalbe bound in heauen; and whatsoeuer ye loose, shal be loosed in heauen.

This spirituall iurisdiction, is a power whereby the Church pronounceth sentence vpon obstinate offenders in the Church, and puts the same in execution. And it hath two parts: Excommunication; and absolution. Excommunication is an action of the Church in Christs name, excluding an obstinate offender that is a professor of the Gospel, from all the priuiledges of the Church, and from the kingdom of heauen. So Paul (a) commandeth the incestious man to be committed to Sathan: that is, not onely put out of the kingdome of Christ, but also after a sort made subiect vnto Sathan, to bee outwardly afflicted by him. And therefore Christ saith: If (b) he heare not the Church, let him be vnto thee as an heathen man: that is, as one that hath no title to the kingdome of heauen. Heere may some say; Can the Church thrust any man out of the kingdome of heauen? Answ. It is Christ only that receiueth men in thither, and it is he alone that must thrust them out: the Church doth not properly either receiue men in, or put them out; but onely pronounce and declare what Christ doth in this behalfe. As if a man that liues in the church bee a common drunkard; the Church finding in Gods word, that (c) no drunkard can inherite the kingdome of heauen, which is the sentence of Christ, may pronounce the same against him, and so exclude him from the kingdome of heauen. Obiect. The true child of God may be excommunicated, but he can neuer be excluded from the kingdome of heauen. Ans. The true childe of God may for a time, and in part be excluded the kingdome of heauen. In part; as a man that hath freedome in an incorporation, may lie in prison for some trespasses, and so want the vse of his freedome, though he be a freeman: so the child of God, for committing sinne, may want the vse of his libertie and freedome which he hath in Gods kingdome; and for a time, while hee liueth in sinne without repentance, yet wholly and for euer hee cannot: but so soone as hee repents, hee shall bee receiued certainely againe: for no man is

b Mat. 18. 18.

c 1. Co. 6. 10

to

to bee barred either from heauen or the Church, any longer then hee remaineth impenitent.

The vſe. Whereas this cenſure is ſuch, as doth exclude a man both from the kingdom of heauen and the liberties of the Church till he repent; we may here ſee, that this cenſure ought to bee vſed with great reuerence, feare and conſideration: euen ſuch or greater, as wee would vſe in the cutting of a member from the bodie. The abuſing therfore of this ſentence in ſmall matters, cannot but be a grieuous ſin, and a breach of the third Commandement, wherein one of Gods moſt weightie ordinances is taken in vaine.

Further, one ſpeciall degree of Excommunication is Anathema: which is, when one is pronounced to bee condemned, whereof Paul ſpeaketh, 1. Cor. 16. 22. But this is not pronounced vpon any, but on thoſe that ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, and therfore it is ſeldom vſed becauſe that ſin is hardly diſcerned: cõſiſting not ſo much in the ſpeech, as in the malice of the heart againſt Chriſt.

The ſecond part of this ſpirituall iuriſdiction is abſolution: which is, when a malefactor vpon his ſufficiẽt repentance, is approued to be a mẽber of the Church; and is admitted to the kingdome of heauen. And yet here the Church receiues him not into the kingdome of Chriſt, but only declareth vpon his repentance what Chriſt doth: and thus we ſee wherin Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdictiõ conſiſteth: & what be the parts of the power of the keyes.

For the better diſcerning of this power of the keyes, wee muſt remember foure ſpecial abuſes hereof that haue takẽ place in Gods Church for many hundred yeares. The firſt is this: that in former Ages the church hath giuen this power of the keies to Peter alone, debarring the ſame from all other, euen from the reſt of the Apoſtles: as though they had only the vſe, not the right of this power. But the caſe is plaine, this power belongs to euery true miniſter of the Goſpel, though they be not Apoſtles, as well as it did to Peter; for in the promulgation of this power, Mat. 16. 19, though Chriſt direct his ſpeech to Peter, yet he ſpeaketh vnto all, as the circumſtances of the place doe plainly ſhew; for Chriſts queſtion (Whom ſay ye that I am) was made to all; now becauſe it would haue beene great diſorder in that holy company, for all of them to haue ſpoken; therefore Peter being both ancient and bould of ſpeech ſpeaketh for all, and the reſt anſwered in his perſon: and ſo accordingly Chriſt ſpeaking to Peter, doth make a grant of this power vnto all his diſciples in his perſon And therefore Ioh. 20. 23: He giues this power to all; ſaying plainly: Whoſoeuers ſins ye retaine, they are retained, &c. So that the word of God is plaine in this point, to ſatisfie the conſcience of any that is not wilfully addicted to the Popiſh religion. Queſt. Whence haue the Miniſters of the Goſpell this power? Anſw. By ſucceſſion from the Apoſtles; for Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 28. 19. 20, Goe and preach, I will be with you to the end of the world. Where he cannot meane the Apoſtles only; but with thẽ all Miniſters that did preach and baptiſe after them, making this promiſe to the Apoſtles; not as they were Apoſtles, but as they were Miniſters and preachers of his Goſpel.

The ſecond abuſe is, that the Church of Rome, hath turned the power of the keies into a ſupremacie ouer the church: making it to bee a ſoueraigne authoritie; whereby Peter, and his ſucceſſors the Popes, haue libertie to make Lawes, Canõs, & conſtitutions which bind the conſcience; as alſo to make kings and to depoſe the ſame. A moſt notorious abuſe of this power, which is no ſuperioritie but a miniſterie: the chiefe power whereof, conſiſteth in the diſpenſation of the word, & wil of Chriſt. For Chriſt ſaid not to Peter, I will giue thee the keyes of the kingdoms of mẽ, but of the kingdom of heauen. The third abuſe hereof is, that the church of Rome, hath thereby for a 1000. yeeres almoſt, barred Kings, Queenes, and Emperors from being Gouernors ouer the Churches of God: an error flat againſt Scripture; for when as good King Ioſias intended the reformation of religion, and the abandoning of Idolatrie, he made a couenant with the Lord for the accompliſhment of the ſame: & is ſaid (a) to haue cauſed all that were found in Ieruſalem, and Beniamin to ſtand to the couenant which he made. Now ſhall we ſay Ioſias did euill in cauſing thẽ ſo to doe? God forbid: It is recorded of him by the holy Ghoſt for his cõmendation. Obiect. But Gods paſtors & teachers haue the power of the keyes, and princes haue not? Anſ. True; but yet they haue a ciuil power wherby they rule ouer Gods Church: for there is a ciuil power, & a ſpirituall power. Princes rule not by any ſpirituall power, but ciuilly: & therby they haue power to compell all their ſubiects to the outward means of Gods worſhip, & to forſake Idolatrie, and may alſo puniſh thoſe that obey them not. Obiect. By this power of the keyes, Kings and Queenes are brought vnder Paſtors? Anſw. In Paſtors and Miniſters we muſt conſider their perſons and goods, & their office and word which they bring: Princes are ouer their perſons and goods, and yet may be vnder their word & Miniſterie: becauſe therein they ſtand in Chriſts ſtead. Yet al this ſheweth nothing why Princes in Gods Church ſhould be ſo robbed of their right, as the Church of Rome doth.

The fourth abuſe is, that the Church of Rome for ſome 800. yeeres, hath turned the power of the Keyes vnto the Prieſts in their Sacrament of Penance: for wheras by Gods word, the Miniſters power is onely to pronounce the abſolution of Chriſt, with them euery Prieſt ſits as a Iudge, and all the people come vnto him as to a Iudge, making knowen vnto him all their thoughts, words, and deeds, (as neere as they can) wherein they haue broken any Commandement: which done, the Prieſt enioynes him to bewaile his ſinnes, and after contrition, doth properly giue ſentence of pardon, euen as Chriſt himſelfe doth: and then after appoints him workes of ſatisfaction, to be done for the temporall puniſhment of his ſinnes: which done, his ſins are pardoned in heauen. Where behold a moſt deuilliſh practiſe, as may appeare by the manifold errors contained therein. As firſt, the confeſſion of all a mans ſinnes; which hath no warrant in Gods word.

Secondly, that the Prieſt ſhould giue ſentence of pardon, is a moſt notorious practiſe, whereby Chriſt is robbed of his honour: for the Phariſes could ſay, None can forgiue ſins but God: that is properly, Mark. 2. 7; Which Chriſt approueth, and it is muſt true; for he that can forgiue ſins properly, muſt make ſatisfaction for ſins. Thirdly, they abſolue from the fault, but they will not forgiue the puniſhment; and thereby they robbe others to inrich themſelues. Fourthly, they enioyne ſatisfaction to God by men for their ſinnes: whereby they doe nothing els but ouerturn the al-ſufficient ſatisfactiō of Chriſt, and enioine that to man which is impoſſible. Al theſe are moſt horrible abuſes of this power, which ought to bee knowen and conſidered, being a ſufficient warrant vnto vs, that the Church of Rome is no true church of God: for though the Pope cary in his armes the keys, yet they are not the keyes of heauen, but of hell. For he hath made moe places of reſt and woe, than euer God did: as Limbus patrū, and Purgatorie, & therefore muſt needs make moe doores thither, and ſo moe locks & keies.

By this doctrine, touching the keyes of Dauid giuen to Chriſt, and the power of the keyes in the church deriued thence, we may learne ſundry things. Firſt, that Chriſt, who hath the keyes of Dauid to open and ſhut, doth not open to all, but to ſome onely. The reaſon hereof is this: Adam beeing created in integritie, was in the fauour of God: but by his ſinne he loſt the fauour of God, & ſo barred himſelfe both out of the earthly and heauenly paradiſe: and all his poſteritie by the ſame ſin, and by their owne actuall ſins are likewiſe debarred: for (b) ſinne is a partition wall betweene vs and God: and a (c) clond betweene our praiers and God himſelfe; as Ieremie ſpeaketh: ſo that ſinne is the cauſe of this excluſion: and ſo many ſins as a man committeth, ſo many bolts and barres hee maketh to exclude himſelfe from the kingdome of heauen. The conſideration whereof, ſhould moue euery one to take a narrow view of his miſerable ſtate in himſelf, through Adā: for by originall ſin wherin we were born and by our actual tranſgreſſions wherin, we liue, we barre our ſelfe from the kingdome of heauen. It is lamentable to ſee how the whole world lyeth in ſinne, and how the deuill bewitcheth men to conceale or diminiſh their ſins; making great ſins ſmall, and little ſinnes none at all: when as the leaſt ſinne which they commit, (without repentance) is ſufficient to barre them for euer out of the kingdome of Heauen. Againe, ſeeing euery ſinne doth barre vs out of Heauen, this muſt be a motiue, to induce euery one of vs, to repent of all our ſinnes, to bewayle the ſame, & to pray earneſtly for the pardon of of them in the death of Chriſt: and continually to labor to turne vnto God from all ſinne, becauſe if wee liue but in one ſinne, it will bee a mightie barre ſufficient to exclude vs the Kingdome of heauen eternally. Thirdly, ſeeing Chriſt keeps the keyes of heauen; heereby wee are taught to come vnto Chriſt, & to ſeek by him to enter into the kingdom of heauē. For Chriſt by his death hath opened heauen: as hee ſayd vnto Nathaniell and Philip, [a] Verily, verily; I ſay vnto you, hereafter ſhall yee ſee heauen open: meaning by the miniſtrie of the Goſpell: and ſeeing it is open, we muſt ſtriue to enter into it, as the men in Iohn Baptiſts time did, Mat. 11.12. This we do by endeuoring to become good members of Gods church on earth: for that is the dore and ſuburbs of the Kingdome of heauen, which euerie one muſt enter into, that would come to heauen it ſelfe; euen as a man that would goe into a houſe, muſt needs come to the dore. Now in the Church there is the true dore which is Chriſt himſelfe: and the key thereof which is his word, and the miniſterie of the word, which doth locke and vnlocke the ſame. Queſt. What ſhall we doe to become true members of the Church? Anſ. We muſt doe two things: Firſt, humble our ſelues for all our ſinnes, praying vnto GOD for the pardon of them, and beleeuing the ſame through Chriſt. Secondly, endeauor and purpoſe by Gods grace euerie day to leaue the ſame ſinnes. This doing, wee are at the dore of heauen, and if wee would haue our ſoules enter into heauen when wee die, this wee muſt doe while we liue. But if we enter not into the dore of grace, by the key of knowledge in the miniſterie of the word while we liue, wee ſhall neuer come to the gate of glorie after death.

Verſ. 8. I know thy workes: behold, I haue ſet before thee an open dore, and no man can ſhut it, for thou haſt a little ſtrength, and haſt kept my word, and haſt not denyed my name.

In this verſe, and ſo forward to the twelft, is contayned the matter of this Epiſtle, which may bee reduced to three heads: a Praiſe; a Promiſe; and a Commaundement. The Praiſe in this eight verſe. The Promiſe in the 9. and 10. The Commaundement in the 11. For the firſt, the Praiſe of this Church is firſt ſummarily propounded: I know thy works: which hath beene expounded, and the end thereof, with the vſes in the former Epiſtles. Then hee addeth the reaſon of his cōmendation, wherin are two things to bee obſerued. I. the ſigne of Chriſts approbation, in theſe words: I haue ſet before thee an open dore. II. their conuerſation, or the workes which Chriſt approoued: In the words following, Thou haſt a litle ſtrēgth, and haſt kept my word, & haſt not denied my name. Both theſe may be vndetſtood, either of the Angell and Miniſter of this Church: or of the whole Church alſo. I take it to bee meant of both. Being ſpoken of the Miniſter of this Church, the words beare this ſence: Behold I haue ſet before thee an open dore, &c. That is, behold and conſider, I haue vouchſafed vnto thee oportunitie and libertie to preach the Goſpell, and thereby to conuert men vnto me. So much S. Paul meaneth by the dore of vtterance, 1. Cor. 16.9. For thou haſt a little ſtrength, and haſt kept my word, and haſt not denyed my name, That is, though thou be indued but with a ſmall meaſure of gifts pertaining to thy calling, yet thou haſt maintayned my Goſpell, and haſt not denyed my name.

These words being thus expounded, doe affoord vs theſe inſtructions. Firſt, from the ſigne of his approbation wee learne: that it is a great priuiledge for any Miniſter to haue libertie to preach the Goſpell, and thereby to conuert men vnto Chriſt: ſo much the word of attention behold importeth, which may alſo further appeare by this, that the moſt famous and worthy Prophets of God, were not alwayes vouchſafed this fauour, as Iſay and Ezekiell: who were ſent ſometime to harden [b] the people. And Chriſt himſelfe complaineth of the want of this priuiledg, ſaying, [c] I haue ſpent my ſtrēgth in vaine: and in regard of this priuiledge, the Miniſters of the Goſpell are called [d] Sauiors. And by reaſon of this libertie, they haue title to the promiſe of ſhining as ſtarres in glorie, Dan. 12.3. This therefore is an vnſpeakable mercie, and ſo ought to bee eſteemed: and all Miniſters that haue the ſame vouchſafed vnto them ought highly to magnifie the name of God for it, and to value it more worth, than all earthly bleſſings whatſoeuer.

Secondly, from the workes which Chriſt approoued in the Angell of this Church, we may obſerue, that Miniſters indued with ſmall meaſure of gifts, may bee able to doe great ſeruice vnto God in his Church. This thing is plaine in the Miniſter of this Church: and might alſo bee ſhewed by manifold examples of ſuch men in all ages: but to come to our times. In the dayes of Queene Marie, when Religion was in baniſhing, this our famous Schoole of the Prophets, had many learned men in it: yet not one of them ſtood out for the defence of the Goſpell: when as a poore ſecular Prieſt not three miles off, who was far behind them in gifts of learning and knowledg, yet hauing the truth reuealed vnto him, did ſtand out for the maintenance of the ſame, euen to the ſealing of it with his blood. And at this day many men of ſmaller gifts in the miniſtrie, doe more further the Goſpell, by the encreaſe of the knowledge of Chriſt crucified and true obedience, than thoſe that are inriched with far greater gifts of knowledge both in tongues and arts: ſo as though they be many hundred degrees ſhort in regard of ſchoole-learning, yet they go as farre before them in benefiting Gods Church.

Cambridge.

If this be ſo (will ſome ſay) then it is needleſſe for men to bee brought vp ſo much in the ſchooles of learning? Anſ. Not ſo, for as much as may be, Gods Miniſters ought to haue knowledge of Schoole-learning, both in Artes and tongues. And yet for all this, it oft commeth to paſſe by Gods prouidence, that the greateſt Clerks for learning, are leſſe profitable to the church, thā men of ſmaller gifts. This God doth to humble the learned, that they be not proud in themſelues: And to magnifie the worke of his ſpirite in the weaker inſtruments.

Further, theſe words muſt alſo be vnderſtood of the whole Church. And then they beare this ſence. I haue ſet before thee an open dore: That is, I haue vouchſafed vnto thee a ſpeciall priuiledge, euen libertie to enter into the kingdome of heauen. From whence we obſerue: That libertie to life euerlaſting, is a ſpeciall priuiledge belonging not to all men, but onely to the Church of God, and the true members of Chriſt.

This point hath ſundrie vſes. I. to confute this erronious opinion: That Chriſt did effectually redeeme all and euerie man. Which is flat againſt Gods word, and this text: for thoſe that are effectually redeemed, haue libertie to enter into the kingdome of heauen: but all men haue not that libertie; for then it were no priuiledge of Gods Church alone, to haue heauen opened vnto them.

II. Seeing this is a priuiledge which God vouchſafeth vnto his church, to haue heauen gate opened vnto them. Hereby we are taught to take the benefite of this libertie while the dore is open: and in time to ſtriue to enter therein. For as Chriſt telleth Nathaniell, the church of the new Teſtament, ſhall by faith ſee heauen open. We muſt not therefore neglect this oportunitie. But it is our common ſhame, that wee be ſlacke in ſeeking the kingdome of God, and the righteouſnes thereof, ſuffering our ſelues ſo to bee clogged with heapes of ſins, and worldly luſts, that we can neither walke in that ſtraight way, nor enter into that dore that leadeth vnto life; for ſinne is an heauie burden, like a great packe that will not ſuffer a man to enter into ſo ſtrait a dore. We muſt therefore caſt off all ſinne, that hee may ſo enter in, and walke in the way of life. a Ioh. 1. 51.

And no man can ſhut it. Here is the continuance of the former benefite, againſt all aduerſarie power whatſoeuer. And this againe confuteth another opinion of the ſame kinde with the former: to wit, That Chriſt dyed for euerie man, but yet ſome are not ſaued, becauſe they will not: they ſhut heauen dore againſt themſelus. But this opinion cannot ſtand: for none can ſhut heauen dore againſt them, to whome Chriſt hath ſet it open effectually: neither ſinne, Satan, nor the world, no not man himſelfe, nor all their power together. For herein is the will of man ruled by the will of God: and looke whome God will haue to enter into heauen, them doth hee encline to will their owne ſaluation; and alſo make vnwilling euer to ſhut this dore againſt themſelus. For thou haſt a little ſtrength, and haſt kept my word, &c. That is, Thou art indued with ſome meaſure of grace, as of faith, hope, hope, and righteouſneſſe: and according to that meaſure thou haſt maintained my word, and not denyed my name.

Hence we learn, that a man indued with a ſmall meaſure of Gods grace, may doe workes pleaſing vnto God, & by the ſame grace come to life euerlaſting. Chriſt ſaith to his Diſciples; a If your faith were as much as a grain of muſtard ſeed, by it ſhould you bee able to remoouе mountaines. Now that which is here ſayd of the faith of miracles, may in like ſort be ſaid of all faith, and ſo of iuſtifying faith; if a man haue neuer ſo ſmall a meaſure therof, yet thereby hee ſhall doe workes acceptable to God: for as Paul teacheth, Gods children receiue, not the tenths, but b the firſt fruits of the ſpirit; that is, a ſmall meaſure of grace in this life, which is, onely a pledge of that which they ſhall fully receiue in the world to come; for this cauſe is Rahab commended for her faith, c although it was but ſmall and weake, as wee ſhall ſee if wee read the whole Hiſtorie, Ioſhua. 2: For God accepteth of man, according to that hee hath receiued. It is not ſo much the meaſure of grace that ſaueth a man, as the truth of grace before God.

b Rom. 8. 23.

c Heb. 11. 31

The vſe. This ſerueth notably for the comfort of thoſe that haue care to keepe faith and good conſcience. Such are moſt diſmaied by reaſon of their wants & corruptions: but they muſt know that God approoueth of their grace, though it bee but ſmall, if ſo be they haue care to increaſe in grace, and doe ſtriue to pleaſe God in all things, according to the meaſure of grace receiued. II. Hereby euerie one muſt be encoraged to embrace and obey true Religion. Many bee diſmayed herein, by reaſon of the great meaſure of obedience, which they thinke God requireth; and therefore they leaue of all obedience. But this ought not to bee ſo: for God approoueth of a man in Chriſt, according to that grace which hee hath, be it more or leſſe; and not according to that which by the law he ought to haue. And yet none of all this muſt make vs ſlacke and negligent in vſing thoſe means which God hath vouchſafed vnto vs for the increaſe of grace, that ſo wee may alſo increaſe in true obedience.

And haſt kept my word, and haſt not denyed my name. Here hee ſetteth downe two workes, for the which he commendeth this church. Firſt, their faithfull keeping of the word of Chriſt. Secondly, the profeſſion of his name in the time of perſecutiõ. This behauior of this church, muſt be a paterne and a looking glaſſe for vs to ſquare our conuerſation by. For theſe works; Thou haſt kept my word, and haſt not denyed my name, though the words be few, yet they continue much in them: ſignifying, that this Church had ſpeciall care of keeping Gods word in euerie Commaundement, both legall, and euangelicall. Happie were our Church if the ſame might truely be ſaid of vs, that we had care of obedience vnto God, and of the true profeſſion of his name. But generally we faile in practiſe, though in outward profeſſion we make ſome ſhew thereof. Thus much of the praiſe of this Church.

Verſ. 9. Behold, I will make them of the Synagog of Satan, which call themſelues Iewes, and are not, but doe lye; behold, I will make them, that they ſhall come and worſhip before thy feete, and ſhall know that I haue loued thee.

Heere followes the ſecond part of this Epiſtle; namely, the Promiſes of Chriſt, which are two. Firſt, concerning the conuerſion of certaine Iewes, verſ. 9. Secondly, concerning the deliuerance of theſe Philadelphians in the time of temptation. verſ. 10. For the firſt of theſe promiſes: In all likelyhood, there was in this Citie of Philadelphia, a Synagog of the Iewes which bare an outward ſhewe, that they were the true worſhippers of God; albeit they denyed the name of Chriſt, and perſecuted his Church. Yet Chriſt here promiſeth, that he will conuert them, and make them members of his Church, and cauſe them to worſhip him in the congregation before this Church of Philadelphia.

In this promiſe, note three points touching the conuerſion of theſe Iewes. The Author thereof: The parties conuerted: and the fruit of their conuerſion. For the firſt; I (ſaith Chriſt) behold, I will make them. The wordes are verie ſignificant, being doubled: and they make Chriſt the whole and ſole author of their conuerſion.

Hence we learne, that in the conuerſiſion of a ſinner, God hath the whole and ſole worke: true it is, that a man willeth his conuerſion in the act thereof, but yet it is God that worketh that will in him, it is not of himſelfe. This confuteth the erronious Doctrine of free-will in the Church of Rome, whereby they teach, that a man can diſpoſe himſelfe to worke out his ſaluation, being onely helped by Gods grace. Like vnto a ſicke man, who though he bee weake, yet being holden vp by another, can goe of himſelfe. Anſ. But Saint Paul teacheth vs, That a man by nature is not ſick, or weak with ſinne, but ſtarke [a] dead in ſinne: and can no more mooue himſelfe in the worke of his conuerſion, than a dead man in the graue, in the worke of his reſurrection. But they ſay, by this wee make a man like vnto a blocke. Anſw. Not ſo, for though hee cannot turne himſelfe vnto God, yet hee hath his will and vnderſtanding free to vſe in ciuile and outward actions: and beſides there is a poſſibilitie in his nature to bee conuerted by grace, which is not in a blocke.

a Epheſ. 2.1.

Again, wheras Chriſt ſayth, I will make them come, and they ſhall come. Heere is plainly confuted the Doctrine and opinion of ſome, which hold, That a man being effectually called, may come vnto Chriſt, or not come at his pleaſure; when God hath giuen grace, man may receiue it, or refuſe it, if hee will. This is flat againſt this text, for God will make them come, and mans will muſt bee plyable to Gods will in this matter.

But they alleage, Mat. 23. 37. Oh Ieruſalem, Ieruſalem, how oft would I haue gathered thee, as a hen, &c. but thou woldeſt not. Anſw. Chriſt there ſpeaketh not of the wil of his good pleaſure, for that cannot be reſiſted; But of his ſignified will in the miniſterie of his Prophets, and by himſelfe as hee was a Prophet, and the Miniſter of circumciſion vnto the Iewes: for ſo he might will their conuerſion, and yet they will it not. Obiect. 2. Act. 7. 51. Ye ſtiffe-necked Iewes, ye haue alwayes reſiſted the holy Ghoſt. Anſw. That muſt be vnderſtood of the miniſterie of the Prophets and Apoſtles, who ſpake by the ſpirit of God: and not of the ſpirit himſelfe.

II. point. The parties conuerted, namely, Them of the Synagog of Satan; Such as called themſelues the onely true worſhippers of God, and yet indeed and in truth, were no better than the ſlaues of Satan.

This is to be obſerued: for hereby we may ſee, that not onely ſinners which commit ſmall ſinnes, are conuerted vnto God; but euen grieuous and ancient ſinners: ſuch as haue long continued the ſlaues of Satan. Chriſt died not for painted ſinners, but for grieuous ſinners: and therefore Paul chargeth Timothy and the Miniſters with him, [b] To waite for the conuerſion, and repentance of them that were taken in the ſnare of the Diuell, and that according to the Diuels owne will. Rom. 1. 28, Paul ſpeaketh of ſome Gentils that were giuen vp to a reprobate ſenſe: which was a fearefull caſe, and yet no doubt, many of them were after turned to beleeue the Goſpell; for ſuch are they, that are taken in the ſnare of the Diuell, and yet there is repentance to be wayted for of them.

b 2. Tim. 2. 26.

The vſe. This Doctrine muſt not bee abuſed to libertie in ſinning; for that is the right way to caſt our ſoules into the pit of deſtruction. But yet ſeeing Chriſt will bring home into his kingdome moſt grieuous ſinners, we muſt hereby take occaſion not to be diſcouraged, either by the greatneſſe or multitude of our ſins from coming vnto Chriſt. For marke, Chriſt only rayſed three that were dead to life: Iayrus daughter that was newe dead: the widowes Sonne that lay on the herſe: and Lazarus that lay ſtinking in the graue. This is a notable figure of the conuerſion of ſinners: hee will not onely call to repentance ſmall and young ſinners, but euen great and old ſinners that lye rotting and ſtinking in the graue of ſinne, as Lazarus did in the graue of death. Hee came to call ſinners to repentance, and to ſaue the loſt ſheepe, which are readie to bee deuoured by Woolues and wilde beaſts. Wee muſt all bleſſe the name of Chriſt for this his large mercie, and in time lay hold vpon it, and repent.

III. point. The fruite of their conuerſion, in theſe wordes: They ſhall come and worſhippe before thy feete, and ſhall knowe that I haue loued thee. Theſe wordes may bee fitly expounded by another place of ſcripture, 1. Corinth. 14. 24. 25. If all propheſie, and there come in one that beleeueth not, or one vnlearned, learned, he is rebuked of all men, and iudged of all, ſo as the ſecrets of his heart are diſcloſed, and he will fall downe on his face, and worſhip God, and ſay plainly God is in you indeed: ſo that the meaning of theſe words is this. I will cauſe thē to come to the cōgregation of Gods people, & at their feet to fall downe and worſhip the true God.

Heere are ſet downe twoo notable fruits of the conuerſion of a ſinner. Firſt, concerning God: The ſecond, concerning the Church. The fruit of conuerſion that reſpecteth God is, The true worſhip of God: noted in theſe words, I will make them come and worſhip; that is, In ſpirite and truth with bodie and ſoule, to adore the true God. This fruite no man can bring forth till hee bee conuerted: For [a] the wicked and naturall man cals not vpon God; True it is, they will acknowledge there is a God, and that the ſame God is to bee worſhipped, and therefore they will come outwardly, and heare the word, and receiue the elements of the ſacraments; but the true worſhip of God, is in ſpirite and truth from the heart, which a naturall man cannot perfourme vnto God. This is the fruit of true cōuerſion, which when a man receiueth, hee doth heare the word of God with reuerence, tremble at Gods iudgements, and mingle the Doctrine of the Goſpell with faith in his heart; and in calling vpon God hee feeles his ſinnes, and therefore by prayer doth earneſtly deſire the ſupply of grace, and the remiſſion of his ſins, hauing his hart alſo beleeuing that he ſhall receiue mercie: And in thankeſgiuing his heart is filled with ioy, and the grace of thankefulneſſe, ſo as being conuerted, all his worſhip vnto God is in ſpirit and truth.

a Pſa. 14.4.

In the worſhip of theſe Iewes, are noted three properties required in Gods ſeruice. Firſt, it muſt bee willing and chereſull: ſo did theſe Iewes worſhippe GOD; For they are ſayd, not onely to worſhip GOD, but to come and worſhip GOD: and thus doe all Gods children worſhip him. Iſay. 56.7, Thoſe whom God bringeth to his mountaine, hee maketh ioyfull in his houſe of prayer. Pſal. 110.3, They ſhal come willingly in the day of aſſemblies. By this propertie, wee may ſee a great number at this daye euerie where come farre ſhort in the true worſhip of GOD: for moſt men neuer regard the preaching of the word, but content themſelues with morning and euening prayer: which they frequent to auoide the penaltie of the lawes of the Magiſtrate, and the ſhame of the world. But theſe are miſerable worſhippers of God, his worſhip ought to bee free and willing.

The ſecond propertie: The worſhip of God, muſt bee expreſſed with ſeemely, meet, and conuenient geſture. The word tranſlated Worſhip, ſignifieth doing of reuerence with bowing of the body and knee: and therfore it is not an indifferent thing, but neceſſarie, to vſe conuenient geſture in Gods worſhip, that thereby the grace and humilitie of the heart may bee expreſſed. The [b] Angels that ſtand before the throne of God, haue two winges to couer their feete, and two to couer their faces: therby teſtifying their reuerence to Gods Maieſtie; In this point alſo many come ſhort: for as the common complaint is, the maner of many is to lie ſnorting and ſleeping vnder mens elbows at ſermons, and in the time of prayer to ſit vnreuerently with their heads couered. Theſe things ought not to be: for God is Lord of body and ſoule, and ought to be worſhipped with both.

b Iſay. 6.2.

The third propertie. All that will truly worſhip GOD, muſt firſt bee humbled for their ſinnes, and haue the pride of their hearts brought downe, and bee ſtroken with a feare of GODS glorious Maieſtie. So theſe Iewes did proſtrate their bodies at the feete of the congregation, when they came to worſhip GOD. The [b] Iaylor that impriſoned Paul and Silas ouer-night, and put their feete in the ſtockes, would then haue verie little regarded Paules Doctrine, beeing ſo cruell and rigorous to their perſons: Yet when he was about to haue killed himſelfe with his ſword, (ſuppoſing the priſoners had beene gone, becauſe hee ſawe the dores open) hee was glad and ioyfull to heare the voice of Paul, who called vnto him, that hee ſhould doe himſelfe no harme, for they were all there: then being humbled by that ſtrange and woonderfull worke of GOD, he comes in vnto them, humbles himſelfe, and fals downe before them, craning them to tell him what hee muſt doe to bee ſaued. In like manner, ſo long as men haue not their proud hearts beaten downe, they will neuer worſhip God in ſpirit and truth. Would wee therefore know why the moſt part worſhippe God formally? Surely it is becauſe they haue not beene humbled with a feare of Gods maieſtie, and a terrour of hell. Neither can it bee hoped, that we ſhall euer worſhip God ſincerely, till our hearts bee thus broken within vs, and we touched with the feare of Gods iudgements. The want hereof is the cauſe, why men and women content themſelues with a bare mumbling ouer of the words of the Lords prayer, the Creede, and ten Commaundements, neuer ſeeking in the ſinceritie of their heart, cheerefully, and willingly, both with ſoule and bodie, to doe worſhip vnto God.

The ſecond fruite of true conuerſion concerneth man, and that is, A reuerence of the true worſhippers of God, noted in theſe words, Before thy feete. Theſe Iewes when they were conuerted, did not think themſelues worthy to bee members of this congregation, but ſubmitted themſelues to be foot-ſtooles vnto them. This reuerence ſhewes it ſelfe in this one thing which is the ground thereof; namely, a baſe opinion which euery true conuerted perſon hath of himſelfe, by reaſon of his owne vnworthineſſe. This was in Paul, cauſing him to call himſelfe the [a] cheefe of all ſinners. And the ſame ought to be in euerie one of vs; for this is true grace, and a note of true repentance, when a man or woman can truely abaſe themſelues beneath all Gods people; ſo as if the queſtion were, who is the vileſt perſon in the Church? the conſcience of euerie man ſhould anſwete: I my ſelfe. The proude and phareſaicall heart, is farre from true conuerſion; but the humble hart is pleaſing to God.

[a] 1. Tim. 1. 15.

And ſhall know that I haue loued thee: Theſe words contain a reaſon of the former ſubmiſſe behauiour of theſe Iewes; for it might bee asked, why ſhall theſe Iewes come to ioyne themſelues with Gods people, and bee content to make themſelues foote-ſtooles vnto them? The anſwere is, becauſe Chriſt will make them know, that hee hath loued his Church.

Here marke and ſee the ground of all true reuerence, Gods loue and fauour. Sundrie perſons, both in Church and Common wealth, haue reuerence due vnto them, as Maiſters from their ſeruants; parents from their Children; and all ſuperiours from their inferiours. Now, if theſe men would attaine to true reuerence indeede, firſt they muſt ſeeke to be in the loue and fauour of God, and of his children; and ſo ſhall they procure vnto themſelues true reuerence: for when men ſet their hearts to feare God, then will God turne the harts of men to reuerence them. This ought to be thought vpon of thoſe that be great in birth and wealth; They muſt not ſtand on theſe things, but look to the foundation of true reuerence; namely, the fauour of God, which they muſt ſeek for, and getting that, God will get them reuerence, euen of wicked men. The cauſe why many in high place, as Magiſtrate, Maiſters, &c. want due reuerence is, for that they care not for the fauour of God, the ground thereof.

Verſ. 10. Becauſe thou haſt kept the word of my patience, therefore will I deliuer thee from the houre of temptation, which will come vpon all the world, to trie them that dwell vpon the earth.

Theſe words containe the ſecond promiſe of Chriſt vnto this Church, concerning their preſeruation in time of moſt bloodie perſecution, for this Epiſtle vnto this Church, as alſo this Booke was written by Iohn, after the Aſcention of Chriſt in the daies of Domitian the Emperour of Rome, after whome ſucceeded Traianus, who when hee was ſeated in his Empire, rayſed vp greeuous perſecution againſt GODS Church in all places of his Dominion, wherein he put to death innumerable thouſandes of Chriſtians for the ſpace of foureteene yeares. Of this perſecution our Sauiour Chriſt fore-tels this Church, calling it; The houre of temptation, and withall he promiſeth to preſerue this Church in the time of this bloodie perſecution: adding ding a reaſon thereof, Becauſe they had conſtantly and ſyncerely profeſſed his Goſpell.

In this promiſe of preſeruation, note ſundry points; I. the occaſion thereof, The keeping of the word of his patience. II. The thing promiſed, deliuerance vnder Traianus. III. A prediction of this perſecution, That it ſhall come vpon the world, for this end, to trie them.

I. point, The word of Chriſts patience ſome expound to be, Chriſts commandement of patience: but that expoſition is too ſtrait; here it ſignifieth the whole Doctrine of ſaluation by Chriſt; which is called the word of patience: firſt, becauſe it teacheth patience: Secondly, becauſe it is the inſtrument of patience; for when a man knowes ſaluation by Chriſt, and alſo beleeues the ſame to belong to him, that will make him patient in all the miſeries of this life. Thirdly, becauſe it cannot bee profeſſed and holden vnto death without patience, but as it is ſayd of the good ground, It bringeth forth fruit with patience: ſo muſt euerie one doe that profeſſeth this Goſpell.

In this occaſion of Gods promiſe obſerue; that Gods grace well vſed, is rewarded with increaſe. Thoſe which haue receiued but ſmall meaſure of grace at the firſt, by becomming faithfull therein, haue receiued increaſe, which ſerues to mooue vs to bee faithfull in the vſe of thoſe tallents, which wee haue receiued. For heereby wee ſhall receiue increaſe, when as thoſe which hauing receiued good gifts from God, as knowledge, and ſuch like, becauſe they haue not beene faithfull in the vſe thereof, haue beene depriued of the ſame. Wherefore whoſoeuer hath begun to know the will of God, to beleeue, and to repent; let the ſame parties proceed to vſe thoſe giftes ſtill to Gods glorie, and the good of his Church and people, among whom they liue; and they ſhall ſee the Lord will double and treble, and greatly increaſe the ſame vnto them.

Againe, note the doctrine of the Goſpell is a Doctrine of patience. This ſheweth how good and meete it is for euerie one to learne the Goſpell in the dayes of peace: for euerie one in times of tryall, would wiſh for ſtrength and patience: and wee know not how long theſe dayes of peace will laſt. Againe, each man in his calling, is ſubiect to many croſſes and miſeries: for in the ſweat of our face muſt wee eat our bread. And who is free from paines and diſeaſes, yea who can ſcape death it ſelfe? Now in all theſe, and in all other troubles, wee haue neede of patience. And therefore in the time of health and eaſe, let vs hide in our hearts the ſeedes of this grace, to wit, the Doctrine of the Goſpell: and then in due time, wee ſhall reape the fruit of patience, which will make vs contented in all diſtreſſes both of life and death. And if wee would know why moſt men are ſo impatient in afflictions; it is becauſe they haue ſo little knowledge and faith in the Goſpell of his grace.

Secondly, ſeeing the Goſpell is the word of patience; heereby all perſons that looke to bee ſaued by the Goſpell, muſt learne to put on patience, keeping a moderation in all their thoughts, wils, and affections; for when wee be impatient any way, wee are not ſutable to the Doctrine of our ſaluation.

Thirdly, this word of patience is called Chriſts (The word of my patience,) becauſe Chriſt is the author of it. This is added to beat downe the pride of this Church; for when God doth praiſe them for their obedience, their hearts might haue beene puffed vp with pride. But to preuent this euill in this Church, whom he now praiſed, hee calleth it his patience, that they might not thinke this good thing was of themſelues. And the ſame conſideration muſt checke the proude thoughts that riſe in our hearts; namely, to remember that no good thing wee haue is our owne, but Chriſts. What haſt thou which thou haſt not receiued? Why then ſhouldeſt thou boaſt? 1. Corinth. 4. 7.

II. point. The thing promiſed, is preſeruation and deliuerance in the bloodie perſecution vnder Traianus; in which for the ſpace of fourteene yeares innumerable Chriſtians were put to death. I will deliuer thee from the houre of temptation.

Here firſt obſerue, that God hath appointed certaine ſet houres and times for the triall of his Church, as well for the gifts of his grace, as of their wickednesſe and hypocriſie. Thus he led the Iſraelites [b] fortie yeares in the wilderneſſe to a Deut. 13. 3. ſent a falſe Prophets amonge them, to trie whether they would turne from the true God or no. And as God thus dealeth with his Church; ſo hee hath appointed particular times and houres, wherein hee b Gen. 22. 2. will trie particular perſons b God bid Abraham kill his Sonne, and that was his tryall. And c 2. Chro. 32. 31. c Hezekias was left vnto himſelfe: That the Lord might ſee all that was in his heart. And ſo for euerie Chriſtian, God hath a ſet time of triall, wherin he will either make manifeſt his grace: or diſcloſe their hypocriſie.

The vſe. This point ought to bee well weighed: for herein the Lord dealeth like the worthie founders of great Schooles: who haue appointed certaine ſet times of poſing, for the tryall of their Schollers, to ſee what euerie ones proceeding is, that they may be accordingly rewarded. And as it is a ſhame for one to haue been long in a good Schoole, and to haue made no proceedings in learning: ſo it is for any one, that hath liued long in the Schoole of Chriſt, and hath not profited in grace. This therefore muſt teach vs theſe duties: Firſt, to try our ſelus, and that ſtaightly concerning our progreſſe in knowledge, faith, repentance, and obedience; for God himſelfe will trie vs whoſe eyes wee can neuer blinde, though wee may deceiue men: He will lay open our hearts, and make knowne what is in vs, whether it bee true grace, or falſe hypocriſie. Let vs not couer our ſelues with figge leaues, for God will ſtrip vs naked; but rather let vs ſearch our ſelus, touching our ſins and Gods graces: and neuer reſt contented, till wee haue found in our ſoules the good gifts of grace, which will abide his tryall.

Secondly, hereby we are admoniſhed, as neere as we can to conforme our harts and liues, vnto the word and wil of God; for he will trie vs: woonderfull it is to ſee how common the reproch of preſizeneſſe is, and if it were not well knowne that the world is full of Athieſts, that might diſcourage many a Chriſtian. But the remembrance of this triall, wherein hypocriſie will vaniſh as the ſtubble before the fire, muſt mooue vs to labour for ſinceritie. When we haue done our beſt, wee ſhall bee farre ſhort of that wee ought to bee. And therefore through the reproach of the world, let vs hold on our good endeauour, and labour to haue the maine graces of true faith, and a good conſcience, with a reſolute purpoſe not to ſinne: that ſo we may ſtand in the day of tryall. But if wee want theſe, and liue looſely, wee ſhall be fouud like the fooliſh Virgins, that haue onely the blaſing lampes of an outward Profeſſion, and want the ſauing oyle of grace, which may make vs acceptable vnto God at his appearing. Wee haue beene trayned vp in the Schoole of Chriſt; what a ſhame will it be, if when Chriſt comes to prooue vs, we be then found barren and voide of ſound grace? Dauid bethinking himſelf of this trial of the Lord, doth conforme himſelfe vnto the will of God: and therefore offereth himſelfe vnto his tryall, ſaying, d Lord prooue mee: d Pſa. 26. 2. meaning in regard of the truth and ſyncerities of a good conſcience, not of the perfectneſſe of his owne wayes. And hereunto muſt wee endeauour, not ſuffering any ſinne to raigne in vs.

Qu. But how was this promiſe verified touching their deliuerance from perſecution, ſeeing no Church was free from it? For euen the Churches of Aſia, whereof this in Philadelphia was a principall one, were perſecuted by Traianus. Anſw. This and ſuch like promiſes of deliuerance to Gods children from tryals and afflictions, muſt bee vnderſtood not ſimply; but with condition: to wit, ſo farre foorth as they may bee hurtfull vnto them, and in the leaſt meaſure hinder their ſaluation; and indeed they are promiſes of deliuerance from the euill of temptation and perſecution; not from perſecution and temptation it ſelfe. Pſal. 91. 10. The Lord promiſeth to him that truſteth in God, The plague ſhall not come neere his dwelling: and yet by experience wee know that Gods children in generall plagues, are taken away as well as others; and therefore that promiſe muſt bee vnderſtood of deliueranee, not from the plague it ſelfe, but from the hurt therof; ſo as it ſhall not hinder the good or ſaluation of any in the godly mans houſe. We pray Lead vs not into temptation; which wee muſt not vnderſtand of freedome from all temptation; for it is the will of God we ſhould be tryed: but therein wee are taught to pray, that God would not forſake vs in our temptations, or giue vs vp wholly to the power of the deuill; but that it may tend to our profit, and not to our hurt, as well in reſpect of grace, as of ſaluation. And ſo farre foorth was this promiſe accompliſhed to this Church.

The vſe. The due conſideration whereof, is moſt comfortable to Gods church and people; teaching thē not to feare the croſſe in any temptation. God will haue his church tryed, but the faithfull therein need not to be diſmayed: for God by his promiſe hath taken away the euill and poyſon of all tryals and temptations, to them that haue care to keepe faith and a good conſcience, though they ſuffer a thouſand croſſes in this world neuer ſo long; yea, though they die vnder the croſſe: which may put comfort into the heart of any diſtreſſed ſoule whatſoeuer, & reuiue thoſe that are oppreſſed with temptations.

Againe, in that this promiſe is not made ſimply and abſolutely, but with reſtraint; hereby we are taught, that the petitions of thoſe perſons which pray ſimply and abſolutely to be freed from all temptations and aduerſities, are not according to Gods will and word: For euery petition muſt depend vpon ſome promiſe of God; but wee haue no abſolute promiſe of freedome from all tryals and temptations; but onely ſo farre foorth as they be euill. And therefore in praying againſt temptations, we muſt qualifie our petitions for temporall deliuerance, according to the tenour of the promiſes of Chriſt: that is, ſo farre forth as may moſt aduance Gods glorie, and beſt further our ſaluation.

Queſt. How can this great perſecution bee called but an houre of temptation, ſeeing it laſted 14. yeeres? Anſw. In diuers reſpects it may bee ſo called: Firſt, in 2 Pet. 3. 8. regard of God (g) with whom a thouſand yeeres are but as one day: and therefore 14. yeers with God are but as one houre. Secondly, in regard of that puniſhment which euery man by his ſinnes deſerueth in hell eternally. Thirdly, in the affection of Gods people which were tryed: When Iacob ſerued Laban ſeuen yeeres for Rahell, his affection made him thinke
h Gen. 29. 20 (h) it was but a ſhort time: So when Gods children ſuffer for the name and Goſpel of Chriſt, the conſideration thereof will make them thinke long afflictions to bee but ſhort. This affection cauſed Paul to wiſh to himſelfe eternall perdition for the glory of God, in the ſaluation of the Iewes. Rom. 9. 3.

The end of this phraſe touching the ſhortneſſe of time, was to comfort this and all other Churches in the time of this grieuous perſecution: for the conſideration of the ſhortneſſe of the time, is a meanes to eaſe any affliction; and to arme an impatient man with ſome meaſure of contentation.

III. point. The prophecie, or prediction of this affliction; is in theſe wordes: Which will come on all the world, to try them that dwell vpon the earth. Heere Chriſt foretelleth a thing which was to come, ſimply by himſelfe, and from himſelfe; not by the helpe of any cauſe, or any man or angell. And hereby hee prooues himſelfe to be true God; for it is a propertie and priuiledge of the true God, of himſelfe and by himſelfe, to foretell a thing to come, before it can bee ſeene either in it ſelfe, or in the cauſes thereof: no man, nor angell can ſo abſolutely foretell that which is to come; but in their predictions they firſt ſee the things preſent in their cauſes, vnleſſe they bee reuealed vnto them from God. But ſome may here demand, whether Chriſts foreknowledge and prediction, were the cauſe of this grieuous perſecution. Anſw. Not ſo, for things come not to paſſe becauſe of Gods foreknowledge thereof; but becauſe they would come to paſſe, therefore God foreſeeth, & foretelleth them: there is a higher cauſe of all things, then preſcience and prediction; to wit, the good will and pleaſure, and decree of God. So Chriſt is ſaid (i) to be deliuered to bee cru- Act. 2. 23.
cified, by the determinate will and counſell of God: and from the ſame eternall counſell did this perſecution vnder Traian originally proceed: for the firſt cauſe of the euent of euery thing is Gods decree, either ordaying, or diſpoſing the ſame. It will be ſayd, if this be ſo, then is God the author of ſinne. Anſw. God forbid: For the maner of Gods will and decree is diuers; ſome things hee decreeth to cauſe and effect of himſelfe, and by himſelfe, as all good things: ſome other things God decreeth to be effected by others, as ſinne. And ſo euill things though they bee not according to his reuealed will, yet they come in ſome ſort from his wil & decree: for if he ſimply nilled the, they could neuer be. Beſide, in Gods decree are ſet down, not only the things to be done, but alſo the means and circumſtances therof; as we may ſee in this perſecutiõ, the place and end are plainly noted. This we muſt remember, & on the contrary take heed of the opiniõ of ſome Proteſtants, which hold and teach that ſundry things come to paſſe, God onely foreſeeing them, and no way decreeing or willing them: as namely ſinne. But to giue vnto God a bare fore-knowledge without a decree, is to put vppon him an idle prouidence, which the nature of God will not admit.

The end why Chriſt alleadgeth this Prophecie, is to expound his former ſaying: For it might bee asked, why doth Chriſt call this perſecution, the houre of temptation? Chriſt anſwereth, becauſe it wil certainly come, to try them that dwel on earth. Where we may note, what is the propertie of afflictions and perſecutions, be they publike or priuate; Namely, they ſerue to diſcouer the ſtate of mens hearts; either by making manifeſt their faith, repentance, and feare of God: or by detecting their impacience & hypocriſie.

Verſe. 11. Behold, I come ſhortly: hold that which thou haſt, that no man take thy crowne.

Here is Chriſts commandement to this Church, wherein conſider firſt what hee inioyneth them: then the reaſon therof. The thing he enioyneth is this; Hold faſt that which thou haſt; that is, hold as it were with both hands, that little meaſure of faith and grace which thou haſt receiued from me, and in no wiſe part with the ſame. This Commandement hath beene before expounded, Chap. 2. verſ. 25.

The reaſons to enforce this Commandement are two. One going before it, in theſe wordes; I come ſhortly: That is, either in the generall iudgement, or by death vnto thee particularly. Before this reaſon is put a note of attention, Behold; to giue vs to vnderſtand, that the ſpeedy comming of Chriſt vnto vs, either by death in particular, or in iudgement generall, is a matter of great moment neuer to be forgotten, but laid vp & treaſured euen in the bottome of our hearts. Herein we muſt not flatter our ſelues, and ſay with the bad ſeruant; Mat. 24. 48, My maſter doth foreſlowe his comming: for that is the cauſe of ſo much wickednesſe and impenitencie as is in the world. But rather with an ancient (a) Father, thinke we euer heare the ſound of his trumpet. a Ierome.

This dayly perſwaſion of the ſpeedy comming of Chriſt, is of notable vſe. For firſt, it will daunt the moſt deſperate wretch that is, and make him to tremble in himſelfe, and reſtraine him from many ſinnes. And if a man belong to God, and be yet a looſe liuer, this perſwaſion will rowze him out of his ſins, and make him turne vnto God, by vſing the meanes of repentance: for who would not ſeeke to ſaue his ſoule, if he were perſwaded that Chriſt were now comming to giue him his finall reward? Secondly if a man haue grace and haue repented, and do beleeue; this perſwaſiõ is a notable means to make him conſtant in euery good dutie, both of pietie to God, and of charitie towards his brethren. Thirdly, this ſerueth to comfort any perſon that is in affliction: for when hee ſhall beleeue this which Chriſt hath ſaid, I come ſhortly: he cannot but thinke but his deliuerance is at hand; for at his comming, hee bringeth perfect redemption to all his Elect.

The ſecond reaſon is ſet after the commandement; that no man take thy crowne: that is, the crowne of thy glory, euen euerlaſting life. This muſt not be reſtrayned to the miniſter of this Church, taking it only for the crowne of his miniſtery, though it bee alſo vnderſtood of him; but the ſame muſt bee referred to the whole Church: as if our Sauiour Chriſt ſhould ſay; If thou holde not faſt thy faith and other graces, thou wilt looſe the crowne of glorie that is ordayned for thee.

Hence ſome gather, that a man ordained to life may finally periſh, becauſe another may haue that crowne which was ordained for him. But this is a flat abuſe of this, and ſuch like Texts of ſcripture: for the words are not abſolute, that a man may looſe his crowne; but conditionall: Hold faſt, or elſe thou ſhalt periſh, and looſe eternall life, though it bee ordained for thee. Now the vſe of ſuch ſpeeches, is not to ſignifie falling from grace, but to ſhew vnto vs our owne weaknes in our ſelues;

that

that we might acknowledge, that if wee were left of God wholly to our ſelues, we could not but periſh. Therefore they ſerue to ſtir vp the child of God to humble himſelfe in the acknowledgement of his owne weakeneſſe, vnto a carefull vſing of the meanes to come to ſaluation. Like as a father that takes his childe and ſets him on a horſe, guiding the horſe with one hand, and holding him with the other; and then ſaith vnto the child, take heed leaſt thou fall: Not meaning thereby that the childe ſhall fall, but intending to make him ſit faſter; & to let him know that if he ſhould leaue him, he would fal.

Secondly, Chriſt vſeth ſuch ſpeeches, that thereby hee may make his Church perſeuer in grace vnto the end: for all exhortations and threatnings in Gods word, are inſtruments of perſeuerance in grace vnto Gods children: becauſe as God hath appointed who ſhall bee ſaued certainly, ſo hee hath ordayned certaine meanes to bring the ſame to paſſe: part whereof are exhortations & threatnings, which doe not import any finall relapſe, but ſerue as meanes & cauſes of perſeuerance: and for this end, doth Chriſt here bid this Church, hold faſt, leſt another take her crowne.

In this threatning wee may note, that when God withdrawes his grace from one man, or his bleſſings from any one people for the abuſe thereof, hee hath others ready to beſtow the ſame vpō, who will vſe the ſame well: when Iudas was cut off from the Apoſtleſhip, Matthias was choſen in his roome: and when the Iewes by infidelitie fell away from God, he had the Gentiles in ſtore to ingraffe in their ſtead; for the the arme of God is not ſhortned. When any one people ſhall abuſe his Goſpel, he can giue it to another that will bring foorth the fruit thereof, Mat. 21.43.

The vſe. This muſt bee thought vpon, for by Gods mercy wee are now Gods people, and doe inioy his Goſpell; but wee muſt not flatter our ſelues herewith, for if wee abuſe the ſame, wee muſt know that hee hath another Nation in ſtore, whom wee now contemne, whither hee can ſend his Goſpel, and cauſe them to bring forth the plentifull fruits thereof. Wee therefore muſt imbrace and hold faſt this bleſſing of God which now wee inioy, and ſhew foorth the power of obedience, or elſe God will take it from vs. And we know not how neere this iudgement is, ſeeing other particular iudgements haue not brought vs to repent. And what elſe meane the rumors of warres? are they not Gods warnings, bidding vs holde faſt his Goſpel, or elſe it will bee taken from vs? Although therefore wee looſe all other things; as honour, riches, lands, or life it ſelfe; yet let vs holde faſt our crowne: When the Arke of God is gone, no glorie is left, 1. Sam. 4.21.

Verſ. 12. Him that ouercommeth, will I make a pillar in the Temple of my God; & he ſhall goe no more out: and I will write vpon him the Name of my God, and the Name of the Citie of my God, which is the new Ieruſalem, which commeth downe out of heauen from my God, and I will write vpon him my new Name.

Verſ. 13. Let him that hath an eare, heare what the Spirit ſaith vnto the Churches.

Theſe wordes are the concluſion of this Epiſtle, which containeth two parts. Firſt, a promiſe, in the twelfth verſ. Secondly, a commandement in the 13. for the promiſe: In it wee are to obſerue two points; The partie to whom it is made; and the thing promiſed. The partie is, he that ouercommeth, of whom we haue ſpoken before: for this promiſe hath beene propounded ſixe times, for ſubſtance the ſame, though in other tearmes. Yet here the very word Ouercommeth doth giue vs to vnderſtand, that he that would haue his ſeruice pleaſing to God, muſt diſpoſe himſelfe to a battell or combate, (for ouercomming preſuppoſeth a fight.) The enemies which he is to fight againſt are ſpirituall: to wit, his owne corrupt nature, the wicked world, and the deuill: and in this ſpirituall combate a man muſt be a good ſouldier, before hee can bee a good Chriſtian: for all theſe enemies will ſeeke to draw him backe and hinder him, ſo ſoone as he ſhall any way endeuour to pleaſe God. Indeed, God could haue freed his ſeruants from all temptations, but hee will not; it is Gods pleaſure by temptations to haue his ſeruants tryed. Whereby it is manifeſt that they are deceiued, that imagine the ſtate of a Chriſtian to be a freedome from all miſeries and temptations, or a ſtate of eaſe wherein is no ſtriſe or trouble to diſquiet the mind; nay, it is a ſouldiers condition in which he that would ouercome, muſt wage a perpetuall battell againſt all his enemies; both within him and without him, and that vnto death.

The thing promiſed: will I make a pillar in the houſe of my God, and hee ſhall goe no more out. Heere Chriſt doth moſt notably expreſſe the ſtate and condition of eternall life; In the deſcription whereof he doth allude to the cuſtome & practiſe of men, who minding to perſerue the memorie of their names after their death, vſed to erect durable Pillars of wood or ſtone, in ſome towne, valley, or mountain; with their name engrauen or written thereon. This practiſe is common in humane hyſtories: and [a] Abſolon wanting iſſue, ſet vp a Pillar with his owne name vpon it, in the Kings dale, thereby to continue his remembrance with poſteritie. The meaning then is: as if Chriſt had ſaid. Others for the continuing of their memorie after their death, doe in ſome ſpeciall place erect ſome durable pillar of wood or ſtone, with their owne names written or engrauen thereon; But to him that ouercommeth, I will not ſet vp ſuch a pillar, but euen make him a pillar durable and euerlaſting, whoſe memorie ſhall alwayes continue.

[a] 2. Sam. 18. 18.

He addeth further, he ſhall bee a pillar in the Temple of my God: as if hee ſhould ſay; others ſet vp their pillars in valleyes and mountaines, or ſuch places where ſome notable exployt hath bin wrought; but the place which I will chooſe (ſaith Chriſt) is the temple of my God: that is, the Church tryumphant: which was figured by the Temple in Ieruſalem, and by the Taberuacle; as we may ſee, Heb. 9.9, and Reuel. 21.3, for thoſe were two places where Gods people worſhipped him: & where God teſtified his preſence in a ſpeciall manner vnto his people. And ſo in the true Temple, the kingdome of heauen, Gods ſaints and angels doe worſhip him immediately; where God is preſent with them in moſt glorious & comfortable maner. This then is Chriſts meaning: he ſhall not onely be a part of that Temple, but an excellent part, euen a pillar in the triumphant Church in heauen. And to ſhew what is meant by this temple, Chriſt calleth it the temple of his God; therby noting the higheſt heauen. Where obſerue, that God is called Chriſtes God; which argueth inferiorite; and therefore it muſt be vnderſtood of Chriſt, as hee is man, and as he is mediator: in which reſpect he receiueth from his Father all his offices, and power to execute the ſame. But as Chriſt is God, he is equall with his Father, and receiueth nothing from him.

And to inſtruct is yet further heerein, (Chriſt ſaith) Hee ſhall goe no more out. When men erected pillars for their memoriall, in proceſſe of time they would weare away; and therefore they cauſed them to be renewed, or els their remembrance thereby would not continue: but he that is once made a meber of the tryumphant Church, ſhall there remaine for euer and euer: and no time ſhall euer come, wherein he ſhall ceaſe to bee a pillar in the ſame.

Further, in the pillars erected by men, their names were written or engrauen: And to this practiſe Chriſt alludeth, ſaying; that hee that is made a pillar in the triumphant Church, ſhall haue names written on him; theſe names are three. I. The Name of my God: that is, I will make it manifeſt, that this man is indeed the ſonne of God, and that God is all in all vnto him. The ſecond Name is; The Name of the Cittie of my God: By Cittie, he meaneth not the tryumphant Church, but the place where the tryumphant Church ſhall be; to wit, the higheſt heauen: as it is taken, Reuel. 21.10. So that hereby Chriſt would teach vs thus much; that hee which ouercommeth, ſhall bee knowne to be a Cittizen of heauen, and that the priuiledges of that kingdom belong vnto him.

And leſt any ſhould doubt, what is meant by the Cittie of God, Chriſt here deſcribed it: firſt, by the reſemblance thereof, calling it Ieruſalem: becauſe that Cittie, in regard of the Temple eſpecially, was a figure of the kingdome of heauen. Secondly, he calleth it, the new Ieruſalem: that is, the place of the tryumphant Church, euen the higheſt heauen: Which is not called new in reſpect of being, for it was from the beginning; but in reſpect of the manner of reuealing and manifeſting it. for in the old Teſtament, the New Ieruſalem was reuealed to the

Iewes

Iewes onely, and that obſcurely: but vnder the kingdome of Chriſt, it is more fully reuealed not only to the Iewes, but to all the world. Thirdly, he addeth that it doth now deſcend out of heauen from his God. Therein anſwering to an obiection; for it might bee ſaid, this temple of God in heauen is ſo farre off, that wee cannot aſcend or attaine vnto it, how then ſhall we come thither? Chriſt anſwereth, that this new Ieruſalem commeth downe from God out of heauen. Queſt. How (will ſome ſay) can heauen come out of heauen? Anſw. As Paul ſaith of Chriſt, that hee was crucified among the Galatians before their eyes, becauſe his crucifying was ſo liuely repreſented vnto them in the Miniſterie of the Goſpel. So here, heauen may be ſaid to come downe from God out of heauen, in regard of the preaching of the Goſpel, which doth moſt viſibly repreſent and ſet open heauen vnto vs, that Gods people may enter therein: by the faithfull embracing whereof, we become citizens with the Saints, and of the houſehold of God, Ephe. 2.19.

The third name which ſhall bee written on him, is Chriſts new name: whereby is not meant any title of Chriſt, as Ieſus, Mediatour, &c; but the dignitie, power, and glorie of Chriſt. Queſt. How can that bee called new, ſeeing hee had power and glorie from all Eternitie? Anſw. It is called newe, becauſe it is receiued of Chriſt, as hee is Mediator, God incarnate, beeing that which was giuen to him after his death and paſſion: ſtanding in his riſing againe; in his aſcenſion and ſitting at the right hand of his Father. Hereof Paul ſaith, Phil. 2.9. God gaue him a Name aboue euery name; that is dignitie, power, and glorie: as it is expounded, Heb. 2.7. And this glorie, power and dignitie, will Chriſt giue to them that ouercome. And thus we haue eternall life ſet out vnto vs by the authour of life himſelfe. The ſumme whereof is this: That hee which ouercommeth ſhall bee made a true member of the tryumphant Church, and there continue for euer: and ſhall haue three Names written on him: The Name of God, hauing this made euident, that hee is the childe of God: The Name of Gods Citie: being made partaker of the priuiledges of Gods kingdome of heauen. The newe Name of Chriſt, communicating with Chriſt in his glorie and maieſtie.

And Chriſt doth thus deſcribe life eternall vnto vs for ſpeciall cauſes; which may bee theſe. I. To comfort them which haue care to keepe faith and a good conſcience; and to encourage them againſt all hindrances and miſeries of this life; for what can more harten a man in good duties, than to ſet before him his recompence and reward? Wherby we learne that in all miſeries and troubles that may befall vs for the maintenance of true religion and good conſcience; we muſt comfort our ſelues and not faint. And to encourage vs herein, wee are carefully to propound and ſet before vs, the due conſideration of life eternal; for this it was that cauſed (a) Moſes to deſpiſe worldly honour, and to chooſe affliction with the people of God. Wee muſt alſo looke vnto Chriſt, (b) who for the ioy that was ſet before him, endured the croſſe, and deſpiſed ſhame. Souldiers that are vncerten of any reward, are yet content vnder their Generall to aduenture their liues at his command: how much more then ought Chriſtian ſouldiers to fight manfully, and ſtand faſt in all troubles for Chriſts ſake, who hath ſet before them ſuch a great reward?

b Heb.12.2.

Secondly, it is thus deſcribed, to bring Gods people to a view and taſte of life eternall, that thereby they may the more affect it. Many caſt off all care of Religion and good conſcience, for the preſent delights of earthly things: they can ſee no goodneſſe nor pleaſure in ſpirituall things: The ſweetneſſe of earthly pleaſures puts mens mouthes out of taſte, in regard of any reliſh of life eternall: but this muſt not be ſo with vs; wee muſt bee of Moſes minde, who deſired to ſee the Land of Canaan when he was not permitted to enter into it; and therevpon God tooke him vp into Mount Nebo, and ſhewed it vnto him: So, conſidering Chriſt hath thus largely deſcribed this kingdome vnto vs, wee muſt labour to comprehend in our vnderſtandings, and in our hearts to poſſeſſe by faith, ſomething of life eternall, though we cannot as yet fully inherite the ioyes and pleaſures thereof.

Thirdly, it is thus deſcribed, to teach vs to practiſe Pauls rule. 1. *Tim.*6. 12. Namely, to paſſe through all the miſeries and troubles of this world, and to take holde of eternall life. This is a moſt neceſſarie dutie, but yet little practiſed: men with both hands lay hold vpon the things of this world, vpon riches and pleaſures; but who conſidereth what is prepared by Chriſt in heauen for them that ouercome? and who laboureth to lay holde thereof, and to keepe that ſure, though he looſe all things elſe?

Laſtly, this deſcription of eternall life, here ſerueth to make the people of God to feare no death, thogh it were moſt cruell and terrible; for death is but a ſtraite doore, whereby the childe of God muſt paſſe to all glorie and happineſſe, when he ſhal be made a pillar in Gods temple. Thus much generally of the thing promiſed: Nowe followe in particular the parts thereof.

Firſt, whereas Chriſt promiſeth to make them that ouercomme, pillars and chiefe members in the Church tryumphant; Hereby we are taught to labour to become true members of Gods Church in this life. For life eternall muſt begin here, and they that would be pillars in his Church tryumphant, muſt now become members of his Church militant: for not onely Miniſters & teachers are pillars in Gods Church, though they be chiefe pillars therein; but euery one yong and old, man and woman that is a true beleeuer. And thus ſhalt thou become a pillar in Gods Church on earth, by maintaining & vpholding the Goſpel of Chriſt; which thou muſt doe, partly by teaching it to thoſe, whom thou art bound to teach within the compaſſe of they calling: and partly by good example of life and conuerſation; and chiefly by a true and bold profeſſion thereof, not onely in time of peace, but euen in the greateſt tryals and afflictions.

Secondly hee addeth; Hee will make him a pillar in the Temple of God; that is, in the church tryumphant; for in the new Teſtament wee haue no other Temples, but Gods Church tryumphant and militant. Hereby then we muſt learne to renounce that ignorant opinion of the world, who iudge euery materiall church to be the temple of God, and as holy as the Church in Ieruſalem was. But the diſtinction of place and place in regard of holineſſe which was vnder the Law, is taken away by Chriſt. The houſe is now as holy as the Church; Churches indeed muſt be regarded and maintained, not for holineſſe, but for order ſake: now men may euery where offer the calues of their lips, and lift vp pure hands from a pure heart vnto God.

Thirdly, I will writ vpon him the name of my God: that is, whereas God the Father is my God firſt, I will alſo communicate vnto him the ſame name of God; and he ſhall haue God euen my God, to be his God alſo. By this it is plaine, that no man can haue fellowſhip with God but by Chriſt: wee muſt not looke to haue immediate fellowſhip with God of our ſelues, or by any other, but by Chriſt: God heares not, God helpes not, God ſaues not, but by Chriſt; nay, God is no God vnto vs, out of Chriſt. For firſt, he is a God vnto Chriſt, and then in him and by him vnto vs. Therefore if wee would call vpon God, wee muſt call on him through Chriſt; if wee would giue him thankes, it muſt bee in and by Chriſt; for in him onely are wee heard. If we would know God, it muſt bee by Chriſt, for hee is the very engrauen Image of his Father, in whom is manifeſted the wiſedome, iuſtice, and mercie of God, in him dwelleth the fulneſſe of the God-head: and to conceiue of God out of Chriſt, is to make God an idoll in the braine. Laſtly, if we would receiue any temporall bleſſing from God, it muſt bee in and by Chriſt; as meate, drinke and clothing. For if wee receiue them from God out of Chriſt, wee are but vſurpers of them, and the vſe thereof ſhall turne to our further condemnation.

Fourthly, he ſaith: I will write on him the name of the citie of my God: that is, he ſhal haue the priuiledges of the kingdom of heauen. We do all deſire, and looke for the inheritance of Gods kingdome after this life: therefore heere wee muſt liue as citizens of Gods kingdome; conforming our ſelues to Gods commandements, abandoning all ſin, and ſo liuing in faith and a good conſcience vnto the end, that after this life we may aſſuredly perſwade our ſelues, we ſhall be made partakers of the priuiledges of this kingdo.

Fiftly,

Fiftly it is ſaid: this Citie of God, is the new Ieruſalem, which commeth downe out of heauen from God; that is, by the preaching of the Goſpel. Hereby we are taught more carefully to ſeeke to attaine to the kingdome of God, for behold Gods endleſſe mercie herein: our ſinnes ſhut heauen gates againſt vs, but by the blood of Chriſt he hath opened them; and by the Miniſtery of the Goſpell, hee makes heauen come downe vnto men: God therefore would not ſee vs damned; hee hath made open away, euen a new and liuing way whereby wee may come to heauen and eſcape hell. God hath brought downe heauen among men, wee muſt therfore with the people in Iohn Baptiſts time, violently enter into this kingdom, and ſtriue to take it by force. Matt. 11.12, Laſtly hee ſaith; I will write my new name on him: that is, I wil make him partaker of that glorie and digni ie wherewith I my ſelfe am glorified ſince my death and reſurrection. Marke this: all that after this life muſt haue Chriſts new name, muſt in this life become new creatures; So Paul ſaith; (d) If any man bee in Chriſt, he is a new creature. And againe, (e) Neither circumciſion nor vncircumciſion auayleth any thing, but a new creation. Would we then partake with Chriſt in his glorie? we muſt heere bee partaker of his grace: herein ſtandeth true Religion to become new creatures; and not in bare knowledge and profeſſion. We muſt therefore put of (f) the old man which is corrupt with ſinne, and be renued in the ſpirit of our minds, putting on the new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe. But if we content our ſelues with the Image of the olde man wherein wee were borne, wee ſhall neuer partake of Chriſts glorie; for this new name muſt be giuen to the new creature, the old man and it cannot agree together.

Verſ. 13. Let him that hath an eare heare what the ſpirite ſayth vnto the Churches.

This concluſion hath been handled in in the former Epiſtles.

Verſ. 14. And vnto the Angell of the Church of the Laodiceans write: Theſe things ſaith Amen, that faithfull and true witneſſe, that beginning of the creatures of God.

Heere followeth the ſeuenth and laſt Epiſtle, to the Church of the Laodiceans: whereto is prefixed a commaundement vnto Iohn, whereby hee is authoriſed to pen the ſame, in theſe words: And vnto the Angell of the Church of the Laodiceans write, which hath beene handled before.

The Epiſtle it ſelfe hath three parts, A Preface: the ſubſtance or matter of the Epiſtle, and the concluſion. The Preface is this 14. verſe, wherein is ſet downe, in whoſe name this Epiſtle is written; to wit, Chriſts: who is heere deſcribed by two arguments: I. hee is called Amen, which is that faithfull and true witneſſe. II. He is the beginning of the creatures of God.

For the firſt (Amen,) is an Hebrew Aduerbe of aſſeueration, ſignifying as much as verily, truely, or certainely. This title is giuen to Chriſt, & the reaſon thereof is expreſſed in the wordes following, which are a full expoſition of the ſame. Amen, is that faithfull and true witneſſe: So that Chriſt is called Amen, to teſtifie that hee is a witneſſe, a faithfull witneſſe, and a true witneſſe; which title was giuen to Chriſt in the 5. verſe of the firſt Chapter: where it was expounded, and reaſons rendred why hee is ſo called. Vnto which title is heere added, that hee is a true witneſſe; becauſe hee ſpeakes the truth, according as euerie thing is in it ſelfe, without errour, deceit, or falſhood, for that which hee receiueth from his Father, is the will of his Father, which is the Rule of all truth.

That we may come to the right vſe of this Argument; we muſt firſt ſearch out the ends, for which Chriſt is here called Amen, that a faithfull and true witneſſe, which by the contents of the Epiſtle, we may eaſily geſſe to be theſe. Firſt, to ſet forth himſelfe vnto the Angell of this Church, an example, and patern of fidelitie in his Miniſtrie: in the duties wherof, hee had been ſlacke and negligent: Chriſt therefore by his owne example, would teach him without reſpect of perſons, to inſtruct the Church of God truely, and faithfully. How this dutie is to bee performed, hath beene ſhewed before, Chap. 1.5, And not onely to the Angell of this Church of Laodicea, but alſo to all the Church, and to all them that professe themselues to be his members, doth Christ propound himselfe an example of two most worthy vertues: Faith and Truth. For the first: Faith is a vertue, whereby a man makes good all his lawful words, promises, oths, leagues, compacts, and bargaines whatsoeuer, so as his word is as sure as an obligation, as we vse to speake. Truth is another vertue, whereby a man without fraude, lye, or deceit, speaketh the truth from his heart, that is necessarie to be knowne for his owne good, the glorie of God, and the good of others.

Wee therefore must set before our eyes this president of our Sauiour Christ: As he is a witnesse, yea a faithfull and true witnesse, without any faining or falshood, so let vs labour to shew our selues faithfull in all lawfull promises: and true in all our speeches, that so by these verues, we may be knowne to be like vnto Christ, through our whole liues and conuersations. Secondly, Christ is here called Amen, to induce this Church of Laodicia, to apply effectually vnto her selfe the word of God, whether threatnings or promises; This Church had beene negligent in the duties of Religion, which came for want of applying Gods word vnto the selues. The right maner of applying Gods word is this: In Gods word we are to consider the lawe, and the Gospell. In the lawe, there are Commaundements and threatnings: now a man must apply to his owne person and life Gods Commaundements particularly; that thereby he may come to know his particular sinnes: then hee must also apply the threatnings of God vnto himselfe, that thereby hee may bee humbled through the sight of his misery, and so made fit & capable of Gods grace. Thus the prodigall sonne applyed the law vnto himselfe, when he sayd, [a] I haue sinned against heauen and against thee, and am no more worthy to bee called thy Sonne. So did [b] Daniell, and [c] Ezrah, by applying the law vnto themselues, humble themselues, and their people: for this is the way to humble any man, & to make him fit to receue grace: *for the law is our schoolmaster to bring vs to Christ. Gal.*3.24, and the want of this speciall application of the law, was a cause of the dulnesse of the Laodicians, and is also of our slackenesse in Religion at this day.

c Ezra.9.

Secondly, the Gospel also must bee applyed: not onely by beleeuing it to bee true, as the Papists teach: but also by applying vnto our selues particularly the promises of righteousnesse and life euerlasting by Christ. According as Paul saith, [d] I desire to win Christ, & to be found in him, not hauing mine owne righteousnesse which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ. Vers.15, Let vs (saith he) as many as be perfect bee thus minded, teaching euery one this speciall duie of particular application. For as saint Iohn saith, he that by faith doth not apply the promises of the Gospell particularly to himselfe ([e]) makes God a lyer. And the want of this application is the cause of negligence in Religion, and of so many luke-warme Gospellers as be at this day. For it is not sufficient to know the Gospel to be true, or to bee able to teach it vnto others, vnlesse we can thus apply it to our selues. This then serues to proue that iustifying faith must not onely be a bare assent to the truth of the Gospel, but a speciall faith which doth apply particularly vnto a man, those promises which are propounded concerning righteousnes, and life euerlasting by Christ.

d Philip.3.8. 9 10.

e 1.Ioh.5.10

The second argument and title wherby Christ is described is this; that hee is the beginning of the creatures of God. The meaning whereof is, that Christ is he that is the Creator of all Gods creatures that were created: so it is sayd ([f]) By him all things were created in heauen and in earth: and though this be true, yet I doubt not but that Christ is here called the beginning of the creatures of God, for a further respect; namely, because he is the beginning of the new creature in regeneration: so it is sayd, ([g]) Wee are the workemanship of God, created in Christ vnto good workes. So that euery regenerate person is a new creature; to which purpose it is said of Christ: ([h]) When he shall giue his soule an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, &c. Because Christ is the roote and seed of all that are borne againe. How is Christ (will some say) the beginning of a new creature? Answ. Two wayes: I. As he is the author of regeneration; for hee is the cause whereby a man is regenerate, in which respect he is called the father of eternitie. Esay.9.6. And againe he saith: Behold, ([i]) I and the children whom thou hast beſt giuen mee. Secondly, becauſe hee is the matter and roote, out of which a new creature doth ſpring: and ſo the Church is called (k) bone of his bone, and fleſh of his fleſh: alluding vnto Adam and Eue, who were a type of Chriſt & his church. For as Eue was taken out of Adams ſide, ſo the Church and euery member thereof, ſprang of the blood that iſſued out of Chriſts ſide, which was of infinite merit, being the blood of him that was God.

k Ephe. 5. 30

The end why Chriſt in this Epiſtle is called the beginning of Gods creatures (as we ſee by the contents thereof) is to meete with this common vice of this church; that they had more care to ſeeme to bee religious, then to bee religious indeed: now Chriſt would by this his title giue them to vnderſtand, that their chiefeſt care muſt bee, to become new creatures indeed. And no doubt this is the fault of our dayes; our care is leſſe for the power of godlineſſe, then for the name thereof; wee more reſpect ſhew than ſubſtance, and ſhadow than truth it ſelfe. Which ought not to bee, for if wee would bee in Chriſt, we muſt become new creatures: to exerciſe our ſelues in the word and Sacraments, and Prayers are good in their kind; but without this new creation, they are not ſufficient to ſaluation.

Secondly, hereby he would meet with this ſpeciall pride of theirs, whereby they did boaſt themſelues, to bee rich and to want nothing. But Chriſt tels them, that there was no dignitie in any thing out of this, whereby in Chriſt they are made newe creatures. We therefore muſt learne by them, not to bee puffed vp with outward priuiledges of nobilitie, wealth, ſtrength, or ſuch like, as many doe: but hee that would reioyce muſt reioyce in this, that hee is a new creature in Chriſt Ieſus.

Further, by calling himſelfe, the beginning of the creatures of GOD, Chriſt would teach them and vs, that hee doth loue his Church, and preſerue the ſame. Eue was created by the hand of God, not a part from Adam, but of his ribbe; for this end, that he might loue and protect her, & that ſhe might reuerence and ſerue him: Euen ſo euery new creature ſpringeth out of Chriſts heart blood, which God hath ſo wrought, that wee might know how Chriſt hath loued vs, and that wee ought to magnifie and honour him: Adam was not the author, but the matter onely, whereof Eue was made: but Chriſt is both the author, and the matter of our regeneration: wherin appereth his exceeding loue vnto vs. And looke as the roote ſpends it ſelfe for the preſeruation of the braunches: ſo did Ghriſt ſpend his owne blood for the ſaluation of his Church.

Fourthly, whereas hee is called, The beginning of his Regeneration; hence wee may gather, that the Doctrine of the Church of Rome is erronious, which teach, that a man in his firſt conuerſion, hath vſe of his naturall free-will, and can diſpoſe himſelfe in the act of his Regeneratiō. But the creature of God cannot diſpoſe himſelfe in his creation; now euerie man that is regenerate, is the new creature of God; and therefore hath no power to diſpoſe himſelfe in his new creation.

Verſ. 15. I know thy workes: thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wereſt cold or hot.

Verſ. 16. Therefore becauſe thou art luke-warme, and neither cold nor hot; it will come to paſſe, that I ſhall ſpew thee out of my mouth.

In theſe words, and ſo forward to the 21. verſ. is contayned the ſubſtance, or matter of this Epiſtle: and it hath two parts: A diſpraiſe, verſ. 15. 16 17. And Counſell. verſ. 18. 19. 20. They are diſpraiſed for two vices: firſt, luke-warmeneſſe, verſ. 15. 16. Secondly, for their pride. verſ. 17.

I know thy workes. This is a generall reproofe, ſignifying thus much: All thy workes are knowne vnto mee, and I vtterly diſlike them. Then followeth the reaſon of this diſlike, Thou art neither cold nor hot: which is a compariſon borrowed from waters, wherof there be three ſorts: hot, cold, and luke-warme. Now hot and cold waters doe not ſo much annoy the ſtomacke, as luke-warme water doth: they are ſometimes comfortable to the ſtomacke, but luke-warme water doth diſquiet it, till it bee caſt vp, and to theſe three kindes of waters, hee compareth three ſorts of men. By cold water, he vnderſtanding ſuch as are enemies to Religion: as at this day are the Iewes and Turkes, and other barbarous people. By hot water, he vnderſtandeth men that are earneſt and zealous of the truth. So that when hee ſayth of this Church, Thou art neither cold nor hot, his meaning is; thou art neither an open enemie, nor truely zealous of my Goſpell,

I would thou wereſt cold or hot: Chriſt wiſheth not ſimply, that they were enemies vnto him; but onely in reſpect of that eſtate of luke-warmnes, in which they were; as if hee ſhould ſay: I had leuer thou wereſt either cold or hot, than thus luke-warme as thou art. For if we ſhould vnderſtand it ſimply, wee ſhould make Chriſt to deſire that men ſhould bee his enemies. By luke-warme men, he vnderſtandeth a people, who are in ſhew Gods Church, but in truth wante the power of godlyneſſe, and the zeale of the ſpirit. Becauſe thou art ſuch (ſaith Chriſt to this Church) therefore I will ſpew thee out of my mouth: that is, looke as hee that hath drunke luke-warme water, cannot abide it on his ſtomacke, but muſt needs ſpew it vp againe; ſo am I wearie of this thy ſecurite, I cannot abide it, and therefore will I caſt thee off from all fellowſhip with mee, and make of thee which art a Church in ſhew, to be no Church.

Thus we ſee their fault, namely, luke-warmeneſſe; the greatneſſe whereof, hee aggrauates; firſt by comparing it with the extreames, cold and hot, both which he preferreth before it, as may appeare by his wiſh and deſire: And ſecondly, by the puniſhment thereof; namely vtter reiection.

The vſe. Hereby wee muſt examine our ſelues, whither this fault may not iuſtly be charged vpon vs: after due triall, it will appeare, that wee are guiltie of this ſinne. The which that it may the better appear, I will note the ſeuerall kindes of luke-warme Chriſtians.

The firſt luke-warme Profeſſor, is the Papiſt; as the tenour of his Religion, and the manner of his worſhip of God, doth plainely ſhewe, for hee doth part ſtakes with Chriſt in the matter of ſaluation, affirming that he receiueth frō Chriſt to work out his owne ſaluation, and ſo aſſumeth part of Chriſts glorie to himſelfe.

Secondly, all time-ſeruers are luke-warme Goſpellers: that is, all ſuch as alter their Religion with time and ſtate. and of this ſort are the bodie of our people, who profeſſe themſelues to be of the ſame Religion the Prince is of: which ſheweth euidently, what they will doe in time to come, namely, turne with the time, as their Forefathers haue done:

The Third ſort, are the followers of Nicodemus, who came to Chriſt by night onely: that is, ſuch as ſay and thinke that they may goe to maſſe with their bodies, if they keep their hearts vnto God, theſe halt betweene two opinions, and neither ſerue God nor Baell.

Fourthly, all Mediators: ſuch as will make pacification between the Religion of the Proteſtant and the Papiſts; ſo holding our Religion, as not caring ro embrace theirs alſo, becauſe they think they differ not in ſubſtance, but in circumſtances onely. Let theſe pretend what they will, they are in heart Laoditians.

Fiftly, all Worldlings: which as Chriſt ſayth, Luk.16.13. Serue God and Mammon, God and the world by ſetting their heart vpon riches. Theſe men abound euerie where, for though they heare God in the miniſtrie of his word, and as it were touch him in the Sacrament, yet their hearts are farre from him, running after their couetouſneſſe, Ezech.33.31, and who are ſuch, their conſciences will witneſſe: yea their behauiour proclaimes it to the world; for though they wil heare the word, yet their wit and ſtrength is ſpent vpon the world, and the thinges thereof.

Sixtly, thoſe that profeſſe Chriſts Religion in outward actions of his worſhip, but yet in their liues, giue themſelues to the common ſinnes of the time, ſome to drunkenneſſe, to fornication, to couetouſneſſe or crueltie: ſome to this ſinne, and ſome to that. To this ſort, we muſt referre thoſe, that in word approoue Religion, and yet their hearts delight is, in garniſhing themſelues with the monſtrous, brutiſh, and irreligious formes of ſtrange and forraine attire; Theſe ſpend their time and wit in the decking of their bodies, and ſo ſuffer their ſoules to goe to wracke; when as apparell ſhould bee an occaſion to put vs in minde of a ſhame through ſinne: and by modeſt attire, we ſhould expreſſe the vertues of the heart, but theſe hereby profeſſe the vanitie of their minde.

Now, though we be not intangled with theſe groſſe ſinnes, yet we cannot excuſe our ſelues from this ſinne of luke-warmeneſſe. For the want of zeale of Gods glorie, of loue to his truth, of care to obey his commaundements, and to keepe good conſcience, the want of hatred of ſinne, what argue all theſe but luke-warmenes? Herein wee muſt lay our hand vpon our mouth with Iob; for wee cannot plead with God, no not for this common ſinne. But that we may be out of all doubt that this ſinne of luke-warmeneſſe, hath infected our congregations, as it did this Church of Laodicea: I will make it plaine by the ſignes thereof, which are common amonge vs, that ſo wee may the better know our fearefull eſtate.

The firſt ſigne is, Negligence in the duties of that true Religion which we profeſſe: this appeareth ſundrie waies; for firſt, howſoeuer wee come to the aſſemblies where the word is preached, yet fewe doe profite there, by increaſe in the knowledge of that Religion which is taught, and in the amendment of life. This may any man ſee to be true, that hath halfe an eye to looke into the ſtate of our aſſemblies, and mens owne conſciences will beerein witneſſe againſt them. Againe, where Gods word is ordinarily heard, there are verie fewe that ſpend any time in ſearching out, and trying whether the thinges bee ſo or not which are taught them. Nay, men wil not be at coſt to buy a Bible: and if they haue one, yet they will not take paines to reade the ſame, at leaſt in ſuch a conſtant courſe as they ought to doe. Thirdly the *L*ords Sabbath is broken, for though moſt men at ſet times will come into the congregation; yet there is not that priuate ſanctifying of the Sabbath after the congregations are diſſolued, which Gods word requireth; but men betake themſelues to their own affaires, and to outward delights; to omit thoſe that haue no care at all of ſanctifying the Sabbath in any ſort. Now theſe perſons muſt needs want both knowledge, obedience, and all ſound grace that will not ſet apart ſome time, wherein they ſhould employ themſelues in Gods word: and by theſe ſignes it is euident, that there is a greeuous diſeaſe of negligence in the duties of Religion, that infects our congregations. Now where this negligence is, though coldneſſe be not, there cannot be zeale, and ſo luke-warmneſſe muſt needs abound.

II. Signe of luke-warmeneſſe. The Religion of moſt men is this; In the generall calling of a Chriſtian they ſhew Religion, but in the affaires of their particular callings, where is religion? In the Church they are good Chriſtians, but in practiſe of the duties of their particular callings, who ſheweth his religion? for when as men ſhould practiſe their callings according to Gods word and true godlyneſſe, they follow the deſires of their owne hearts. *L*ittle conſcience is made of lying and oppreſſion; that loue and plaine dealing, which ought to be between man and man is wanting; which prooueth them plainely to bee luke-warme Goſpellers.

III. Signe. There bee many that profeſſe themſelues to bee luke-warme, neither hot nor cold. For though all generally come to the hearing of the word, and the receiuing of the ſacraments, yet many when they ſee ſome make conſcience to become anſwerable in ſome meaſure to the word which they heare, and the Sacraments which they receiue, doe take vp in their mouthes this ſlaunder of precizeneſſe againſt them: mocking them for doing that which in the word & ſacraments thẽſelus profes ſhuld be don. Theſe men will not be enemies to the Religion of Chriſt; and they profeſſe themſelues not to bee zealous, by reproaching zeale in others: Therefore they doe more than theſe *L*aodiceans did, euen profeſſe themſelues to bee luke-warme. For hee that reproacheth another for zeale in Religion, brandeth himſelfe with this ſinne of *L*uke-warmeneſſe. And who knowes not how many of this ſort are euerie where? I dare with good conſcience ſay, our congregations generally conſiſt of ſuch. Now marke what followeth hereupon.

Firſt, that our common profeſſors of religion are in worſer caſe than heathen men, Iewes, and Turkes that knowe not Chriſt. This Chriſt teacheth in preferring cold perſons before the luke-warm; as if hee ſhould ſay; I had rather thou wereſt a Pagan, than a Profeſſor without k 2.Pet.2.21 zeale. And k Saint Peter to this purpoſe ſpeaking of ſuch faith; It had beene better they had neuer knowne the way of truth, than after they haue known it, not to obey the commaundements of God. So that vnleſſe there be further matter in vs than knowledge and bare profeſſion, our caſe is worſe than the caſe of Iewes and Turkes. Religion knowne, will not make thee better than them, but it is zeale and obedience that muſt preferre thee before them.

Secondly, from the conſideration of our eſtate, I gather that wee are in danger to be ſpewed out of the mouth of Chriſt, as luke-warme water out of the ſtomacke. This is the puniſhment heere threatned, which was written for our inſtruction, that we might know where luke-warmeneſſe takes place, there this puniſhment will follow. Wee may flatter our ſelues as the men in the old world did, & thinke all is well, neuer regarding till the iudgement come: but the truth is, that in regard of this ſinne, we are in danger to bee cut off from the Church, and from true ſocietie with Chriſt; God can doe this ſundrie wayes, either by bereauing vs of his Goſpell, and making vs as the heathen; or by ſending the enemie among vs, to deſtroy and root vs out of this land; and euen in our neighbor-countreys, and townes, hee ſets ſpectacles before vs, that by them wee may ſee how hee can ſpew vs out, & cut vs off from being a people. And thus much of the firſt fault, namely, luke-warmeneſſe.

Verſ. 17. For thou ſayſt, I am rich, and made rich, and haue need of nothing, and knoweſt not how thou art wretched and miſerable, and poore, & blinde, and naked.

Here is the ſecond ſin of this Church, namely, ſpirituall pride. The wordes depend vpon the former, as a reaſon thereof; before he charged thē with deadnes in religion, and here he painteth out the cauſe thereof; namely, ſpirituall pride of hart. As if hee ſhould ſay: thou thinkeſt thus within thy ſelfe, I am rich, for it is the manner of the ſcripture to expreſſe the thoughts of men by their ſpeeches; becauſe the thoughts of men, are as euident to Chriſt, as any mans ſpeeches can bee to another.

The vſe.

In that Chriſt doth expreſſe mens ſecret thoughts and propound the ſame in this Booke; wee may hence gather, that it is a part of Canonicall ſcripture, for it is a priuiledge of the ſcriptures to ſet down the thoughts of Countreys, of Churches, & of particular men, euen as they cōceiue them. This can no man doe in any booke of his owne deuiſing. And hence wee may gather an argumēt againſt Athieſts; That ſcriptures are the word of God, becauſe they reueale mens ſecret thoughts.

Now followeth the thought it ſelfe of the Angell and people of this Church, I am rich, that is, I haue many excellent gifts and graces of Gods ſpirite: by this effect he expreſſeth their ſpirituall pride; in ouerweening their eſtate before God. This is a common ſinne in the world, and euer hath been. Chriſt ſayd, a He came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance; by righteous, meaning ſuch as think themſelues righteous. And the b proud Phariſie in his prayer, which hee conceiued in his heart, thought himſelfe farre better, than the poore Publican, or other men. And Paul c bringeth in the Corinthians, thinking proudly of themſelues, ſaying; We are full and made rich, &c. This ſinne takes place in the Papiſts at this day; who perſwade themſelus, that they can ſatisfie Gods iuſtice by temporall works, and fulfill the law of God, and merite for themſelues, and for others.

a Luk. 5. 32.

b Luk. 18. 9, 10.

c 1.Cor.4.8.

To come to our ſelues, this ſame proud thought hath place among vs. Firſt, wee think we are rich, in regard of knowledg: both yong and old ſcorne to be catechized, becauſe they would not ſeeme to be ignorant; ſome ſticke not to profeſſe this pride by bragging thus, that they know as much for ſubſtance, as any man can teach them: when as indeed they know nothing but that wich nature wil teach a man. Secondly, men plead that they haue a moſt firme faith, ſo as they neuer doubted of Gods mercie: which is nothing but the preſumption of a proude heart, for true faith is troubled with doubting. Thirdly, men will profeſſe, that they are rich in loue, both towards God, and their neighbours, when as they loue the world, and the pleaſures thereof, more than Chriſt; and ſo haue no true loue of God in their harts. Fourthly, (to make more plain, that this ſpirituall pride raignes in mens harts) mark this: let any bodily calamity be made knowne to a man that is newly befallen him, him, oh how is hee preſently perplexed! but let Gods Miniſter out of his word, make knowne vnto him his inward fearfull eſtate: that by reaſon of ſinne, hee is in danger of Gods iudgements, and a firebrand of Hell, hee is not affraide: Worldly newes doth affright men much, when as the threatnings of the word moue them nothing. What argueth this, but that their hearts are fore-ſtalled with this falſe conceit, I am rich? The drunkard in his drunkenneſſe, the filthie perſon in his vncleanneſſe, and euerie man in his ſinne ſootheth himſelfe with this, God is mercifull, I am rich, and in his fauour, hee will not condemne me. Well, it being thus manifeſt that ſpirituall pride is our common ſin; We muſt labour to ſee it in our ſelues, and vſe all good means that it may be remooued. The means follow afterwards.

And increaſed with goods: or, am made rich: ſo the words are: theſe words are added onely for amplification to ſhew, that this church had not any ſmal portion, but an exceeding meaſure of ſpirituall pride; The doubling of the words, ſheweth the ſtrength of this conceit. Whats the cauſe that this Church was growne to ſuch an height of pride? Anſw. It may be it was knowledge, wherewith no doubt the Angell of this Church, and many therin did abound: now the holy Ghoſt ſaith, [a] That knowledge puffeth vp. This is true in all places: great knowledg, (without ſpeciall grace) great pride. This is the ſinne of the Schooles of learning; Where knowledge abounds, there pride of heart abounds, and men are puffed vp according to the meaſure of their gifts, vnleſſe by his grace and the ſight of their ſins, God doe humble them.

a 1. Cor. 8. 1.

And haue need of nothing: This is a further ſigne of their great pride, that they thought they needed not the helpe of any thinge, or any perſon beſide themſelues: And all ſuch as thinke they haue no need of the blood of Chriſt for the waſhing away of their ſinnes, doe ſurfet and abound with this ſpirituall pride of heart. This ſerues further to conuince our congregations of this damnable ſpirituall pride. If any one be ſicke in bodie, hee ſtreight ſendeth to the Phiſitian: but not one of a thouſand ſeeketh to the Miniſter till the pange of death draw neere. The ſoules diſeaſe by ſin is not felt; there is no complaint for want of the blood of Chriſt. But if wee would be emptied of this pride, wee muſt labour to ſee that wee ſtand in neede of Chriſt, and euerie droppe of his blood; till ſuch time as wee feele that in vs, there is no goodneſſe in our hearts; VVee are but the proude Laodiceans, and our caſe is wretched and damnable.

And knoweſt not how thou art wretched, and miſerable, and poore, and blinde, and naked. Chriſt intending to ſtrike this ſin of pride to the verie heart, doth here ſet downe the true cauſe thereof; to wit, Ignorance, as if hee ſhould ſay, Thou knoweſt not thine owne naturall eſtate, as thou art borne of Adam out of Chriſt, and therefore thou art proude, and thy pride maketh thee luke-warme. Then he ſheweth whereof they were ignorant, namely of their naturall eſtate.

For the firſt; Chriſt making Ignorance the cauſe of their Pride, teacheth vs that Pride is not the firſt ſin, that euer was in the world, as many both Papiſts and others haue thought. True it is, Pride is a great and mother ſinne, and the cauſe of many fowle iniquities: but yet Ignorance is a mother ſin, wherof Pride ſpringeth. The cauſe why any perſon ſwelles with pride in himſelfe, is Ignorance of his owne naturall eſtate. By this then wee are taught to learne to knowe our owne eſtate, what wee are by nature in our ſelues without Chriſt, for that is the way to pull downe our hearts. For this cauſe the Prophets of God, vſed to call men, To a ſearching of themſelues, Zeph. 2. 1, when they would bring the people to humilitie and grace, that men ſeeing their eſtate, by reaſon of their ſinnes to bee damnable, might bee humbled and cauſed to forſake themſelues, and come vnto Chriſt. And ſurely till ſuch time as men bee humbled for their ſinnes, they will neuer get ſound grace, but be as the proud Phariſie, hypocrits and diſſemblers though they haue much knowledg. But when a man hath ſearched his narurall eſtate, then beſides knowledg of himſelfe come other moſt excellent graces, as humilitie, the feare of God, and true obedience with good conſcience, And therefore firſt of all, let vs labour ro be acquainted with our own eſtate in our ſelues & with our perſonall ſins, & with Gods iudgmẽts due vnto vs for them. For this is the ground of true grace. The ſpots and blemiſhes of our bodies, we can ſoone eſpy, and wipe away: and why ſhould wee bee leſſe carefull of our ſoules, which be farre better?

That Chriſt might fully make knowne vnto them their ignorance of thēſelues, it pleaſeth him to deſcribe to thē their naturall eſtate, & ſo proportionally the naturall condition of all Churches, & of all people: which is the ſtate of mans miſerie. This he propoundeth two waies: firſt generally in theſe wordes, and knoweſt not how thou art wretched and miſerable: then by the parts thereof, which be three, Pouertie, Blindneſſe, and Nakedneſſe.

For the firſt. The word tranſlated Wretched, ſignifieth one ſubiect to calamities, griefes, and in a word, to all miſeries. And that we may know who is thus wretched, I will enter into a deſcription of mans miſerie; whereof that we may conceiue aright, two things are to bee conſidered: Firſt the roote and fountaine thereof; for therein wee ſhall beſt ſee what miſerie meaneth. This root is originall ſinne, and it hath two braunches: Firſt, that particular tranſgreſſion whereby Adam ſinned, which was not only the ſinne of his perſon, but alſo of the whole nature of man, ſpreading it ſelf to all his poſterity, Chriſt excepted. Secondly, the defacing of Gods Image, and the corrupting of mans heart, which by reaſon of the fall of our firſt parents hath in it a proneſſe vnto all ſin both in will, affection, and in all the faculties of the ſoule. In theſe two ſtands originall ſin, and in them, and with them muſt wee conceiue of mans miſery, as in the root thereof. Secondly, we muſt conceiue of mans miſery vnder the forme of puniſhmēt, hauing relation to the firſt ſin of Adam, & to the corruption of ech mans nature therby receiued. The puniſhent of ſin, muſt be conſidered ſundry waies, according to the diuers kind of mans being: either in this world, or after. For it is either in this life; or at the end of this life; or after this life. And ſo accordingly is miſery to be conſidered.

Now of the puniſhments in this life, ſome concerne the whole man, ſome the parts of man; ſome his eſtate. Puniſhmēts concerning the whole man, bee of two ſorts: The firſt is ſubiection to the wrath of GOD, whereby a man ſince Adams fall is made the child of wrath: a miſery of all miſeries: & yet the more greeuous becauſe without ſome grace, a man cannot diſcern & ſee the ſame. The ſecond, is a Bondage vnder the Diuell; wherby a man in his mind, will, & affections, is ſubiect euery way to the will of the Diuell, which though we cannot deſcribe, yet wee may thus conceiue of it. The regenerate man ſaith: I ſin, but I would not ſin. The naturall man ſaith: I ſin, and I will ſin: It is my nature to ſin, and my delight; and this was the ſtate of this Church.

Puniſhments concerning the parts of man, bee either miſeries of his ſoule, or of his body: the miſeries of his ſoule be theſe. Firſt, in the vnderſtanding, Ignorance of Gods will. And in ſundry, madneſſe, and fooliſhneſſe; and in all men pain and difficulty, both to learn & remember whatſoeuer is good, which was not in man by creation. In the conſcience alſo, be accuſations, ſecret feares, and terrours. In the will is, rebellion to Gods will: In all affections, peruerſneſſe. All which are miſeries of the ſoule.

The body alſo hath theſe miſeries. Firſt, it is ſubiect to all infirmities, ſickneſſes, diſeaſes, and aches: which are ſo many, as all the bookes of Phiſitians neither doe nor can record the ſame. Secondly, mans body is mortal, & ſubiect to tēporal deth; which no man can poſſibly auoid or preuent by all the art and skill in the world.

Puniſhments of mans eſtate, concerne either his goods, or calling. In goods there bee theſe miſeries; want of things neceſſary; for by reaſon of ſin it is a puniſhment, & in it owne nature a curſe: and all the hurts that come by the creatures: for their enmity towards man, & towards one another; as alſo their ſubiection to vanitie; all theſe be miſeries, and the puniſhments of mans ſinne. In mans calling there is miſerie: for therein man is ſubiect to trouble, to loſſes, and ſorow; which come as a puniſhment of mans firſt ſinne. And all theſe be the miſeries of man in this life.

At the end of this life, comes bodily death, the ſeparation of ſoule and bodie aſunder; which in it ſelfe is a moſt fearfull curſe, for ſo, it is the verie gate of Hell.

But after this life, is the accompliſhmēt of all miſeries, & that is eternal deſtruction and and condemnation in hell fire, which to be the end of all miſery, appeares by this; becauſe it is a ſeparation of mans perſon from the ſocietie & preſence of God: and an enduring of Gods wrath in the whole perſon euen in the place of the Diuell and damned ſoules, & that not for a time, but for euer and euer eternally. And thus we ſee what puniſhment is, and anſwerably what miſery is, wherby we may ſee what it is to be wretched: namely in a word to be ſubiect to al miſeries; whether we conſider thē in the root thereof, originall ſin; or vnder the forme of puniſhment; in this life, in the whole perſon, and in ſoule & body ſeuerally: in goods and calling: at the end of this life, and in the world to come.

The proper end that moues Chriſt to ſay to this Church, She knew not that ſhee was wretched, is this: to teach this Church and in them vs, and all Churches, to learne to knowe their owne miſeries, to feele the ſame, and to be touched in conſcience for them. We therfore muſt learne not to flatter our ſelus with hope of our good ſtate: but labor to ſee our miſerie both in ſin, & the puniſhment thereof. And ſeeing it, ſtriue to be touched with it, that we may cry with the Iewes, [a] What ſhal we do to be ſaued? for till ſuch time as this in ſome meaſure be wrought in vs, we ſhal be but luke-warme profeſſors, hauing a ſhew of godlines, but wanting the power thereof: The true ſight of our miſerie is the gift and grace of God, but yet we muſt vſe all good meanes, that we may come to ſee the ſame, & to be touched with it, that ſo we may haue hearts hereby fit to receiue the Goſpell, which containes the remedie of this our miſerie.

[a] Act.2.37.

And miſerable, that is, worthy to be pitied: this is added, not to ſet downe another thing; but to expres the greatnes of their miſery; as if he ſhould ſay, Thy miſery is not ſmall, but ſo great and ſo greeuous, as indeed thou art in that regard to be pitied of all men.

The vſe. Hence we learne, that we muſt not deſpiſe parties miſerable by reaſon of their ſins, or ſcorne and contemne them. But contrariwiſe lament & pity them. When Dauid ſaw men ſin, and ſo pull heapes of miſeries vpon them, [b] he ſhed riuers of teares. The Lord makes it a good mans property [c] to mourne for the abhominations of the people. Ieremie [d] for the ſins of the people wiſhed his head were full of water. And iuſt Lot [e] greeued his righteous hart for the abhominations of Sodome. It was the fault of the Corinthians which Paul reproueth, that when the inceſtuous man had ſinned that greeuous ſinne, [f] They were not humbled, but puffed with contempt againſt the partie. And it is a fault in ſundry men at this daye, that they are not humbled in themſelues when they ſee other men ſin. We muſt not do ſo, but ſhew the grace we haue aboue others, in being greeued for the miſeries, which men without grace by their ſins pull dayly vpon them. Thus much of their miſerie in generall.

[d] Ier.9.1.
[e] 2.Pe.2.7.8
[f] 1.Cor.5.

The partes of their miſerie are three, which Chriſt noteth particularly, that if it were poſſible, he might cauſe this church to lay aſide this damnable pride; for theſe in all men are maine miſeries. The Firſt is pouertie. And poore: that is properly one that hath not a rag to his back, nor bread to his mouth, vnleſſe hee begge the ſame of others. But here it is taken for one that is ſpiritually poore: which pouerty wee ſhall better conceiue, if we do vnderſtand what be true ſpirituall riches. True riches be Gods grace and fauor in Chriſt; as the pardon of ſinne, and life euerlaſting. The poore man therefore is hee, that wanteth Gods fauour for the remiſſion of his ſins, and the gift of eternall life: & hath in him no good thing that is acceptable to God; but in regard of his ſoule, is as ſilly and poore, as any beggar in regard of his bodie.

The end why Chriſt calleth this church poore, is to beat downe the proud conceit of her owne good eſtate, and to cauſe her to feele her ſpirituall pouertie, and ſo become poore in ſpirit. And we in them are likewiſe taught to labour to feele our owne pouertie, how by nature there is no goodneſſe in vs; but wee are vtterly deſtitute of the grace and fauor of God, that ſo we may goe out of our ſelues, and in regard of our ſelues euen deſpaire of our ſaluation: for till this pouertie of ſpirit be wrought in vs, wee may make a ſhew in profeſſion, heare the word and receiue the Sacraments, but we ſhall neuer haue found grace. And bleſſed were our eſtate, if wee could lay aſide that diueliſh pride, which puffeth vp our hearts, and become poore in ſpirite; then were wee in the right way to receiue the Goſpell, and the graces thereof: but till we be beggars in our ſelues, wee neuer begin to be rich in Chriſt.

Howe can Chriſt truely charge this Church with pouertie; for the Laodiceans were a rich people, and had great ſtore of wealth? Anſw. True it is, they were rich in wealth as hiſtories ſhew, and yet poore to God. For all honour and wealth in the world, is nothing without the grace and a Col. 2. 10. fauor of God in Chriſt. Paul ſaith, [a] Wee are compleat in Chriſt: forth of him therefore we haue nothing. To the Corinthians b 1. Cor. 3. 22. 23. hee ſaith, [b] All thinges are yours, and you Chriſts, and Chriſt is Gods. But nothing is ours till we haue Chriſt, and Chriſt vs.

The vſe. As it was with this Church, ſo it is with all other. Euerie perſon and all people are but poore, and beggarly, if they want Chriſt: and therefore if God haue giuen any man riches and wealth, hee muſt lay this good foundation; vſe them as helps to further his ſaluation: For by them hee may attaine to the meanes of ſaluation, and alſo ſhew forth the fruits of faith. But they that haue wealth and vſe it otherwiſe ſhall finde it turne to their deeper condemnation.

The ſecond part of their miſery is blindneſſe. Queſt. How can they be ſayd to be blinde; for they had a learned teacher no doubt, that both was able, and did teach the will of God; and the people likewiſe knew the points of Religion, and beleeued the Goſpell? Anſw. They had knowledge indeed, but yet they were blinde: firſt, becauſe they knew not their owne eſtate. If a man had all skill in all Arts and ſciences, & great knowledge in the word: yet if he know not himſelfe in ſome meaſure, he is but a blinde man. Secondly, becauſe they did not knowe God in Chriſt: They knewe no doubt, that there was a God, and that Chriſt was a Sauiour, but they could not apply it to themſelues, to be able to ſay, God is my God, Chriſt my Redeemer, and the holy Ghoſt my Sanctifier. Thirdly, becauſe they could not diſcerne of things that did differ; as between good and euill, between euill and euill, and between temporall things, and eternall bleſſings: This ſpirituall diſcerning, is a gift of Gods grace.

The vſe. In that Chriſt ſaith, They were blinde, though they had knowledge; wee may learne, that al knowledge is but meere ignorãce before God, to thoſe perſons that know not themſelus, and God to be their God in Chriſt. For want hereof Chriſt calleth the angell of this church blind, thogh otherwiſe hee were a verie learned man. Which muſt teach vs, not to reſt content with any humane learning, no not with the literall knowledge of the Goſpel, but we muſt labor further to know our ſelues, and to know God in Chriſt, & Chriſt our redeemer: and be able in ſome good ſort to diſcern between things that differ. Dauid a moſt worthy Prophet intituleth the 32. Pſalme, his Learning. What learning ſheweth he there? Anſw. Surely nothing but the knowledge of the pardon of his ſins. And indeede that is it, which ſeaſoneth all our learning: and therfore aboue all things we muſt labour for it.

The third part of their miſery, is Nakednes. Nakednes is two-fold; To the eie of man, & to God. Nakednes to the eie of man is bodily, & that is alſo two-fold: either that which was before the fall in the bodies of our firſt parents, whereby their bodies being vncouered, appeared very glorious without ſhame: or that which is after the fall; wherby the bodie being naked & bare appears full of ſhame, which is ſo exceſſiue, by reaſon of mans ſin, that if neceſſity would permit, the whole body both face & hands ſhould all be couered. Nakednes before God, is when any man lies before God, a deformed ſinner. In this caſe Moſes ſawe the Iſraelites [a] when they had made a golden Calfe; For thereby they depriued themſelues of Gods Image, and were guilty of that moſt greeuous ſin of Idolatry. This is a miſery of all miſeries; & the greateſt nakednes that can be: And this is the nakednes of this Church in this place. Qu. Why doth Chriſt call them naked? Anſ. To moue them, and in their perſons all profeſſors to haue care not to flye from God, [b] and to hide their ſins with Adam, but to bring themſelues into his preſence, and there lay open their ſinnes, that they may obtain a couering for them by Chriſt. It is the practiſe of the world, to hide their ſins frõ men, but neuer to care how bare & naked they be in the ſight of God, who yet ſeeth them all as plainly as we ſee the ſores of any poore lazer that ſhews the ſame to moue our pity towards him: which if we could ſee, we ſhuld be aſhamed not to ſeeke to couer our ſins before

b Iob. 31. 33.

fore God. We muſt therfore labor in our owne conſciences to ſee the nakednesſe of our ſoules before God; and ſeeke to be touched and humbled for the ſame, that ſo we may earneſtly intreate for the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, to be a couering to cloath our ſoules. This was Dauids practiſe, for when hee ſaith: Bleſſed are they whoſe ſinnes are couered, Pſal.32.1; he would giue vs to vnderſtand, that hee vſed to vncouer his ſinnes, and lay them open before God; that at his handes in Chriſt, he might get a couer for them.

Theſe are the particular partes of a mans miſerie, which euery man muſt labour to feele in himſelfe, if he would bee partaker of the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt: for thus hath Chriſt both in generall and in particular, ſet downe the miſerie of this Church; that he might prepare them to receiue the bleſſed comfort which followeth in the next Verſe.

Verſ. 18. I counſell thee to buy of me gold tryed by the fire, that thou mayeſt bee made rich: and white rayment that thou mayſt be clothed, and that thy filthy nakednesſe doe not appeare: and annoint thy eye with eye-ſalue that thou mayeſt ſee.

Heere beginneth the counſell of Chriſt vnto this Church. Wherein, firſt he propoundeth a notable remedie for her miſerie before noted. In this remedie, wee are to conſider three things: the manner of preſcribing it; the remedie it ſelfe; and the meanes whereby it is obtained.

For the firſt, this remedie is propounded; not in any ſharpe commandement, but by a milde and gentle aduiſe, I counſell thee. And herein Chriſt doth take to himſelfe the office of the Counſeller of his Church. For as God hath his Church and people, ſo he hath his counſellers, by whom in mercie hee hath reuealed his counſell vnto his Church. The principale counſeller is Chriſt; ſo he ſaith in the perſon of Wiſedom, *Pro.*8.14, Counſell is mine. And Iſay ſaith; To vs a Childe is Iſay 9.6. borne, and he ſhall call his name, wonderfull, COVNSELLER, the mightie God, the euerlaſting Father, the Prince of peace: yea, he is both King & Counſeller to his Church. This office Chriſt challengeth to himſelfe, for theſe cauſes: firſt, becauſe he aduiſeth his Church, touching the way whereby they muſt eſcape euerlaſting death, and come to eternall life. Secondly, becauſe he teacheth them how they may practiſe euery buſines, ſo as it may pleaſe God. Thirdly, becauſe hee teacheth them, how they may in grieuous dangers and diſtreſſes, find a good iſſue, or elſe bee able with patience to beare them. Theſe things he worketh dayly in his Church, not by extraordinary means, but ordinarily by his word and ſpirit; and therefore may iuſtly challenge this honour to bee called the Counſeller of his Church.

From this office of Chriſt, wee learne two things. Firſt, to doe all the honour and reuerence we can vnto his Maieſtie; for he is our profeſſed Counſeller, who imployes himſelfe for the good of his Church. Counſellers of the State and of the Law, are highly honoured and reſpected of all ſorts, euen for their counſell in worldly matters, though often it fayle: how much more ought wee to honour Chriſt our heauenly Counſeller, whoſe counſell leadeth vnto glorie, and is ſtable and ſure for euer? Looke how much his counſell excelleth theirs, ſo much ought he to be honoured aboue them all. Secondly, in all diſtreſſes and grieuous temptations, and dangers either of ſoule or body, wee muſt take counſell and aduiſe from Chriſt Ieſus: for to this end doth hee reueale himſelfe to bee a counſeller, that men in diſtreſſe comming to him, by his aduiſe might bee comforted and eaſed. When Moab, Ammon, and Mount Seir banded themſelues againſt Iuda, the people were in great diſtreſſe and danger; but marke what good king Iehoſophat did, he betooke himſelfe to the Lord his counſeller; ſaying, Lord we know not what to doe, but our eyes are towards thee, 2.*Chron.*20.12; that is, direct thou vs in this danger, for of our ſelues we know not how to eſcape. This practiſe ought to bee followed of all men, eſpecially in time of any danger; ſuch as theſe dayes are by reaſon of ſinne. The counſell of Wizards, Sorcerers, and Aſtrologians, ought not to bee ſought after; but by prayer wee ought to humble our ſelues, and call only and continually on this our onely true counſeller. Vſe.

II. Point. The remedie it ſelfe: which hath relation to the former Verſe, for there hee ſet downe the Miſerie of this Church, in three parts: which were all great Miſeries. And heere hee ſo propoundeth his remedie, that it is anſwerable to their Miſerie in the ſeuerall parts thereof. For firſt, heere is gold to make them rich, anſwerable to their pouertie; Secondly, raiment to hide their nakednesse; Thirdly, eyntment to take away their blindnesse.

For the firſt; by gold, according to the Analogie of the Scripture, we are to vnderſtand the graces of Gods ſpirit: as true faith, repentance, the feare of God, loue of God, and the true loue of man: 1.Pet.1.7, Faith is compared to gold in the tryall thereof: and ſo may all other gifts of the ſpirit be hereby vnderſtood. Secondly, by gold, wee are to vnderſtand Chriſts merits; yea, Chriſt himſelfe, as the fountaine of all grace.

This gold is further ſaid, to be tryed by the fire: that is, moſt pure and precious gold purged from all droſſe, as fine as can be made by the art of man. This is added to expreſſe the propertie of Gods graces and gifts; namely, that they are more precious vnto God then gold; Yea, than gold tryed by the fire: as Peter ſaith.

The vſe. By this euery perſon is taught, how to beautifie themſelues both in ſoule & body: It is the common blind opinion of the world, that forraigne attyre and rich Iewels do adorne the body; and indeede in ſome caſes the body may bee adorned with pearles and Iewels: but the right way to adorne any perſon indeed is, to furniſh the ſoule with theſe graces of the ſpirit, which vnto God be more precious than fine gold. Our bodyes and ſoules ought to be the dwelling places of the Holy Ghoſt; & therefore we muſt adorne them, and make them fit for ſo worthy a Gueſt: which muſt be done, by the good graces of the ſpirit, and not by ſtrange and forraigne attyre, which no good man could euer abide.

Secondly, theſe graces haue a further effect than to beautifie; and that is, to make rich. Heere then ſee the common folly, yea the ſpirituall madneſſe of men in the world; who ſpend all their time, wit and ſtrength, to furniſh their houſes with treaſure, & to enrich their bodies; and in the meane time leaue their ſoules vngarniſhed. What a madneſſe is this, that men ſhould neglect the true riches, and follow after that which is nothing els, but counterfeit copper? Seeing therefore Gods graces bee the true treaſure which fadeth not, let vs ſeeke after them, as Wiſedome counſelleth: Pro.8.10,11, receiue mine inſtruction, and not ſiluer: and knowledge rather than fine gold: For wiſedome is better then precious ſtones. The ſecond part of this remedie is, a white garment: that is, Chriſt himſelfe, and his righteouſneſſe imputed. So Paul ſaith, (a) All that are baptized into Chriſt haue put on Chriſt; There Chriſt is made a garment, whom euery one that beleeueth in him doth put on. Againe, the fruites of the ſpirit are a garment; & therefore we are commanded to (b) put on tender mercie, kindneſſe, humbleneſſe of minde, meekeneſſe, and long ſuffering. Further, Chriſt ſheweth the end of this garment; namely, to couer the nakednesse of our ſoules: leſt the filthyneſſe thereof, which we by our ſins haue brought vpon vs, doe appeare. The third part of this remedie, is anoynting with eye-ſalue; where, by eye-ſalue, wee muſt vnderſtand the ſpirit of Illumination and knowledge wrought in the mind by the Holy Ghoſt, whereby men know themſelues and their eſtate: for as eye-ſalue ſharpens the eyes and cleeres the ſight, where it was by ſome occaſion dimned: ſo doth Chriſt by the illumination of the ſpirit, make a man know God in Chriſt, and to diſcerne betweene good and euill, and betweene things temporall, and bleſſings eternall.

a Gal.3.27.

b Colloſſ.3.12.

Thus wee haue the meaning of the words: whereby wee may ſee, that by all theſe three, wee can vnderſtand nothing elſe but Chriſt himſelfe, and his merits. Now one and the ſame thing in Chriſt, is ſignified by diuers tearmes: to ſhew that there is in Chriſt the fulneſſe of all grace, and plentifull redemption; yea, ſtore of ſupplyes for all our wants. The Laodiceans were poore, but Chriſt was their riches; they were naked, Chriſt was their garment; and laſtly, they were blinde, but Chriſt was their eye-ſalue. So that what wants ſoeuer be in vs, there is ſtore of ſupply thereof in Chriſt. This muſt the more diligently be marked, becauſe the Papiſts make Chriſt but halfe a Sauiour, in putting our merits vnto his: and ſo diſgrace him in his glorious worke, wherein he is a moſt abſolute Sauiour,

and

and Redeemer.

III. point. The means whereby theſe worthy gifts of God may bee gotten, is by buying and bargaining: ſo Chriſt ſaith: I counſell thee to buy of me. Where he alludeth to the outward ſtate of this Citie; for it was rich, and alſo giuen to much trafficke as Hyſtories record: and therefore hee ſpeakes to them in their owne kinde; as if he ſhould ſay, you are a people exerciſed in much traffick, and delighted with nothing more than buying and ſelling: well, I haue wares that will ſerue your turne; as gold, garments, and oyle, therefore come and buy of mee. Theſe wordes muſt not bee vnderſtood properly, for ſo wee can buy nothing of Chriſt; becauſe there is nothing that is good in any, but it proceedeth from the free gift of God in Chriſt. This is onely ſpoken by way of reſemblance to buying and ſelling; which ſtands in theſe points, which are the principall things in bargaining. Firſt, a man ſees his want, and deſires to haue it ſupplyed; and therfore goes to the place where ſuch things are to be ſold. Secondly, he ſeeth the thing and he liketh it. Thirdly, he prizeth and valueth it. Fourthly, he maketh exchange for it, by money or money worth. Fiftly, if it be a great ſumme, he giueth earneſt. So in the getting of Chriſt, there is a kind of reſemblance to all theſe. Firſt, a man muſt feele himſelfe, to ſtand in need of Chriſt and his merits; becauſe men ſee want of bread, meat and drinke in their houſes, therefore doe they goe to buy the ſame. Now looke how ſencibly any man feeles theſe worldly wants; ſo euidently ſhould we feele our want of Chriſt, and his merits. For this is the firſt beginning that cauſeth vs to ſeeke to receiue Chriſt Ieſus. Secõdly feeling our wãts, we ſhold hunger & long after Chriſt, that we might bee made partakers of him & the vertue of his merits: as a man that is to buy a thing doth take a liking thereof, which doth ſtir vp a deſire in him to buy; ſo muſt we labour to haue liking of Chriſt, which wil mooue vs to ſeeke vnto him. Iſay. 55. 1. Hoe, all they that thirſt, come and buy: ſo that none make this bargaine, but he that thirſteth. Thirdly we muſt prize and value Chriſt aboue all things in this world, euen at ſo high a rate that we account al things in regard of him to bee but loſt; yea, euen droſſe & dunge: [c] as Paul did. Fourthly we muſt make exchange. How? we can giue Chriſt nothing but his owne? Anſw. Properly there is no exchange, and therefore he ſaith: Iſay. 55. 1. Hoe, come and buy without money, for nothing. Simon Magus, is heauily checked and accurſed, for offring to buy the gifts of the holy ghoſt, Acts 8. 20. And yet there is an exchange to be made, We muſt giue him our ſins, and receiue his righteouſneſſe; & therefore he is ſaid, 2. Cor. 5. 21. To be made ſin for vs, that wee ſhoulabe made the righteouſnes of God in him. See a moſt bleſſed exchange; for our ſinne and ſhame, we receiue his bleſſed grace and righteouſnes. Queſt. How is this exchange made? Anſw. In the practiſe of faith and repentance; for when we humble our ſelues and confeſſe our ſinnes, praying earneſtly for remiſſion, and beleeue our reconciliation by Chriſt, then is hee our righteouſneſſe. Laſtly, though we can giue nothing vnto Chriſt, yet hee giueth vnto vs an earneſt in this bargaine: to wit, ſome portion of Gods (a) ſpirit, and ſome ſmall meaſure of his graces; as grace to bewayle our ſinnes, to humble our ſelues, and to pray for the pardon of them, with purpoſe not to ſinne againe, theſe be the earneſts of this bargaine: And thus is heauen bought and ſold between Chriſt and vs; the receiuing of his true ſauing graces be they neuer ſo ſmall: euen as a penie is a ſufficient earneſt for a bargaine of a hundred pound.

c Phil. 3. 8.

a Ephe. 1. 13. 2. Cor. 1. 22.

The vſe.

Here we ſee we are commanded to buy Chriſt, and to make a bargaine with him, whereby we may haue right to him and his merits. But how goes the caſe with the world? ſurely many come where this bargaine is offered, but few there be that buy. Wee are like to Paſſengers on the ſea, who ſee many goodly buildings, ſumptuous Cities, & fruitfull Ilands, but they make no purchaſe of them; they only prayſe them, as they behold them, and ſo paſſe by: ſo wee come and heare the doctrine of Chriſt and his merits, and approoue of the ſame: but where is the partie that maketh this bargaine? Come to particular points, and it will appeare that few bargaine for Chriſt. For who feeles his own miſerie as he ought? Who perceiues himſelfe to ſtand in ſuch neede of Chriſt as he doth? worldly wants wee feele and are affected with them, but in regard of ſpirituall wants, we are ſenceleſſe; and yet til we truely feele our miſerie, we neuer come to make this bargaine with Chriſt. Againe, come to our deſire & hungring after Chriſt; In bodily thirſt and hunger, wee can ſay; I hunger, or I thirſt: but who can ſay, I hunger & thirſt after Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe? Alas, our hearts are full, we feele no want: nay they are dead, we feare none euill; and as for our valuing and eſteeming of Chriſt, we are plaine Gaderens and Eſawes, wee preferre the world and the baſeſt things therein before Chriſt. And for the exchange; we are loth to part with our ſins, & to put on Chriſts righteouſnes. Which plainly ſhewes wee make no exchange, and though we bee willing to lay heapes of ſins on Chriſt, yet who takes Chriſtes righteouſneſſe and declares the ſame by the fruites thereof. And laſtly, for the earneſt of the ſpirit, though ſome there be that haue receiued it, yet the body of our people as their conſciences can tell them, haue not receiued it: for they want knowledge, faith, and other graces.

By all theſe, it is more than manifeſt, that this bargaine is not made: And yet true it is, that for worldly & baſe barganes he muſt riſe early that will goe beyond them. But what a ſhame is this, that we ſhould be ſo expert in vile earthly things, and haue no regard of this excellent and heauēly bargaine? Wherfore ſeing Chriſt calleth vs hereunto, let vs make this one bargaine with him, and that preſently; which wee ſhall teſtifie by doing the fiue former duties; let vs neuer bee at reſt, till we may ſay each one for himſelfe, I haue bargained with Chriſt, and receiued his earneſt. Yea, our care ſhould be that this bargaine be made not with vs alone, but with our children. Many are forward to bring vp their childrē in good trades, wherein they may buy and ſell for their liuing, wherein they doe well; but withall, they ought to be as carefull to teach them to make this bargaine with Chriſt, and then they doe farre better. For this is the cheapeſt and the chiefeſt marchandize that euer was ſett to ſale, which we may buy without monie; and yet it will make vs rich for euer. Many labour in tafficke and take great paines, and yet often looſe thereby: but make this bargaine once, and then thou ſhalt neuer looſe it, nor any thing thereby; but continue for euer rich in God.

Verſe. 19. As many as I loue, I rebuke and chaſten: be zealous therefore, and amend.

Becauſe our Sauiour Chriſt had ſo ſharply rebuked this Church, they might thereby take occaſion to diſtruſt, and deſpaire of his fauour and mercie: heere therefore it pleaſeth him, to take away all occaſion of doubting, after this ſort. If I vſe to rebuke & chaſten all thoſe whom I loue, then you are not to deſpaire of my mercie, by reaſon of my ſharpe reproofe, whereby I haue threatned to ſpew you out of my mouth, for your ſinne of luke-warmneſſe. But thus I vſe to deale, with all thoſe whom I loue; and therefore in this regard you need not to doubt of my loue and fauour.

The meaning. As many as I loue, Chriſt loues the creatures two wayes: as hee is Creator, and as he is Redeemer. As he is the Creator, hee loueth all his creatures, with a common & generall loue, whether they be liuing or dead; reaſonable or vnreaſonable. As he is Redeemer, he loues his creatures with a ſpeciall and a peculiar loue; which is not common to all, but proper to that part of man-kinde, which is choſen to ſaluation before the world was. And of this peculiar loue hee ſpeaketh here. I rebuke, The word in the originall which is tranſlated, Rebuke, is more ſignificant than can fitly bee expreſſed in any one Engliſh worde; thus much is meant thereby, as if Chriſt had ſaid; Firſt, I will conuince them of their ſins, and after reproone, admoniſh, and check them for the ſame. And chaſten: This muſt bee vnderſtood of a kinde of correction, which a father vſeth on his child, called nurturing: which is correction to breake the childe of his fault and bad manners, and to teach him his dutie. This then is the meaning: All thoſe whom I beare ſpeciall fauour vnto, doe I conuince of their particular faults, and then checke and reproone them and nurture them, as a father doth his Child: to make them leaue their particular vices, and to walke in obediēce. And to aſſure vs that this is the true meaning, read Pro. 3. 12, whence Ἐλέγχω.

the words are taken; & Heb. 12. 5, where they are more fully explained.

Heere then Chriſt ſets downe his ordinary dealing with them, whom he taketh and chooſeth to bee his diſciples and members; namely, hee conuinceth them of their faults: he reproueth and chaſteneth them for this very end, to breake them of their ſins, and to bring them to reformation. And this dealing of Chriſt, belongeth to euery ſeruant and member of Chriſt without exception: yea, Chriſt layeth rebukes and chaſtiſments on all his children, & that in diuers meaſure, according to the nature of their ſinnes, and the diſpoſition of the parties. Such as are hardly broken of their ſins, hee layeth on them more heauie iudgementes and chaſtiſments, that they may bee brought to deeper humiliation, and ſo to true repentance. And therefore euery one that would bee a Diſciple and member of Chriſt, muſt looke to goe vnder his correction and his ſharpe and ſeuere rebuke; according as they are inwardly diſpoſed vnto ſinnes either more or leſſe; Hee muſt paſſe vnder the rodde, that would come into the bond of the Couenant. Ezech. 20. 37.

The vſe of this doctrine is two-fold, ſet downe Prou. 3. 12. The firſt thus, My Sonne deſpiſe not the correction of the Lord, for the Lord correcteth whom hee loueth; his chaſtyſements are tokens of his loue. That is, whenſoeuer the Lord either in the miniſterie of his word reproueth thy ſins, or by any affliction chaſteneth thee, deſpiſe it not, neither ſet light by it; but make good vſe thereof vnto thine owne ſoule. The ſecond vſe is; Faint not when thou art corrected: that is, let not the greatneſſe of it daunt thee, but arme thy ſelfe with patience, becauſe he vſeth to correct all thoſe whom hee loueth, making his chaſtiſments tokens of his loue.

Secondly, Chriſt heere ſetteth before all gouernours, an example to followe, eſpecially to fathers and maſters: his example is this; On euery child that hee loueth, hee layeth corrections, for this end to breake them of their ſinnes: So anſwerably, Gouernours muſt ſhew tokens of loue towards thoſe that are vnder them, by due reproofe and correction; that ſo they may be broken of their miſdemeanor, and brought vnto obedience to God. It were to bee wiſhed, that both Parents and Maſters would followe Chriſt in this example, and ſo ſeeke the reformation of thoſe that are vnder them; but more lamentable is the caſe Parents and Maſters doe thinke it ſufficient for them, if they prouide for their children and ſeruantes food, and raymont, and neceſſaries for the bodie; and ſo altogether neglect the good of their ſoules, which is the cauſe of many ſinnes, and ſo of many iudgements; both which ought to moouе them to put in practiſe this dutie.

Thirdly, the very order of Chriſts words, doth miniſter vnto vs a neceſſary inſtruction, touching his manner of correcting his ſeruants. For firſt, hee propounds a direct end of all his corrections vpon them; to wit, their nurturing and reformation; then, that hee may attaine thereto, hee proceedeth thus: Firſt, hee doth conuince their conſcience of their ſinnes; then by reproofes he rebukes and checks them, and laſtly correcteth them, by laying chaſtiſments on them. A moſt excellent and bleſſed order, in vſing correction for the good of the partie chaſtiſed, which ought to bee followed of all Gouernours, parents and maſters eſpecially. Firſt they muſt propound a good end of their correction, euen the amendement and ſaluation of the partie: and that they may then proceed aright, they muſt firſt conuince their conſcience of the fault; then reproouе, checke, and admoniſh them: and if that take not place, they muſt proceed vnto meete and conuenient bodily correction: all which muſt bee done not for reuenge, but to bring the to amendement, and to make them obedient to the will of God. Whereby wee ſee how farre many Parents and Gouernours ouer-ſhoote themſelues; when as they make their corrections matters of reuenge and choller, wherein they ſeldome intend the reformation of the offender; which is a fault flat againſt the word of God; and therefore to be conſidered of euery good chriſtian.

Be zealous therefore and repent. In the former Verſe hee propounded a remedie againſt their Spirituall pride. In theſe wordes hee doth directly propound a remedie againſt their Luke-warmneſſe. But firſt obſerue the coherence of theſe words with the former. Chriſt hath ſaid; Whom I loue I rebuke and correct, according as their faults is: therefore ſayth hee to this Church; becauſe I haue rebuked and corrected thee by ſeuere threatnings, for thy Luke-warmneſſe, therefore now become zealous and amend.

Here ſee the proper end of all reproſes and corrections: namely, the reformation and amendement of mens faults & miſdemeanors whatſoeuer, that ſo they may bee more carefull of their wayes, and more zealous in good duties then euer they were. Whenſoeuer therefore wee are reprooued by the word of God; or when the Lord ſhall viſite vs in body, minde, or goods by any kind of croſſe, wee muſt remember to take occaſion thereby to repent and amend, knowing that by all theſe as by ſo many Sermons, the Lorde calles vs to amendement.

Nowe come to the remedie of their Luke-warmneſſe; Be zealous. That wee may vnderſtand this Commandement, we are to handle ſome points touching Zeale. Firſt, what is zeale? Zeale is a burning affection in regard of Chriſtian Religion, and the true worſhip of God. This Zeale is compounded of two affections; of loue, and anger or indignation; ſo that in this Commandement are two duties enioyned vnto this Church. Firſt, that they ſhould loue Chriſt, and his Religion aboue all things. Secondly, that they ſhould be greiued eſpecially for this, that Chriſt was diſhonoured, his worſhip prophaned, and his doctrine not embraced; but inſteed thereof falſe worſhip, and falſe doctrine entertayned; when both theſe concurre, then zeale is in the heart. A moſt notable Example hereof wee haue in Chriſt: Pſalm. 69 9, where the Prophet Dauid in his perſon ſaith, The zeale of Gods houſe had eaten him vp. Whereby thus much is ſignified; that the heat of his loue for the maintaining of his Fathers glorie, had euen conſumed him; and that his indignation was ſo great, becauſe his Fathers Name was diſhonoured, and his worſhip prophaned; that it did euen eate him vp. This wee ſhall ſee to bee true in Chriſt, if wee read the Hyſtorie of his life, Iohn 2.17. Yea, hee profeſſeth of himſelfe, that it was meate and drinke vnto him to doe his Fathers will, Ioh. 4.34. That thing he preferred before his owne life or ſafetie: nay, for the accompliſhment thereof, hee was content to ſuffer the pangs of hell. The like zeale was in Elias, when all Iſrael was fallen to Idolatrie; his heart was zealous for the Lord of Hoſts. 1 King. 19.14.

II. point; The kinds of zeale. Zeale is either good or bad: In good zeale are theſe things required. 1. True faith, as the roote thereof; 1 Tim. 1. verſ. 5. The end of the commandement is loue out of a pure heart, and of a good conſcience, and of faith vnfained. Now, one part of zeale is loue; and therefore as loue proceedes from true faith, ſo muſt true zeale: and that which is not grounded on faith, is rather raſhneſſe and fierceneſſe of nature, than true zeale. II. Repentance; 2 Cor. 7. 11, There are ſeuen fruites of repentance recyted, whereof zeale is one, that is good zeale: Euen a burning loue of true Religion, and a godly indignation when falſe religion is embraced. There may bee zeale in a man that hath no repentance; as was in Iehu, 2. King. 10. 16. Come with mee, (ſayth hee) and ſee the zeale that I haue for the Lord. Yet he wanted repentance, for Verſ. 29. 31, It is ſaid, Iehu regarded not to walke in the Law of the Lord God of Iſrael with all his heart: for hee departed not from the ſinnes of Ieroboam, which made Iſrael to ſinne: and therefore he had not in him the true zeale that is heere commanded. III. Zeale muſt come from knowledge: for without knowledge it is but raſhneſſe and bold-hardineſſe, ſuch as the Iewes had, Rom. 10. 2. whoſe Zeale was without knowledge. And ſuch as Paul had before his conuerſion, Phil. 3. verſ. 6. In Zeale hee perſecuted Gods Church: Knowledge therefore in Gods word, muſt bee the guide and conductor of our zeale.

III. point; The fruites of zeale muſt be conſidered for the better diſcerning of true zeale. Firſt, true zeale conſtraineth a man in euery thing to ſeeke to pleaſe God: (4) Whether we be out of our wits, 2 Cor. 5. 13, 14.

wits, we are it vnto God: or whether we bee in our right mind, we are it vnto you. For the loue of Chriſt conſtrayneth vs. So whereſoeuer this true zeale is in any meaſure, it offereth violence to the heart; ſo as a man cannot but endeuour to doe his dutie, for the loue he beareth vnto Chriſt. Elihu ſayd; The grace of God was in his heart as new wine in a veſſell, which muſt needs vent out, Iob.32.18.19. Secondly, true zeale makes a man indeuour to ſerue and pleaſe God with all his heart, power, and ſtrength. So good king Ioſiah, hearing the words of the Law read, hee turned not ſlackely or negligently, 2.kings.23. 25. but (e) with all his heart, and all his ſoule, and with all his might, according to all the Law of Moſes: ſo as like him was no King before, neither after him aroſe there any like him. Pſal.51, Dauid humbling himſelfe for his ſinnes, prayes for the pardon of them with ſuch maruellous zeale, as no tongue can vtter: deſiring God to remember him according to the multitude of his mercies: often repeating the ſame thing in diuers tearmes, that in ſome ſort hee might expreſſe the earneſt deſire of his heart: And in giuing God thankes for his benefits, he putteth all the ſtrength of his heart thereto, crying out; My ſoule prayſe thou the Lord, and all that is within mee. Pſa.103.1. And thus we ſee what a thing it is to be zealous; whence true zeale ariſeth, and what it worketh in mans heart.

The vſe. Seeing wee (as hath beene ſhewed) are tainted with this ſinne of Lukewarmneſſe, and coldneſſe in religion; let vs here learne how to redreſſe this vice. Wee muſt become zealous, hauing in our heart a feruent loue of true religion, and a vehement indignation when the ſame is diſgraced, and falſe worſhip takes place. Let Religion therefore take place in our hearts; and let vs bee feruent and ſhew that ſame in our liues by zealous obedience. Away with all ſlackneſſe and lukewarmneſſe; it were better to bee Iewes and Turkes, and to hold no Religion, then to be luke-warme in the true profeſſion. And thus much for zeale.

The ſecond patt of this remedie is; to Repent, or amend. This they are alſo enioyned, becauſe zeale without repentãce, is nothing but raſhnes. Iehues zeale was no true zeale, becauſe hee wanted repentance, euen then when hee was zealous. But wherefore was this Church inioyned to repent? Namely, for Lukewarmnes; not for that ſhe had committed any horrible ſinne, but becauſe ſhe was ſlacke in good duties.

Here then we haue a good Leſſon for the ignorant ſort, that challenge Gods mercie vnto themſelues, becauſe they are no notorious malefactors; as murtherers, & adulterers, they hate no man, but do good vnto all: but heere they are taught to reforme this their blindneſſe and ignorance; For repentance muſt be for want of good duties, yea for ſlackneſſe therein: therefore let no man ſooth himſelfe in his ignorance, with a falſe perſwaſion that all is wel if he liue not in groſſe ſinnes. This is the enchantment of the deuill, whereby he rocks many aſleepe in their ſinnes, till hee carry their ſoules to hell: A good meaning will not ſerue the turne; God requires true zeale in well-doing.

Verſ. 20. Behold, I ſtand at the doore and knocke. If any man heare my voyce, and open the doore, I will come in vnto him, and will ſuppe with him, and hee with me.

Heere Chriſt, to keepe his Church from deſpaire, miniſters vnto them the ſignes and tokens of his loue and fauour: and before the ſame ſets downe this note of attention, Behold, hereby intending to make them more attentiuely to marke the tokens of his loue, that plainly ſeeing the ſame, they might not doubt thereof.

Heereby in generall wee are taught; that if wee would arme our ſelues againſt deſperation and diſtruſt in any diſtreſſe, wee muſt both often and ſeriouſly conſider and marke the tokens of Gods loue vnto vs, and that will fortifie our faith: Read Pſal. 23, In euery Verſe ſaue the laſt, hee ſets downe tokens of Gods loue and fauour towards him; and then in the laſt concludeth thus; Without doubt, kindeſſe & mercie ſhall follow mee all the dayes of my life, and I ſhall remaine a long ſeaſon in the houſe of the Lord. Our hearts are naturally filled with doubting, which will bewray it ſelfe in any diſtreſſe. But to preuent and cut off all hurt that may come therby, let vs marke the good dealing of our God towards vs; and obſerue the tokens of his loue and mercie in his ordinarie prouidence: and theſe will notably ſtrengthen vs againſt diſtruſt. And ſurely no perſon is ſo full of deſpaire, but if hee could looke backe into the mercies of God, from the beginning of his dayes, and lay them to his heart, they would miniſter comfort vnto him in regard of his loue and fauour at that inſtant.

More particularly, Chriſt miniſtring comfort vnto this Church, doth expreſſe his meaning by a borrowed ſpeach, comparing euery man vnto an houſe; his heart vnto a doore, whereby entrance is made, and himſelfe vnto a gueſt or ſtranger deſiring to come and enter in, not ſo much to find courteſie, as to ſhew fauour and kindneſſe.

In the words of this verſe, there bee two ſignes of his loue ſet downe. Firſt, a hearty deſire of their conuerſion, which hee earneſtly ſeeketh: Secondly, a promiſe of mutuall fellowſhip after their conuerſion. The firſt, in theſe wordes; Behold, I ſtand at the doore and knock: In this deſire, Chriſt expreſſeth two things; Firſt, that this Church (if wee regard the greateſt part thereof) had no true fellowſhip with Chriſt, nor Chriſt with them; for hee ſtands at the doore of their hearts, which were cloſed vp againſt him. This may ſeeme ſtrange, but the caſe is euident: for though they had in them many good things; as knowledge of Gods will, and did profeſſe the Goſpel, and were partakers of the ſignes and ſeales of the Couenant of grace; yet they were tainted with this notorious ſinne of Luke-warmneſſe, which cloſed vp the doore of their heart againſt Chriſt and barred him out.

Here then we are carefully to obſerue, that a man may haue in him many good things; and yet by liuing in one ſin, we be quite cut off from all true fellowſhip with Chriſt. Iudas had many excellent gifts: he forſooke all and folowed Chriſt, he preached the Goſpel, and adminiſtred the Sacraments; and yet by couetouſnes the doore of his heart was quite barred againſt Chriſt. So Herode reuerenced Iohn, and heard him gladly, and did many things at his inſtruction; Mark. 6.20. yet by the ſinne of Inceſt, his heart was ſo cloſed, that he had no fellowſhip with Chriſt. And ſo it is with vs; It is good that wee know the will of God and approue the ſame, and profeſſe the Goſpel, and alſo receiue the Seales of the Couenant: But yet for all theſe, our caſe may be ſuch, as wee ſhall haue no true fellowſhippe with Chriſt. For if wee nouriſh, though but one ſinne, and liue therein; that will make a ſeparation betweene Chriſt and vs, bee the ſinne what it will; as couetouſneſſe, adulterie, prophaneneſſe, or ſuch like. Heereby then, all that deſire to haue true fellowſhippe with Chriſt, are to be warned to purge their liues from all ſinne, ſo as their hearts bee not taynted with nouriſhing any one ſinne: for euen one ſinne whatſoeuer it bee, is a ſtrong barre that will keepe Chriſt from comming into vs.

Secondly, whereas hee ſaith: I haue ſtood at the doore: (for ſo the wordes are) Heere hee ſpeaketh to this Church, as hee vſed to ſpeake by his old Prophets. As by Ieremie, (a) I haue ſent vnto you all my Prophets, ryſing early euery day and ſending them. And by Eſay; (b) I haue ſpread out my handes all the day vnto a rebellious people, which walked in a way that was not good; euen, after their owne imaginations. So heere, I haue ſtood at the doore; That is, long, euen till night; as the word ſupping importeth. a Ier.7.25. & 13. b Iſay.65.2.

Hereby Chriſt would ſignifie his great pacience, in waiting for the conuerſion of this people of Laodicea. In iuſtice hee might long agone haue caſt them to the pit of deſtruction for their ſinnes, and yet in mercie he waiteth for their conuerſion; and complaines that he hath waited long. Here then we haue iuſt occaſion to take a view of Gods patience in wayting for the conuerſion of a ſinner. And that which hee ſaith to this Church; hee may as iuſtly ſay vnto vs, for hee hath ſtood very long at our doores, euen 36. yeares and vpward, and yet ſtill continueth knocking, ſo as he may iuſtly complaine of his long waiting. Let vs then here learne to know the day of our viſitation, which is then to any people when Chriſt ſtands at their doores and knocks:

knockes; and vnto vs this day is preſent: Wee haue the miniſterie of the Goſpell; and therefore we muſt be perſwaded, that this is the time of our viſitation, and hereupon learne the dutie which Chriſt teacheth the Iewes: namely, Acknowledg the day of our viſitation; which if we doe not, wee muſt looke for like vengeance which fell vpon the Iewes, becauſe they regarded not when God ſent his owne Sonne from his boſome to knocke at the dore of their hearts.

And knocke. Heere is a further ſignification of his deſire of their conuerſion. Wherein we may behold his great & vnſpeakable mercie towards this Church, and in them towards all other his Children. This Church had bard out Chriſt by their ſinnes: and yet he purſues them, he knockes; hee vſeth meanes to enter for their good; and vouchſafes them mercy, euen then when they refuſe it. Thus when Adam had ſinned and fled, and hid himſelfe, did the Lord ſeek him in the garden, & make with him the couenant of grace. And therefore it is truely ſayd in [a] Iſay, The Lord is found of them that neuer ſought him. Luk. 15. 4. 5, Chriſt feeketh the loſt ſheepe that was gone aſtray. All which ſhew and ſet out vnto vs the vnſpeakable greatneſſe of Gods mercie in Chriſt vnto miſerable man, who then ſhewes mercie vnto him when he neuer ſeeketh it. This his mercie is verified in all Churches, and vnto vs; VVhich muſt be an occaſion to enlarge and ſtirre vp our hearts to bleſſe the name of Chriſt for this vnſpeakable mercie, in vouchſafing vs fauor, when we neuer ſought it, but refuſed it.

Queſt. How doth Chriſt knocke?

Anſw. The words going before, whereto theſe haue reference, giue light vnto this Queſtion. Before Chriſt had threatned this Church, euen to ſpew her out of his mouth for her luke-warmeneſſe; and after hee counſels her to buy of him gold, and other remedies. Now, vpon this greeuous threatnings, the Church might deſpaire of his mercie: But Chriſt to comfort her, tels her here, that theſe reproofes and rebukes, were but knockings at the dores of their hearts to make them open: For then Chriſt knocketh at the hearts of any people, when he vouchſafed them means to ſee their ſinnes, and threatens them for the ſame; and withall giues them counwherby they may eſcape the fearefull puniſhments thereby deſerued.

Here then note the ſtate of any people that haue the miniſtrie of the Goſpell vouchſafed vnto them; they haue Chriſt among them, ſtanding at the dore of their harts, and knocking to come in, by exhortations, admonitions, threatnings, and by promiſes, which is a great and endleſſe mercie.

The vſe. Firſt, ſeeing wee haue Chriſt knocking at our dores, there ought not to bee in vs ſuch dulneſſe and deadneſſe of heart in hearing him knocke. If a man of any account come and knocke at the dore of our houſe; oh what a ſtirre will we make to let him in quickely! VVhat a ſhame then is it, that we ſhould be dead-harted, when Chriſt Ieſus the King of Heauen knockes at the dore of our hearts? Secondly, this muſt admoniſh vs with all ſpeed to turne vnto God by true repentance, for wee knowe not how long hee will continue knocking; and if wee doe not heare and turne before he withdraw himſelfe from vs, wee periſh eternally; For if we refuſe when he knocketh at the dore of our harts, he will refuſe when we knocke at the dore of his mercie. Prou. 1. 25. 26. Mat. 25. 11. 12.

Note further; this knocking is not ordinarie, but it is ioyned with crying, For he ſaith, If he heare my voice; ſo that hee both knocks & cries. It is then the knocking of one that would enter; we therfore ought anſwerably, with ſerious regard to receiue the threatnings of the law and the promiſes of grace, and ſo bee as earneſt in receiuing and embracing him, as hee is in knocking to come into vs.

The ſecond token of Chriſts loue, is a gracious promiſe of fellowſhip with them; in theſe words: If any man heare my voice, and open the dore, I will come in vnto him, and will ſuppe with him, and hee with mee. Theſe wordes haue beene much abuſed: and therefore I will ſtand to ſet downe the true vſe and meaning of the ſame. Marke, the forme of ſpeech is ſuch, as giues vnto a mans will & ſoule an action in his conuerſion, whereby hee comes to Chriſt and receiues Chriſt.

This may ſeeme ſtrange, but it is for iuſt cauſe vſed by the holy Ghoſt; for in the conuerſion of a ſinner, there be three workers; the holy Ghoſt; the word, and mans will. The holy Ghoſt is the principall Agent inlightning the minde with true knowledge, ſoftning the heart, and changing the will from euill to good. The worde is the inſtrument of the holy Ghoſt; for now he worketh not by reuelation or ſpeciall inſtinct; but ordinarily in and by the word, when a man is reading, hearing or meditating, either publickely or priuately: for the word preached is the power of God to mans ſalvation from faith to faith. Thirdly, mans will, though by nature it be euill and dead vnto grace, yet being renewed by the holy Ghoſt, in the firſt act of conuerſion moueth and ſtriueth to bee turned; It is not like a peece of waxe onely paſſiue, which without any action receiueth impreſſion: But as fire, ſo ſoone as it fire doth borne; and ſo ſoone as it burneth it is fire: ſo the will though by nature it mooue not yet being renewed by grace it mooueth, and ſo ſome as it mooueth, it is renewed. And hereupon it is, that the holy Ghoſt aſcribeth action vnto a ſinner that is to bee conuerted: which argueth not, that by themſelues men can haue a will to bee conuerted, but that being renewed, they may will their conuerſion. And for this cauſe is the Goſpell preached in theſe tearmes, Repent and beleeue: not to ſhew that man by nature can repent or beleue; but that God in mans conuerſion, doth giue him grace to will and deſire the ſame.

Hence then it followes, thar this text hath been diuers waies abuſed: Firſt, by the Papiſts, who hence would gather Free will of conuerſion in a ſinner by nature. True it is, a man hath free will in his conuerſion; yet not by nature, but by grace; neither can any more be gathered hence, for here it is onely ſaid, If any man heare and open when I knocke. Nay, hence wee may rather gather, that a man by nature cannot heare, nor open, becauſe the counſell is giuen to ſuch as are poore, and blinde, and naked by nature.

Secondly, they alſo abuſe this text, that hereby would prooue a flexible free will by grace to be in man: which is this. Sundry men thinke, that after the fall of Adam, all being wrapt vp in ſinne, God gaue a generall grace, whereby any man might will, and receiue that which is good: and this grace, though it diſpoſe the will in ſome part to that which is good, yet it takes not the corruption away, but that remaines ſtill; whereupon if hee will, he may receiue Chriſt by that general grace, or if hee will not, hee may refuſe Chriſt by his naturall corruption which yet remaineth in him. It is ſaide, this may bee gathered from this text: But the truth is, here is no foundation for flexible free-will: all that can here be gathered is, that man hath free-will in his conuerſion, yet not by a generall, but by Gods ſpeciall grace. Nay, Chriſts miniſtry ſerues for this end, that thoſe which before could not turne of themſelues, might by grace be conuerted. This flexible grace is againſt Gods word: Chriſt ſayth; [a] Euery one that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father commeth vnto me; He ſaith not, may come if hee will, but peremptorily commeth: For mans will cannot diſpoſe and ouer-rule the worke of God; but the worke of God ouer-rules the will of man: though man be vnwilling, yet when God calleth effectually hee cannot but come; For the creature cannot reiect or reſiſt the will and calling of his creator. [a] Ioh.6.45.

If any man open vnto mie, I will come, &c. The proper intent of Chriſt in this conditional promiſe, is to prouoke them that be dull and heauy, to liſten diligently to Chriſt words, and to receiue the doctrine of ſaluation from him gladly.

In the example of this Church we are taught our dutie. Seeing Chriſt in the miniſtrie of his word knockes, both by threatnings, by promiſes, and good counſell: therefore we muſt all of vs liſten vnto the words of Chriſt, & open the dores of our hearts and receiue him into the ſame. But alas the practiſe of the world is far otherwiſe: men are churliſh Nabals vnto Chriſt, who though he come friendly, yet they repell him; making no account of ſuch againſt. Nay, we are Bethlemites, which haue no roome for Chriſt in the Innes of our harts, if Chriſt will needs lodge with vs, hee muſt lye among the beaſts in the filthy ſtable; Nay, many ſend him out of their gates with the Iews, and crucifie him with their ſinnes. But let vs abandon this greeuous ſinne, for it is the right way to plunge our ſoules into the pit of deſtruction.

Queſt. How muſt a man open his hart to receiue Chriſt? Anſw. By doing two things.

things. Firſt, hee muſt labour to ſee his owne vileneſſe; that hee is vnworthy to receiue ſo bleſſed a Gueſt, then hee muſt humble himſelfe, and acknowledge this his vnworthineſſe. Euen as the ruler did when he ſayd vnto Chriſt; Lord, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldeſt come vnder my roofe, Mat. 8.8. This humiliation is the beginning of grace. This done, hee muſt by true faith lay hold on Chriſt; that is, beleeue that Chriſts death and paſſion is for the pardon of his ſinnes, and for the ſaluation of his ſoule: For as Chriſt dwels in mens hearts by faith, ſo by faith he muſt be receiued into their harts. Here ſome will ſay, if this be to receiue Chriſt, then all is well. But take heede thou deceiue not thy ſelfe with a vaine imagination of thine owne braine in ſtead of faith. Looke therefore that thy faith be true & liuing: If it be true faith, it will work by loue, euen a true loue of Chriſt and his members, which will appeare by keeping his Commaundements. Ioh. 14.23.

I will come in vnto him, and ſuppe with him, and he with me. Here is the thing promiſed; to wit, mutuall communion and fellowſhip with Chriſt. This is the principall token of Chriſts loue, being indeed the verie ground of all true happineſſe, ioy, and comfort: and therefore it is added to mooue them to open vnto Chriſt. This ſocietie, is here propounded in two parts. Firſt, the ſinner being conuerted, makes a feaſt vnto Chriſt; I will come in vnto him, and ſuppe with him. Secondly Chriſt makes a feaſt vnto him; And hee ſhall ſup with me. And in theſe two conſiſts the ſum of Salomons ſong of ſongs; where Chriſt entertaineth the Church, and the Church againe feaſts Chriſt.

For the firſt; ſome may aske, how can a poore ſinner make a feaſt for Chriſt? Anſw. Cantic. 4.16. The Church or euerie Chriſtians ſoule, calleth Chriſt vnto a feaſt in his Garden to eate his pleaſant thinges. This Feaſt conſiſteth of theſe things. Firſt, of the fruits of true repentance. Pſal.51.17, A broken and contrite heart, is a daintie diſh acceptable vnto God. Secondly, of an hart beleeuing the word and promiſes to God; for without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, Heb.11.6. Thirdly, the penitent ſinner muſt [a] giue vp himſelfe in ſoule and bodie, a holy and acceptable ſacrifice vnto God, by ſeruing God faithfully, not only in the duties of piety, but alſo in the faithfull perfourmance of the duties of his particular calling: theſe be the delightfull diſhes wherwith Chriſt is fed.

[a] Rom.12.1.

The ſecond feaſt is made by Chriſt, and hee ſhall ſup with me. Chriſt comes not to bee entertained onely, but to entertaine; And the feaſt which he makes is his own bodie and blood: [b] For his fleſh is meat in deede, and his blood is drinke indeede. The veſſels whereon theſe meates are caried, are the Word and Sacraments. And all that bee his welcome gueſts, are true penitent ſinners, which haue hungring and thirſting hearts after his bodie and blood, *Luk.*1.53. And from this feaſt ariſe theſe bleſſings: [c] Righteouſneſſe, peace of conſcience, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt.

[b] Ioh. 6.55.

[c] Rom.14.17

The vſe. Seeing this fellowſhip with Chriſt is here promiſed to thoſe that open & receiue him into their hearts: Firſt, hereby we are taught to renounce all earthly and carnall pleaſures; and not to addict our ſelues to drinking and quaffing or ſumptuous fare; for heere is a better feaſt ſette before vs, whereupon we muſt ſet our hearts, turning our eyes from all worldly pleaſures. We know by experience how friends entertaine each other; but wee muſt labor to know how to entertaine Chriſt, and to feaſt him with his owne graces, that hee may ſuppe with vs, and we with him; and ſo haue true fellowſhip with him.

Againe, by this we may ſee a notable abuſe of many that come to the Lordes table: for heere wee ſee is required an interchange of feaſting, betweene Chriſt and a Chriſtian: but many there bee that will come to the Lords table, and feaſt with Chriſt, that will neuer feaſt Chriſt againe: And yet we ought to be as carefull to feaſt him, as to feaſt with him. It is a ſhame to ſuppe often with Chriſt, and yet like vngrateful Nabals, neuer to haue one good diſh of grace, and holy obedience to ſet before him, wherewith indeede we ſhould feaſt him dayly. Others will ſeem to giue him good entertainment, for that day whereon they feaſt with Chriſt; but ſoone after they giue him gall to eate, and vineger to drinke, by their dayly ſinnes.

Verſ. 21. To him that ouer commeth will I make to ſit with me in my throne, euen as I

ouerouercame, and ſit with my father in his throne.

Verſ.22. Let him that hath an eare, heare what the ſpirit ſayth vnto the Churches.

Here is the concluſion of this Epiſtle, and it hath two parts. A Promiſe, verſ. 21, and a Commaundement, verſ. 22. In the Promiſe, note two things. Firſt, to whome it is made, To him that ouercometh. Hereof we haue ſpoken. Secondly the thing promiſed; that is, fellowſhip with Chriſt in glorie: I will make to ſit &c. whereby is not meant equalitie of glorie and honor; for that is not poſſible for any creature to receiue. But a participation onely of ſome part of his glorie: ſo much as ſhall ſuffice for his perfect happineſſe. And becauſe it might bee thought no great matter; therefore it is illuſtrated by a compariſon, as I ouercame, and ſit with my father in his throne. As if hee ſhould ſay; I will aduance them, that ouercome their ſpirituall enemies, into the participation of my glorie, euen as my Father (when I had ouercome) aduanced me into the fellowſhip of his glorie. Now Chriſt as hee is Mediator, is inferiour to his father, and in that regard is not aduanced to equall glorie with his Father, though he ſit with him: So the members of Chriſt, being inferiour vnto him, may ſitte with him in his throne, though their glorie be vnequall. Theſe things for ſubſtance haue beene handled. Chap.2.verſ. 26.28.

The ſecond part of this concluſion, Let him that hath an eare, heare &c. hath alſo been handled before.

The fruit of the righteous, is as a tree of life:
And he that winneth ſoules, is wiſe. Prou.11.30.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE WILLIAM LORD RVSSEL, BARON OF THORNEHAVGH:

Grace and all good blessings from God our Father, and our Lord Iesus Christ.

RIght Honorable, as it cannot be but true, which Truth it selfe hath vttered: [a] Him that honoureth me, I will honour; no more can it be but sure payment which such a creditor hath vndertaken, and not by any suretie, but by himselfe to be performed. Bootlesly had the world been betrusted with such a charge; which by suffering some to walke through dishonour, and by powring out contempt vpon others, vnwittingly suiteth the condition of the seruants to the case of the Sonne, who said: [b] I honour the Father, but ye dishonour me. Well then is it with vs, that he whose bare word is aboue all bonds, hath said, I will honour: not those who by treading downe his honour, honour themselues, neither whom men honour, nor who honour men; but those who honour him: by [c] loving him as a Father, and fearing him as a Lord. Not that any man can inlarge his honor; the [d] infinit perfection whereof is in it selfe vncapable of any accession: nor that any can of himselfe expresse this honour; seeing himselfe [e] worketh both such willes and deeds also, of his owne good pleasure: neither that if any could, hee might merit the returne of honour; for all that [f] were but his dutie: nor that if any could and would, hee should thereby profit God, to whom [g] mans goodnes is not extended: nor lastly, if any could, and would not, God should thereby be disprofited; for [h] if one be wicked he hurteth not him: but because the Lord, who delighteth to be the portion of Iacob, is pleased to accept the broken and homely seruice of his children, as an high honour done vnto himselfe; and themselues as honorers of him, and such as he (by crowning his owne worke in them) cannot but honour.

But [i] what shall be done to the man whom this King will honour? Ans. If [k] Baltazer King of Babel were to promise his highest honours: if [l] Haman were to aduise Ahashuerosh King of 127. Prouinces, in the bestowing of what honours himselfe could wish or hope: if [m] Pharaoh should call againe his Nobles to consultation, how to enlarge Iosephs aduancements: no more could be either promised, expected or performed, than that such a one should be arraied with royall attyre, as cloath of purple, and fine linnen; with a golden chaine about his necke, the Kings Ring on his hand, his princely Diadem set vpon his head, and withall by proclamation published the third man or Viceroy in the kingdom. Which indeed were ſingular aduancements: but yet the higheſt of theſe farre inferiour to the leaſt and loweſt honour, which this King of Kings vouchſafeth to beſtow. For euen thoſe Kings whileſt they inriched and inueſted others with ſuch royalties as belonged to a kinde of externall happines, themſelues were exceeding poore and deſtitute of the things truly good; the which (being of an higher ſtraine, & of nature internall and eternall) are incomparably, and only the beſt bleſſings. In a word then, thus ſhall it be done, yea [a] this honour haue all his Saints: that being borne of God, their deſcent is from the King of glorie, al of them Kings ſonnes, all brothers to Chriſt, the firſt borne among many brethren: all younger brothers indeed, but (which is admirable) all [o] Princes apparant, and that to the ſame incorruptible crowne of glorie. Tell me now: was it not almoſt the higheſt ſtaire of earthly honour to which Moſes was mounted, when he was called the ſonne of Pharaohs daughter? and yet iuſtly [p] refuſed he, nay deſpiſed that title, that he might be called but the ſeruant of God. But [q] behold what loue the Father beareth vs, that we ſhould be called (not ſeruants any more, but friends, Ioh. 15. 15. nay more) the ſonnes of God. Was it ſuch an aduancement that Dauid ſhould become the ſonne of Saul, a wicked King of Iſrael? and [r] can it ſeeme a ſmall thing to become the ſonnes of the holy one the God of Iſrael? Is it to be reputed a great grace to be nobly deſcended from great men, and backed with the alliance of the mightie? who then can deeme it other, than the top and tower of trueſt Nobilitie, to be (as the beleeuer) ſo neerely allied vnto Chriſt, who ſprouted out of the moſt honourable ſtock that euer the great field of the earth bare vpon it? vnto which their deſcent, if you adde their whole ſutable eſtate, they will appeare ſo abſolutely glorious, as it ſeemeth no further honour here below can befall them. Whoſe [s] garments are the white and vnſtained robes of Chriſts innocencie and righteouſnes; their chaine is the golden chaine of their ſaluation, the linkes whereof are deſcribed Rom. 8. 14. their [t] Ring or ſignet is the ſpirit of God, pledging and ſealing vp in their hearts the aſſurance of their ſaluation: their Iewels and [u] ornaments are the graces of that ſpirit, as Humility, Knowledge, Faith, Loue, Hope, &c. their diet more choiſe than that Manna, which was but a ſhadow of this [x] bread which commeth downe from heauen: their miniſters are all the creatures; their attendants are the Angels, not onely going before them and at their heeles, but as a guard [y] pitching themſelues round about them; their Diadem is that [z] crowne of righteouſnes, which the righteous Iudge ſhall giue to all them that loue his bleſſed appearing. This is ſuch honour as darkneth all the honour of the world, as the bright ſhining of the Sunne obſcureth the light of the leſſer ſtarres: this cauſeth the heart that hath it to contemne the contempt of the world, and quiet it ſelf in the holding hereof, as in a choiſe inheritance and a pretious purchaſe.

Now (my Lord) by all that hath been premiſed, you may behold what goodly grounds your Lordſhips lines are fallen into: whom the Lord hath not onely thus inwardly honoured by putting his feare in your heart, (whereof I might truly relate more than either your Lordſhip would be willing to reade; or my ſelfe (hating euen the ſuſpition of the baſe ſinne of inſinuation) am heartned to write) but alſo in your whole outward eſtate: a great honour is it to be the ſonne of ſo noble and worthie an Earle, as was your father of famous and perpetuall memorie: but that the ſame loue of religion, zeale to the truth, practiſe of pietie, wiſe care of your Countrie, noble and valiant reſolution, bountifull hoſpitalitie and liberalitie ſhould bee ſo eminent, and that the beſt part of his better part and vertues ſhould ſo ſeate themſelues in your perſon; this is it which maketh your Lordſhip honourable, not in him ſo much, as in your ſelfe; neither in your ſelfe alone, but (as [a] Samuel was) in the hearts of all the people. Theſe (my Lord) eſpecially of the former kind, are qualities well beſeeming [b] Nebuchadnezzars Nobles. For who are ſo fitted to ſtand before earthly Kings, as they who are often in the preſence of the great King, to whom all Kings are to be countable? or who are ſo worthie to ſtand in the preſence of our earthly Gods, as thoſe whom the God of heauen hath vouchſafed to ſet in his ſight, and gratious acceptance? Whereunto when I haue added how God hath honoured your Lordſhip to bee the husband of a vertuous and religious Ladie, the father of an hopefull heire, the brother of three ſo worthie and religious Counteſſes (two of whom of late haue receiued the end of their faith, euen their glorie with God) the poſſeſſor of a goodly reuenew: I may well ſay, [c] not many thus noble. Now becauſe to whom much is giuen, much is of them required, and where the Lord ſoweth liberally, there he expecteth a plentifull crop: let your Lordſhip be pleaſed to giue me leaue by writing to ſtirre vp and warne your pure minde, by calling to your remembrance that dutie, which you religiouſly receiued from my mouth (and that not ſeldome) thoſe diuers yeeres I employed my paines and poore talents in your Honours houſe, namely, that as either you tender the continuance of the honour, which the Lord hath alreadie powred vpon you; or expect any acceſſe thereunto, ſo you faithfully proceed in the waies wherein honour may redound to the higheſt: perſiſting to honour him with your [d] heart; by giuing it vnto him: with your life; by [e] adorning the doctrine of God: with your countenance; by [f] incouraging the practiſes of pietie: with your [g] riches and encreaſe; by relieuing the poore members of Chriſt: ſeeing that in all theſe your large receits God hath made your Lordſhip his Steward, and requireth your faithfulnes. Theſe be the paths beaten by the feete of the faithfull, wherein they are well experienced of the Lords faithfulnes. In theſe ſtandeth the whole dutie of a man: vpon performance whereof, and no other condition, the Sonne of God himſelfe made challenge of the glorie of his Father: [h] I haue glorified thee on earth, and now glorifie me with thy ſelfe.

Among other furtherances of your Honour hereunto, may your Lordſhip be pleaſed to receiue this booke, and giue it the reading; after what time I hope you will not denie it your protection, in regard of it ſelfe: although neither your Honours affection to the Author himſelfe whileſt he liued; neither his loue towards your Honours houſe made knowne to the world, in the dedication of ſundrie of his workes vnto the ſame; neither yet my owne dutie (which in many regards as your Lordſhip may iuſtly challenge, ſo my ſelfe am ſtraightly bound alwaies to tender) could ſuffer me elſewhere to ſeeke the ſhelter of this orphane Commentarie. My heartie deſire of the Lord is, that as he hath directed it vnto your Lordſhip, ſo he would alſo direct your Lordſhip by

TO THE CHRISTIAN READER, MVCH PEACE AND PROSPERITIE, FROM THE Author thereof, euen the Prince of peace the Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Amen.

Since it pleaſed the God of light by chaſing away the black miſts of popiſh darkenes to reſtore the cleare and ſunne-ſhine light of his glorious Goſpell vnto theſe parts of Europe, he hath neuer bene wanting in raiſing vp moſt faithfull and furniſhed inſtruments, who as golden trumpets haue ſounded out, and like golden candleſticks haue held forth before his people that great light, euen the word of truth which we preach; wherewith they haue bene mighty through God both by voice and pen, by word and writing; not only to diſcouer and detect that Antichriſt, but to ouerthrow and caſt downe his ſtrongeſt holds: yea and haue by the power of the ſame ſpirit in their mouths, which out of Chriſts owne mouth ſhall moſt powerfully vtterly aboliſh that man of ſinne at the brightnes of his appearing, giuen the beaſt already his deadly wound: yea and by the light haue driuen away that former Egyptiacall darkenes and blinde barbariſme wherein men ſate, and could not for many daies, yea hundred of yeares before ſtirre out of the place wherein the corruption of their nature had ſet them. Witnes this truth with me can thoſe incomparable lights of Germany (that I may begin where the Lord began) Luther, Melanchthon, Bucer, Oecolampadius, &c. France iuſtly glorieth of her three Worthies, Caluine, Beza, Marlorate: and of her three Nobles, Sadeel, Morney, and Iunius. How happie hath Heluetia bene in her fruitfull gardens, whence ſo many ſweete flowers, ſuch as Bullinger, Lauater, Zuinglius, and others not a few haue ſprowted? Yea Italy her ſelfe whoſe ſoyle is a ſtepmother indeed to ſuch plants, hath yet bene ſo farre manured by the hand of the good husbandman, that euen from thence two faire branches, neither of them inferior to the former, Martyr, and Zanchius haue ſprung vp, that as out of the mouth of two witneſſes from among themſelues, their ſentence might be ſealed againſt them. But among the nations glorious art thou Great Brittayne in this thy greatnes, which as thou haſt ſtripped all theſe thy neighbour nations in other externall beauties: ſo no whit art thou inferior to them in this honor; yea herein is thy trueſt triumph ouer them, that as peace and truth haue kiſſed each other within thy walls, and as the ſcepter of the Prince of peace hath bene almoſt full fifty yeares vpheld by the ſcepters of peaceable Princes: ſo thy Seas and Seminaries haue not bene deſtitute of their Iewel, Whittakers, Fulke, Reynolds, Rolock, Sutliffe, Willet, and their late Perkins, whome alone I make mention of, not becauſe either they are alone, or alone worthy; but partly that I may be moderate and not (as I might) infinite

infinite in recitall: and partly for that these haue most valiantly like Dauids worthies broken thorough these Philistims forces, and brought vnto vs in despight of them the pure water of the well of life; among whom this our Author last named was not the least, nor of so small note through the Christian world, that I can thinke by my penne to adde any moment vnto his: whose writings so sauory and so innocent haue sufficiently proclaimed his profound knowledge in all learning, his prudent zeale, his mature iudgement, with an admirable dexteritie and facilitie, yea I may say felicitie, (for herein hee raigned, that I may vse the phrase of the reuerend Deane of his Maiesties Chappel, properly applied vnto him at his funerals, which with singular approbation he performed) in the direct resoluing the obscurest doubts of Diuinitie, and the acute loosing and dissoluing the hardest knots of Papists, so briefly and yet so perspicuously, as that his most polemicall writings, being first by himself in our vulgar tongue published, could scarce meete euen amongst our common people, with such an vncapeable reader (if any whit catechised) into whom they might not conuey some competent conceit and vnderstanding of the deepest and darkest differences betweene the Papists, those patrons and defenders of darknes, and our selues. But besides these, such a tongue of the learned had the Lord God giuen him, that he knew to minister, and Isa. 50. 4. ministred according to knowledge a word in due time to him that was weary: the which most weighty duty of the Ministery was so familiar vnto him, that he made it his holidayes exercise (as his recreation) to resolue cases of conscience. In his ordinary Ministry how powerfull was he? Which of his hearers cannot confesse that he spake as one hauing authority? Adde now vnto these his labours, an holy and harmelesse life: for why should I disioyne them, seeing they were so happily combined in him? betweene which two (both of them conspiring to the glory of God, and his cause) was such a sweete harmonie and concent, that in reading his writings any man might see the manner of his life, and in seeing his life, he might also therein reade his writings: for his life spake what his pen writ, and his person was the president of his written precepts. But when these vnwearied labours had quickly worne out such a candle, who so freely spent himselfe to giue others light; such a life was not shut vp, but by a proportionall, euen a religious and christian death: of the which when God made (with some others) my selfe a beholder, I could not but conceiue him a messenger one of a thousand, singled out by God to giue directions to others, both how to liue, and that well, as also in the right manner of dying well, who himselfe was so trained to a blessed death by a holy life, whereby he became both in life and death a most happie and blessed man, for whose written precepts concerning both, the whole Church is bound to blesse God with vs: but especially we his ordinarie hearers in Cambridge, who besides were also the beholders of both, cannot be but so much the more strengthned and confirmed (our owne heedlesse ingratitude not resisting or withstanding vs) by how much the eye is quicker then the eare, and the sight a more certaine sense then can be the hearing. But we will leaue him with God, and omit those worthie works which himselfe whilest he liued (according as the relaxation both from the weekely labours of his calling, and the dayly weakenes of his body would permit) did publish, not only for the watering of this famous Seminary where he liued, but euen out of his abundance and full buckets, to the refreshing of all the heritage of God, and come to our owne purpose. It is not now to be wished; but bewailed rather, that all his works were not finished by himselfe before his owne course, seeing the orphane writings of the learned published by others are commonly lesse polished: for sometimes the Authors mind is not taken, and sometimes his matter is mistaken, otherwhiles his forme is inuerted,

and not seldome either his owne elegances and proprieties which are like goads are neglected, or something besides his owne is iniuriously inserted: but yet the Lord hauing loosed him from his labours, the christian care of his executors commendeth it selfe to the Church herein, that before it should be depriued of any part of his paines so profitably employed, desirous they are to communicate them, if not altogether in such exact manner as they would, yet as perfectly as they can, contented rather to hazzard the due regard of the author himselfe, by committing vnto his schollers hands the publishing of his labours, then that the Church should want them by their holding and hiding them with themselues. As for my selfe, my wish was to haue bene spared in these paines, both because of my owne weekely imployments, and that in this place wherein the busines might haue bene committed to diuers others farre better furnished with gifts, and fitted with oportunitie then my selfe: but especially seeing how safe and wise a thing it is to sit silent where a man need not speake, and that in these dayes wherein euery mans oare is in euery mans boate, and most men are become left-handed in receiuing things which are reached vnto them with the right; too like the 700. left-handed Beniamites, whose sole commendation seemeth to stand in this, that they can throw stones and darts against others at a haire-breadth and not faile: yet notwithstanding considering my calling hereunto, as also being after a sort reared vp by the Poets rule, not doubting but that the matter following is farre better then silence, I was contented at the instant intreatie of the Authors executors to vndertake the publishing of this Epistle, which himselfe had in his hart (if God had giuen him longer time) to haue with his owne hand set and sent out in it owne natiue beauty and perfection: wherein what my paines haue bene, they only know who haue fathered other mens posthumous writings. I haue not troden in their steps who make the grounds of the authors serue their owne discourses (for so should I haue made this exposition conteining in it the summe of 66. Sermons, exceed the measure euen of a tedious Commentary) but in the Authors owne, who was wont to transcribe out of the notes of some of his hearers, the heads, and marrow of things more largely in publike deliuered, explaining the points which were more obscure, and with a second hand polishing and perfecting things so explained. Yea herein imitating not onely the Author of the Commentarie, but euen of the text and Epistle, the Apostle Iude himselfe: who perceiuing the men of his daies quickly waxing wearie of hearing or reading Sermons or Epistles, if extended to any length or prolixitie, condiscended so farre to their infirmitie as to contract, and abridge much matter into a very short and summarie Epistle. Vpon the same consideration also haue I studied breuitie, so farre as in such multiplicitie of matter I might auoide obscuritie: hauing herein employed my best paines, that it might appeare that though I may haue failed in other complements, yet so farre as my endeuour could erect me, not in faithfulnes to the Author either of the text or Commentarie. The fitnes and seasonablenes of this exposition may seeme to pleade for the more gracious acceptance of it: which being breathed out by the Apostolicall spirit against the heretikes, and heresies which were to infect, and infest the last ages of the world, may by Gods blessing in the due reading hereof, strengthen the people of God in the land, in the discerning and resisting both the wicked seducers themselues daily sent in amongst vs: those Popish instruments (I meane) who (like so many diuels compassing the earth) are so diligent to compasse sea and land to make carnall Protestants Popish Proselytes, and so seuen-fold more the children of the diuell than they were before; as also their diabolicall doctrines which euery where it meeteth withall. A GODLIE AND LEARNED EXPOSITION VPON THE EPISTLE OF IVDE, EXPLAINED IN PVBLIKE LECTVRES BY that reuerend man of God, M. WILLIAM PERKINS, and now published for the vse of the Church of God.

Vers.1. Iude (or Iudas) a seruant of Iesus Christ, and brother of Iames, to them which are called and sanctified of God the father, and reserued to Iesus Christ.

THe generall ayme and scope of this Epistle, is partly to declare the dutie of all Christians, and partly to set out the corruptions of those, and these dayes and times; in both which euery one may receiue edification, who are desirous either to follow the former, or auoid the latter. In which generall consideration, we are to note three things concerning this Epistle, before we come to shew the parts of it in particular.

First the Authoritie, Secondly the Superscription, Thirdly the Argument or substance of it.

First concerning the Authoritie, two questions are to be answered.

The first question, whether this Epistle be canonicall scripture.

And secondly, how we may know the certeinty of it.

Concerning the former: Luther and others, who acknowledge it to be a profitable writing, denie it to be Canonicall scripture, and alleage foure reasons.

Obiect.1. First they say, Iude calleth himselfe a seruant of Iesus Christ, and not an Apostle, but all the new Testament was penned or approued by some Apostle.

Answere. This hindreth not but that he was one of the Apostles, who also called themselues seruãts of Iesus Christ, as Paul Rom. 1.1. and Peter, 2. Pet. 1.1. Secondly, by this reason the Epistles to the Philip. and Philemon, as also of Iames, Iohn &c. might be reiected.

Thirdly he calleth himselfe as much as an Apostle.

Obiect.2. Iude writeth of such things as the Apostles themselues had formerly foretolde, vers.17. Therefore hee was no Apostle.

Answere. Iude liued after the Apostles Paul and Peter, who with Iohn were the last of the Apostles, and liuing after their decease (who were the principal) might very wel put them in minde of those things they had foretolde.

Obiect.3. In the ninth verse, hee bringeth in a profane Author, concerning the strife and disputation betweene Michael the Archangell, and the diuell, about Moses body, which cannot be found in Canonical scripture; as also of Enoch the seauenth from Adam, out of profane writers.

Answere. By this reason, neither should the Epistle of Titus bee Scripture, seeing Paul makes mention of the profane Poet Epimenides, Titus 1.12. nor the epistle to the Corinthes, where is brought in the speech of Menander, 1. Cor. 15. 33. nor the Actes of the Apostles: where Aratus the Poet is cited. Actes 17.21.

Obiect.4. This Epistle is taken out of Saint Peter from whom this Author hath borrowed both the matter and manner. Therfore this Iude was no Apostle, but some scholler of theirs.

Answere. If this were sufficient to proue this Epistle not authenticall, then the whole bookes of Samuel, the Kinges, and Chronicles should be cast out of the Canon by the same reason: which take the matter from Ciuill Chronicles: Now if it be lawfull to take matter out of Ciuill Chronicles, why may not one Scripture be taken out of another? wee must therefore (notwithstanding withſtanding theſe weake allegations) eſteeme this Epiſtle to bee the Canonicall Scripture, and the eternall word of God, as our Church, and the Church in all ages hath receiued it. And now in the ſecond place ſee how wee may Queſt. 2. come to be reſolued that it is ſo to be allowed: which wee may in this reſemblance. An Indenture betweene man and man is knowne to bee ſufficient two waies. Firſt by the matter and contentes therin, which plainly ſhewes an acte paſſed, and done: ſecondly, by adding and annexing thereunto certaine outward ſignes and teſtimonies, as the handes and ſeales of the parties, the handes and names of the witneſſes corroborating and ſtrengthening the ſame: the firſt is good in it ſelfe (though not ſo confirmed to the parties) without the ſecond: but the ſecond is nothing without the firſt: but if both theſe ſhall concurre and bee ſpecified in the Indenture, then it is abſolutely authenticall, both in it ſelfe, and vnto the parties. If this be applied to the ſcripture, it ſhall be apparant to bee no leſſe ratified then ſuch an Indenture. For firſt conſider but the Contentes and matter it ſelfe of it, it will ſpeake the certeinty and truth of it: read ouer the Epiſtle, you ſhall finde the whole matter agreed vpon by the Prophets and Apoſtles: and for the teſtimonie, the Catholike and common conſent of the Church, or greateſt part ſince the Apoſtles dayes, hath ſet to her hand and ſeale that it is the truth of God, no leſſe aſſured then other bookes of the Canon: which aſſent of the church, though it cannot make vs, yet may moue vs accordinglie to entertayne it. Beſides, if we conſider the endes, as alſo the effects of this ſcripture (which are the ſame with any part of the Canonicall) wee cannot but confeſſe that it is the holy and ſacred truth of God, all of it conſpiring with all the other to the aduancing of Gods glorie, and furthering of mans ſaluation. So much of the authoritie of this Epiſtle.

The ſecond point is the Superſcription, which is in theſe words: The Catholique Epiſtle of Iude. This title ſeemes to bee prefixed rather by ſome Scribe afterwards, then by Iude himſelfe: firſt becauſe this title (Catholique) was not heard of in the Church whileſt the Apoſtles liued; ſo as it is not ſo ancient as the Epiſtle.

Secondly the title ſeemes to bee vnfit for this and other Epiſtles intitled after the ſame manner, and may be well forborne; as the Epiſtles of Peter are called Canonicall, which are no more Canonicall then others.

Thirdly, moſt of the Poſt-ſcripts are vncerteine, if not falſe: as of that after the ſecond Epiſtle to Timothie: in which Timothie is called an elect Biſhop of Epheſus, and yet commaunded to doe the worke of an Euangeliſt, 2. Timoth. 4. 5. which cannot ſtand together, to be the Biſhop of one place, and alſo vniuerſally to preach vnto the whole world following the Apoſtles, as the Euangeliſtes duty was: and ſo of others. This title then was not added by the Apoſtle, but by ſome Scribe that copied out the Epiſtle: it is not therefore holy Scripture as the Epiſtle is.

The third point concerning the Epiſtle in generall, is the argument: which doth exhort all Chriſtians to conſtancie and perſeuerance in their profeſſion of the Goſpell. Secondly, to beware and take heede of falſe teachers, and deceiuers which craftely creepe in amongſt them: And thirdly theſe deceiuers are liuely ſet out in their colours; and with them their deſtruction.

Now concerning the Epiſtle it ſelfe, and the ſpeciall partes of it.

Of it there be three partes: firſt a Salutation in the 1. and 2. verſes: Secondlie an Exhortation, from the 3. verſe, to the end of the 23. Thirdly, a Concluſion, from that to the end of the Chapter. In the Salutation conſider three thinges.

Firſt the perſon that wrote this Epiſtle: Iude.

Secondly, the perſons to whom hee wrote: to thoſe which were called, ſanctified of God the father, and reſerued to Ieſus Chriſt.

Thirdly the Prayer, ordinarie in Apoſtolicall ſalutations: mercie vnto you, &c.

Concerning the firſt, namely the writer of this Epiſtle, obſerue three thinges, firſt his name, Iude, ſecondly his office, a ſeruant of Ieſus Chriſt. Thirdly his Allyance, and brother-hood, being of the kindred of Chriſt himſelfe.

Firſt of his name, Iude or Iudas, which 1.
was the name of two of the Diſciples of Chriſt: the firſt was Iudas the ſonne of Alpheus, the brother of Iames, and ſo neare allyed vnto Chriſt; who was the writer of this Epiſtle. The other was Iudas Iſcariot, or Iudas the traytor the ſonne of of Simon who could not write this Epiſtle becauſe he died before Chriſt.

In this name conſider two thinges. Firſt the occaſion of it, and ſecondly the varietie of his name. The occaſion of this name is ſet downe with the reaſon of it in the 29. of Gen. 35. When Leah had borne three ſonnes vnto Iacob, ſhee conceiued againe and bare a fourth ſonne, ſaying, Now I will praiſe the Lord, therefore ſhee called his name Iudah, which ſignifieth praiſe or confeſſion: ſo no doubt did Alpheus the father of this Iude at his birth giue him ſuch a name as might moue not only himſelfe but his child after him to thankfulnes and confeſſion of Gods goodnes. So ought euery father in impoſing his childrens names with Alpheus, and euery mother with Leah make ſuch choice of names as themſelues and their children may bee put in minde, yea, and ſtirred vp to good duties, euen ſo often as they ſhal heare or remember their own names. The ſecond point in this name is the variety of the names of Iude, hee was called Thaddeus, Mark. 3. 18: and Lebbeus, Matth. 10. 3: all which ſignifie the ſame thin, gand all put in minde of the ſame dutie. Here two Queſtions may bee asked. Firſt why was he called by ſo many names? Some thinke he had all theſe names giuen him by the people and multitude, as ſignifying all one thing: others (which is more probable) that hee was thus called by the Apoſtles themſelues rather then by his owne name, that the horrible fact of Iudas in betraying his Maiſter ſhould bee vtterly with his name forgotten.

Queſt. 1. Anſwer.

A ſecond queſtion is, whether may a man change his name, or no?

Queſt. 2.

If the change thereof be no preiuidce to any man; much leſſe hurtefull to the Church or common-welth, nor offendeth the faithfull, but wholy tendeth to the glory of God, and good of men, it may be altred and changed: As Saul a great perſecutor, being called to be a publiſher and Patron of the Goſpell, changed his name into Paul: as alſo Salomon was at the firſt called by his Mother Iedidiah: Peter, at firſt called Simon Bariones, Chriſt afterwards gaue him a new name, and he accepted it. Yet hence the too common practiſe of the world cannot bee warranted, who for fraud and deceite doe alter their names: which when it is not intended may warrantably bee done: as in time of perſecution in the raigne of King Edward the 6. Bucer changed his name, and both called himſelfe, and ſuffered others to call him Aretius Felinus: ſo did diuerſe other worthie men in thoſe dayes ſeeking no other then the glory of God, and good of the Church in their owne ſaftie: and that the Papiſts not knowing their names might reade their writinges without preiudice.

Anſwere.

Beza writ two Homlies concerning the ſacrament vnder the title of Nathaniel Neſekins: and Caluins Inſtitutions printed vnder the name of Alcuinus the Maſter of Charles the Great, Anno 1534. II.

The ſecond thing in the perſon writing, is his office: being called [a ſeruant of Ieſus Chriſt] which is not ſo generallie to be vnderſtood as ment of euery profeſſor of Chriſt and beleeuer, who is a ſeruant of the Lord Ieſus: but of a ſpeciall ſeruice, namely of Apoſtleſhip, to which he was deputed.

Wherein conſider two thinges. Firſt, that he was called to bee an Apoſtle and ſeruant of Chriſt to plant the Church of the Gentiles: Secondly, that he did faithfully execute his function, and performed his ſeruice.

Firſt he pleades his calling; for two cauſes: firſt in regard of others, and ſecondly in reſpect of himſelfe. Firſt that his doctrine might with more attention, and reuerence be receiued of others, ſeeing he run not vnſent but was called, and that to an Apoſtleſhip; and therefore he ſpake not of himſelfe, but whollie and immediately directed by God.

Secondly for the confirming and comforting of himſelfe, that the Lord who had called him would ſtand by him, both in protecting his perſon, and proſpering his worke in his hand.

Vſe. Seeing the Apoſtle Iude before he writeth laieth down his calling; ſo ought all Miniſters to make their calling the foundation of all their proceedings, containing themſelues within the compaſſe thereof, euen as they are to teach the ſame dutie vnto all ſortes of men, that they tempt not the Lord, by paſſing the bonds and limites of their calling.

Secondly, in that Iude, though he was of the ſame Tribe, yea of neare allyance vnto Chriſt, yet hee paſſeth by all theſe reſpectes which hee might haue ſtood vpon, and contenteth himſelfe with the title of a [ſeruant of Chriſt:] We learne to make more account, and eſteeme it a greater priuiledge to be a ſeruant of Ieſus Chriſt, than to bee of the kindred of Kinges, and allyed to the greateſt Monarchs of the world: Chriſt himſelfe selfe shewes vs what kindred should take vp our chiefe delight, when hee turned himselfe from his Mother, and Brethren, and beholding his hearers said, those were his mother, sisters and brethren that heare the word of God, and keepe it: this alliance in the faith was neerer and dearer vnto him then that in the flesh. If then thou standest vpon thy preferment, striue to be the seruant of Christ, which is more honorable then to be the sonne of a King, to be a follower of Chist, is more then to goe before the Rulers of the earth. But if thou aske how shall I come to this preferment? Himselfe answereth thee, thou must giue vp thy selfe to heare his word and doe it, that is, learne to know, and obey his will, this is the maine dutie of a seruant, endeuour to please the Lord in keeping faith and good conscience thou art in the way of preferment, and art admitted a seruant of Christ.

Thirdly: If wee bee admitted the seruantes and followers of Christ, wee must serue no other Maister, but keepe our selues from being intangled either with the offences, or affairs of the world, as to be vassals thereto: no man can serue two, much lesse more Maisters of such contrarie commaundes. Let none pretend to bee the seruant of Christ, who by louing pleasure more thē God, or seeking earth more then heauen, disgrace such a profession.

III. The third thing in the person writing, is the allyance [Brother of Iames] of which name there were two, first, Iames the son of Zebedeus, whose death is mentioned in the 12. of the Actes by Herod: the second was the son of Alpheus, here mentioned:

First, that he might distinguish himselfe from the other Iudas the traytour. Secondly, that he might winne further credit and attention to his doctrine, seeing hee was no vnknowne person, but one that came of the worthiest stock that was vpon the face of the earth; and for this cause hee mentioneth his brother Iames, who was better knowne, as being the President of the Councell at Ierusalem and a choise pillar of the Church in his time, Act. 15.13: not to credit himselfe, but this Scripture (which otherwise is in it selfe sufficiently powerful) by the mention of him.

Now followes the second thing in the Salutation: that is, the person to whom Iude wrote, in these words [vnto those who are called, and sanctified by God the father, and preserued by Iesus Christ] it is, the militant Catholique Church, which is liuelie described to be the number of beleeuers dispersed thorough the face of the whole world; who are effectually called, and sanctified and preserued vnto life euerlasting: Out of which description note:

The Scriptures written properly for the Church, that it might be gathered and strengthened thereby.

First, who and what they bee that are members of this Church: namely no wicked or profane persons, but onely the elect, such as are chosen vnto life euerlasting, who after receiue their calling vnto holines, and therein are assuredly preserued vnto life; which priuiledges no wicked person, no vnrepentant sinner can be partaker of, but onely the Church of the first borne, as in Heb. the 12; whose names are written in the booke of life, and who receiue daily spirituall increase: for howsoeuer in the Catholike Church there be two sorts of men professing religion: the one, of them that do vnfainedly beleeue, and are sanctified; the other, of them who make a shew of faith, but indeede beleeue not, but remaine in their sinnes: of the former doth the Catholike Church consist, and not of the latter, who are no members set into the head of this body, though they may seeme so to bee.

Secondly, this confuteth the Romish Church, who teach and hold that a reprobate may be a member of this Church.

Thirdly, that none can bee the head of this Church and Catholique congregation but onely Christ, for he only knoweth them, who and where they be thorough the face of the whole earth: not the Pope or any other creature hath any headship ouer this companie who are giuen and properly appertaine vnto the Sonne of God.

Fourthly, that this Catholique Church is inuisible and cannot by the eie of flesh be discerned; for what eye (except of faith) can see or discerne the depth of Gods election or whom he hath effectually called? yea and who can infalliblie determine of the things that are within a man? and therefore this is a matter of faith, not of sense, an Article of our beleefe, not the obiect of our sight, seeing faith is an euidence of thinges not seene: which againe ouerthroweth that Romish doctrine, which teacheth that the Catholike Church is visible and apparent vpon earth, and so destroy that Article of our faith.

Fiftly,

Fiftly, that this Catholike Church being preſerued by God the Father to life euerlaſting, cannot vtterly periſh and bee diſſolued: all other congregations and particular Churches being mixed, and the greateſt part not predeſtinate may faile, yet this cannot be ouercome, Rom. 11.7. this election of God ſhall obtaine, though the reſt be hardened. The gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt the faith of the Church, becauſe faithfull and true is hee that hath ſpoken, and who will preſerue in this Church a ſucceſſion of wholſome and ſound doctrine, and heauen and earth ſhall be ſooner diſſolued, than on iote of the ſame ſhall faile and periſh.

Obiect. But though that faile not, the Church may fall from that, and ſo faile.

Anſwere. That particular Churches, and of them the moſt famous, haue been ruined, yea and fallen away, and ſo may doe, is euident by the Churches of Epheſus, Corinth, Galatia, &c. and no maruell, ſeeing theſe conſiſted euer of mixed perſons, but the Catholique Church conſiſting onelie of a number elected and called, though it alſo (not being as yet without wrinkle) may erre and faile in ſome ſmaller points: yet being preſerued by God to life, cannot poſſibly faile in the maine and foundation.

This doctrine affordeth ſtrong conſolation to the elect of God, both in regard of their frequent falles and infirmities, whereby they might feare to caſt themſelues quite out of fauor; as alſo in regard of the manifold aſſaultes, and bickerings, which in the world they doe and ſhall endure, whereby they might ſeeme to the outward veiw to periſh: yet the truth is, neither of both need ſo diſmay them, but that their faith and hope may ſtill bee reuiued and ſtrengthened, ſeeing they are preſerued to ſaluation.

Sixtly, here are better notes of a true Church then the Papiſtes Antiquity, Succeſſion, Multitude, &c. which can bee no notes. Frſt for Antiquitie: in the beginning was a true Church, but no Antiquitie. Secondly, ſucceſſion failes: for what men ſoeuer are called and ſanctified, are the Church: Thirdly, multitude no note: for if there be a calling and ſanctification of men, there is a Church, be there many or few: But the true notes are the meanes of calling to the faith by the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and obedience thereunto, proceeding forward in ſanctification, euen vntill death; without which notes none can truly ſay they are of the Catholique Church: By which we may know the Church of England to be the true viſible Church of God, called and ſanctified in the truth, Ioh. 8.31.

The church not tied to perſons or places, but to Chriſts voice.

Now to proceede, wee are in the next place to intreate of the order which God obſerueth in bringing men by degrees to life euerlaſting: And firſt of the calling mentioned; which is a worke of God, who of his meere fauour and grace calleth vile and miſerable men out of the world, and inuiteth them to life euerlaſting: to vnderſtand which we muſt know that the calling of God is two fold. The firſt is generall, when God calles a whole Nation, kingdome, and countrie, that is, when hee offers them ſaluation in the meanes; as when hee ſends his word amongſt them, affordes them the Sacraments to ſeale the Couenant, giues leaue to approch him in prayer, and all this in the Miniſtrie of man, that man might call man: yea when hee vouchſafeth priuate meanes farre inferior to the former, yet often ſerving for a generall calling, as is the reading of the Scriptures, yea of mens writings, and ſome time reports, as in Rahabs example, and the woman of Samaria; by theſe meanes the Lord generally calleth men, offering, but often not giuing grace offered, in great iudgement turning away from a froward people.

Obiect. If God offer, but giue not grace, it is a deluding of men:

Anſwere. No, for firſt a man was once able to receiue it: ſecondly, hereby hee maketh them without excuſe whom he will deſtroy: thirdly, hereby he keepes the wicked in outward order.

Vſe: Conſidering to be called of God is the firſt ſtep to life euerlaſting, and we in this Church of England are thus called, it remaines that euery man ſhould anſwere this calling.

Queſtion. How ſhall this be done?

Anſwere. Frame thy heart to anſwere God, as Dauid did when God bad him ſeeke his face: Thy face O Lord will I ſeeke: ſee alſo Marke 9. 23. 24. of the father of the poſſeſſed child, and Pſal. 40. 6. 7. whē Dauids eare was pearced, hee anſwered: Lord I come: this ought to be the Anſwer of our hartes to the Lords voice ſounding in the Miniſtry.

The ſecond calling is more ſpeciall, when grace is not only offered, but giuen alſo by God, thorough the effectuall working of his ſpirit in our hearts: which is the beginning of grace in vs, hee himſelfe laying the firſt foundation of it: by giuing power to receiue the word, to mingle it with faith, and bring forth the fruites of new obedience; for the better conceiuing of the nature of it conſider ſixe pointes.

Firſt the ground and foundation of it, namely Gods eternall free election of vs vnto life euerlaſting, as 2.Tim.1.9. when I ſay free, I exclude not only whatſoeuer man can imagine within himſelfe as vaine in procuring ſuch good vnto himſelfe, as not of works, ſaith Paul, leaſt any ſhould boaſt; but alſo placing the ground of all our good out of our ſelues in the counſell of God, which the Apoſtle calles his good purpoſe, Rom.8.28: yea to ſhew the freenes of this grace, it is thence denominated and called the election of grace.

Secondly the meanes of this calling, which in the Lords hands are diuers; whereof ſome prepare to calling, otherſome are inſtruments of it: as firſt the reading of the Scriptures, ſeruing to begett a generall hiſtoricall faith. Secondly, afflictions in bodie, goods, name, friends or otherwiſe tending to humble a man and prepare his heart as ſoft ground. Thirdly, the denouncing of Gods iudgements, and threats of the law which ſends to hell, but giues no grace: theſe are generall preparatiues: others are inſtruments to effect inward calling, as the preaching of the glad tidings of the Goſpell, which is the moſt principall and effectuall meanes of this ſpeciall and effectuall vocation: and to this Paul aſcribes it, as 2.Theſſ.2.14. whereunto he called you by our Goſpell: that this is true, conſider a two fold worke of this Miniſterie, when it is powerfully applied to the hearts of men. Firſt it openeth the very heart of a man, and laies him out to the beholding of himſelfe, ſhewing him that by his deteſtable ſins he hath made himſelfe more vgly in Gods eyes than any Toade can be in mans: whereby he is prepared not to lie aſleep in this eſtate, but vnto the ſecond worke, which is to apprehend and applie the blood and merits of Chriſt (exhibited in the Goſpell) for the waſhing and bathing of his ſinfull ſoule, that ſo he may be ſaued from wrath.

Thirdly, the perſons that are called: thoſe are mentioned, Rom.30. namely thoſe whom hee had before predeſtinate, thoſe he called: which ſeemes to be expounded in Acts 13.48. So many as were ordained to life euerlaſting beleeued, that is, were called vnto the faith: all therefore are not called.

It pleaſeth ſome to teach another doctrine, namely that God for his part calls all men effectually, and giues them a power to beleeue if they will; but the difference, ſay they, is in the will of man; to prooue which they bring this compariſon: The Sunne ſhines on waxe and clay equally, the waxe is ſoftned, but the clay is hardened. But this is not true out of the Scriptures: for it is not giuen to all to vnderſtand the myſteries of the kingdome, Matth.13.11. theſe things are hid from moſt of the wiſe of the world, and reueiled vnto babes, Matth.11.25. Knowledge is giuen to ſome, not to others, and conſequently faith: for they which haue not knowne cannot beleeue.

Fourthly, the time of this calling. The particular time of any mans calling is not reueiled, but laid vp in the ſecret counſell of God, in whoſe hands times and ſeaſons are: yet the extent of the time is large enough though ſtinted, euen the time of this life, ſome at the ſixt houre, ſome at the ninth, and others at the eleuenth, &c. but not after, becauſe that then all means of calling men ceaſe. Now becauſe men know not the date of their daies, it behoues them out of hand to ſtriue to enter, not to deferre from day to day, alleaging that ſome are called at the twelfth houre, but accept of ỹ Lords call while it is yet the acceptable time. If the Lord now ſay, Seeke my face, let thy heart anſwere as an eccho which takes the word out of the mouth, thy face O Lord I will ſeeke, Pſalm.27.8. ſuch a pleaſant harmonie God is delighted with. If he ſay (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) Behold now my people, they are preſently readie to anſwere: Behold now our God; and the rather becauſe the Lord will be free, and not ſtinted by thee, that either he ſhould call thee in thy crooked yeeres, or not at all: he will not be preſcribed vnto extraordinarily to call thee at the twelfth houre, as he did the theefe on the croſſe, when thou howleſt vpon the bed of thy ſorrow, and gaſpeſt vpon thy death-bed. Therefore while it is called to day let vs

heare the voyce, and harden our hearts no more.

Fiftly, wherein doth this effectuall calling ſtand?

Anſw. Both in the outward and inward calling, becauſe the former is often in the meanes giuen to Nations, people, men, at leaſt to make them without all excuſe: but the ſecond being ſecret and inward, whereby the Lord makes a mans heart inwardly anſwere the outward calling, poſſeſſeth him with a willing mind ſtedfaſtly to beleeue in the Lord Ieſus, and with an endeuour to pleaſe the Lord in all things: thus is the heart pearced, Pſal. 40. 6. the heart of ſtone changed into an hart of fleſh, that is, made tractable and pliable, Ezech. 11. 19. and an heart which is a ſacrifice accepted of God; ſuch an hart was Lydias, Act. 16. 15. when God had opened it, it was heedfull and attentiue to the words of Paul: this hart can reliſh the ſweete promiſes of the Goſpell, and no other.

Vocantur Electi vel foris, per predicationem externam: vel intus efficaci operatione ſpiritus.

Sixtly, the excellencie of this calling: which wee ſhall perceiue by theſe conſiderations. Firſt, in that it is a great work, as was the creation of man at the firſt, Rom. 4. 18: ſo the Apoſtle maketh it, 2. Cor. 4. 6. he that at the beginning called light out of darknes, the ſame hath ſhined in our hearts, &c. that as God cals the firſt time and dead creatures come foorth to life: ſo with no leſſe powerfull voyce the Lord cals the ſecond time the heart of man dead in ſinne, and it is quickened with the life of God.

Secondly, this effectuall calling goes beyond the worke of our creation: for here a man is taken out of the firſt Adam, and ſet into the ſecond, and at the ſame inſtant power is giuen to beleeue, being in time both together, though in order faith is firſt, and then ingrafting, wherein is not onely a bare priuation as in the creation when God called things that were not, as though they were: but here is a plaine reſiſtance and rebellion, God calling not onely things that are not, but things that would not and refuſe to be. Thus to raiſe a man out of the blood of Chriſt, is more than to raiſe Eue out of Adams ſide; to raiſe a dead ſoule from the death of ſinne farre more glorious and powerfull, than to raiſe a dead bodie from bodily death; to raiſe a man to ſupernaturall life, farre greater than to a naturall onely.

Thirdly, this calling ratifies all our couenants with God. Men in their Baptiſme enter couenant with God, but often ſtart from it, and will not ſtand to it, ſo as the couenant is onely made: but when as a man is effectually called, the couenant is not onely made but truly accompliſhed, and that on mans part.

Vſe. Seeing we are called of God himſelfe in the miniſterie of the word, (for Paul calles it, Phil. 3. 14. an high calling) we muſt labour to ioyne the inward calling with it which is higher than that, by hauing firſt a griefe becauſe we cannot beleeue: ſecondly, a readie mind: thirdly, an endeuour to beleeue: fourthly, a ſorrow becauſe we beleeue no more, and faile ſo much in the ſeruice of God; which if we want we muſt labour for the; and if wee haue them, be thankfull vnto God for them.

2. Vſe. Learne the dutie laid downe by the Apoſtle, Epheſ. 4. 1. that we ſhould walke worthie of our calling. To doe which, firſt we muſt looke that we frame our liues holily, being holy in our whole converſation, as he that hath called vs is holie. Secondly, there muſt be the ſame end of our liues which is of Gods calling, that is, to bring vs to heauen. The end of our being in the world is to be called out of the world, and (as Abraham) to obey God, as looking for a citie in heauen not made with hands.

Sanctification followeth effectuall calling.

Now we proceede to the ſecond ſtep of life eternall, which is ſanctification: this name is taken from the Latins, and by it is vnderſtood Regeneration, renouation, new creation, and to be ſanctified is to be made holie and be borne anew. That wee the better know this grace conſider ſundrie points.

Firſt, what ſanctification is: It is an inward change of a man iuſtified, whereby the image of God is reſtored in him. For the opening of which deſcription marke that firſt I call it a change of a man, to put a difference betweene it and ciuill conuerſation, which is a gift of God likewiſe as this is, but farre different from it; becauſe this onely reſtraineth the corruption of the heart, whereas ſanctification reneweth the heart: and thus the gifts of God are of two ſorts: firſt, reſtraining, which doe keepe in the wickednes of the heart, ſuch as are all ciuill vertues. Secondly, renuing or altering the minde, which not only repreſſeth but aboliſheth corruption; of this kinde is ſanctification.

Secondly, I call it an inward change, namely in the minde, will, affections, as working vpon the inward corruptions and luſts of the heart: to diſtinguiſh it from outward ſanctification which a wicked man may haue, whereby he reformeth his outward man and cariage by the miniſterie of the word, ſuch are they whom the Apoſtle ſpeakes of, Heb.10.27. which tread vnder their feete the blood of Chriſt, whereby they were ſanctified, namely externally: this is of another kinde working the inward change of the heart.

Thirdly, I adde of a man iuſtified: for two cauſes: firſt, to ſhew that iuſtification and ſanctification are two diuers gifts of God, and their difference may appeare in three things: firſt, in that iuſtification is out of a man; ſanctification is within him. Secondly, iuſtification abſolues a ſinner, and makes him ſtand righteous at the barre of Gods iudgement; ſanctification cannot doe this. Thirdly, iuſtification brings peace of conſcience; ſo doth not ſanctification, but followeth that peace.

Thus the Apoſtle hath them diſtinct, 1.Cor.6.11. Ye are waſhed, ye are iuſtified and ſanctified: as alſo 1.Cor.1.30. Chriſt is made to vs righteouſnes and ſanctification. Secondly, becauſe iuſtification goes with ſanctification, though iuſtification be before in nature, yet they are wrought at the ſame time. For when God accepts a mans perſon, then is hee made iuſt, who is alſo ſanctified. Fourthly, I ſay the image of God is hereby reſtored, the which that we may know wherein it conſiſteth, conſider the three-folde eſtate of man; the firſt of innocencie, the ſecond after the fall, and the third vnder Chriſt. Firſt, in innocencie man had three things: firſt, ſubſtance of bodie & ſoule: ſecondly, the faculties of ſoule, as reaſon and vnderſtanding: thirdly, the image of God ſtanding in the conformitie of the whole man, to the will of God. Secondly, in the ſtate after the fall man hath two of theſe: firſt, ſubſtance of bodie and ſoule: ſecondly, faculties as before. But the third is wanting, ſtanding in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, and in ſtead of it is found in euery man original ſinne, which diſtempereth and diſordereth the whole man, his minde, will and affections, and carrieth him againſt the will of God. In the third condition vnder Chriſt wee haue three things: firſt, ſubſtance of bodie and ſoule: ſecondly, faculties of the reaſonable ſoule: thirdly, a new created holines and righteouſneſſe, before loſt, but now reſtored by grace aboue nature; and this is a renewed conformitie to the will of God, and the image of God againe reſtored.

Where note that ſanctification is ſuch a gift of God, as changeth the man, not the ſubſtance of the bodie, or the faculties of the ſoule, but the corruption, diſorder and ſinfulnes of man; it rectifieth, but aboliſheth not affections: if a man be of ſad diſpoſition, it neither increaſeth nor taketh away, but moderates his ſorrow, and keepes it in order: ſo if a man bee of a merrie diſpoſition, it depriues him not of his mirth, but corrects it, that it exceede not: ſo in Choler and other complexions. Then thoſe that feare to labour in their ſanctification, becauſe then they muſt be ſolitarie, ſad, and cannot be merrie, and thoſe that thus obiect againſt thoſe who endeuour ouer their owne reformation, may ſee themſelues deceiued, ſeeing it onely tempereth the affections to ſuch moderation as becommeth holines.

Religion rectifieth affections, but aboliſheth them not.

The ſecond point is: Whence haue we our ſanctification? whether from our parents, or from what originall? Queſtion.

No, it cannot flow from the parents, no although they be holy; *Iob.1.13. the new birth is not of blood, nor the will of fleſh, nor of man: for parents muſt bee conſidered two waies: firſt, as they are men, children of Adam. Thus they bring their children, and conuey no more to their children than Adam did, which is nature, together with the corruption of it. Anſwere. *Who can bring a cleane thing out of filthines? there is not one.

Holy parents haue no ſinne, for it is mortified in them, therefore they cannot deriue it to their children? Obiect.

Notwithſtanding their ſanctification they conuey the nature and ſinne of Adam: which comes thus to paſſe. God in the beginning gaue this law, that whatſoeuer Adam receiued, he ſhould receiue it for himſelfe and his poſteritie; and whatſoeuer he loſt, he ſhould loſe from himſelfe and all his poſteritie: by vertue of which law parents ſanctified bring foorth children vnſanctified, which may appeare by this cõpariſon. Take wheate, make it as cleane as you can, ſow it, and Anſwere.

it

it will come vp not as it was ſowen, but in ſtalke blade and eare, and it brings vp as much chaffe as euer it did, though none were ſowen with it; what is the reaſon hereof but onely the order ſet in nature by God at the firſt? So parents, let them be neuer ſo holie, by vertue of the former lawe bring foorth vnholie children.

Secondly, parents muſt be conſidered as holy men, ſonnes of the ſecond Adam by a ſecond birth: and thus they produce not their children, nor deriue their holines into them, although their holineſſe may be a meanes to bring them within the Couenant.

Whence note that ỹ ſoule of the child is not deriued fr̃o the ſoule of the father, as the body is frõ his body, for then ſhuld they haue the ſame properties with the ſoule of the parents: ſo euery regenerate man ſhould deriue a regenerate ſoule vnto the infant, which is falſe not onely in many examples, but in that originall ſinne infecteth euery infants ſoule, aſwell of the beleeuing as vnbeleeuing parent.

Queſtion. But if ſanctification be not from the parent, whence is it?

Anſwere. From Chriſt, who is made of God vnto vs ſanctification, 1.Cor.1.30. 1.Coloſſ.22. In him are hid all the treaſures of it, of whoſe fulnes we receiue grace for grace, 1.Ioh.16. wherein two further points are to be knowne: firſt, what thing in Chriſt is the roote of our ſanctification: namely Chriſt his holines as he is man, euen as Adams vnrighteouſnes is the roote of our corruption.

Secondly, that ſeeing he is the root of our ſanctification, it is neceſſarie there be a coniunction and vnion betweene him and vs, before we can partake of his holines, and it is the bond of faith which knits vs as members vnto him the head: in which regard the Apoſtle ſaith, he is made of God our ſanctification, 1.Cor.1.30. that is, the roote and author of it.

A third point is, the meaſure of our ſanctification, which is but in part giuen vs in this life, the moſt regenerate man being partly fleſh and partly ſpirit, appearing in this compariſon: Take a veſſell full of water, let a portion be taken out and an equall portion of hot water put in, it becomes luke-warme all of it, partly hote and partly cold: euen ſo euery man is a veſſell of water filled with corruption to the brim, if a part of his corruption be taken away, and a proportionall part of holines put in ſtead of it, the whole man becomes partly holy, partly vnholy: of which wee haue an example in Moſes, Num.20.8.9. who in ſmiting the rock ſo as the water guſhed out, bewrayed the mixture of faith with vnbeleefe in the ſame action; he takes the ſtaffe, therein he obeyed God; but he ſtrikes the Rocke twice, being commanded only to ſpeake to it, and therein he diſobeyed, for which the Lord was angrie.

A fourth point is, touching the parts of ſanctification, which may be diuided two waies: firſt it is diuided into mortification and viuification.

The firſt diuiſion of ſanctification. Mortification is a part of ſanctification, whereby the power, tyrannie and ſtrength of originall ſinne is weakned, and alſo by little and little aboliſhed, which be cõſidered to be not in one part onely, but throughout; ſo as when one part of originall ſinne decaieth, ſo doth alſo the reſt, the ground of which is the vertue and efficacie of Chriſts death: which if any aske what it is, and what power it can haue ſince it is ended: I anſwere, it is that power of his Godhead whereby on the croſſe hee ſuſtained his Manhood, and ſo made his death a ſatiſfaction to the iuſtice of God for mans ſinne.

Queſtion. It will be further asked, how come we to be partakers of this vertue of Chriſts death, and to feele the power of it in our hearts?

Anſwere. So ſoone as any man by faith begins to be vnited vnto Chriſt, his death is applied vnto him, ſo that by meanes of our coniunction with Chriſt, we as truly partake of that power of his, as he himſelfe was on the croſſe ſuſtained by it: then he feeles ſin wounded in him and dying dailie, to which hee cannot liue as before.

The ſecond part of ſanctification, is viuification, or quickning, and it is when Chriſt dwels and raignes in our hearts by his ſpirit; ſo as we can ſay, we henceforth liue not, but Chriſt in vs: the foundation of which is the vertue of Chriſts reſurtection: which is nothing elſe but the power of his Godhead raiſing his Manhood, and freeing him from the puniſhment and tyrannie of our ſinnes: this power is conueied from him vnto all his members, who being myſtically conioyned ned with him, are thereby raiſed from the graue of their ſinnes.

The ſecond diuiſion. The ſecond diuiſion is taken from the faculties of man: which are ſeauen in number: 1. The Minde: 2. Memorie: 3. Conſcience: 4. Will: 5. Affections: 6. Appetite: 7. The life it ſelfe. In all which this grace of God muſt appeare.

Minde. 1 The Minde is that part of man which frameth the reaſon: this Paul calleth Epheſ.4.5. the ſpirit of our minde, which muſt be renewed; the ſanctification of which is called, Reu.3. the eye ſalue; it is a grace cleering the darke minde and dimme vnderſtanding: containing in it theſe three things. Firſt, ſauing knowledge, 1.Cor.2.12. whereby we know the things giuen vs of God. Some will ſay, what be they? Anſ. This knowledge may be referred to two heads. The firſt is the knowledge of God. The ſecond is the knowledge of our ſelues. The former of theſe hath two branches: firſt, that knowledge of the true God, which is life euerlaſting, Ioh.17.3. Secondly, to know the mercie of God in Chriſt to my ſelfe in particular, Epheſ.3.18. This is to know the height, length, and depth of the loue of God to me in ſpecial; as that God the Father is my father; God the Sonne my Sauiour; God the holy Ghoſt my Sanctifier: this is the ſauing knogledge of God.

The ſecond head of this ſauing knowledge is to know a mans ſelfe, when hee ſees the ſecret corruptions of his heart againſt the firſt and ſecond Table, to ſee and to feele this is a worke of grace, and an argument of an heauenlie light enlightening the ſoule.

The ſecond thing in the ſanctification of the minde is (after the knowledge of theſe) to approoue the things of God: that is, to minde and meditate on things ſpirituall, Rom.8.5. to ſauour the things of the ſpirit, namely things pertaining to the kingdome of God. Contrarie to the practiſe of them whoſe glory is their ſhame, yea whoſe end is damnation, Phil.3.19. who minde earthly things.

The third thing is a ſetled purpoſe in the minde, not to offend God in any thing, but to endeuour the doing of his will, and the pleaſing of him in al things: this is called the turning of the mind, and is the ſubſtance of true repentance.

Memorie. 2 The Memorie: the ſanctification of it, is an aptnes by grace to keepe good things, ſpecially the doctrine of ſaluation, by which Dauid was preſerued from ſinning, Pſal.119.11: and Mary pondred things concerning Chriſt, and laid them vp in her heart, Luk.2.15.

Conſcience. 3 The ſanctification of the Conſcience is an aptnes to teſtifie alwaies truly that a mans ſinnes are pardoned, and that hee preſerueth in his heart a care to pleaſe God, 2.Cor.1.12. This teſtimonie was Pauls reioycing: and Hezekias comfort on his death-bed was the teſtimonie of his conſcience of his vpright walking before God: yea this conſcience is apt alſo to checke and curb vs when wee encline to euill: ſo Dauid ſaith, Pſal.16. his reines did correct him in the night ſeaſon: and to ſtirre vs vp to good, as the voyce behind vs ſaying; Here is the way, walke in it, Eſay 30.21.

Will. 4 The Will is ſanctified when God giues grace truly to will good; as to beleeue, feare, obey God; when a man can ſay, that though he finde not to performe that which is good, yet to will good is preſent with him, Rom.7.18. This is much accepted of God: for where the minde and other faculties faile in their dutie, then comes this will and ſupplies their want; which being willing to doe much more then it can, the Lord of his mercie accepts it for the deede it ſelfe.

Affections. 5 For the Affections, ſome of them concerne God, ſome our Neighbour, and ſome our ſelues. Sanctified affections concerning God are firſt feare of God, when a man ſtands in awe of Gods preſence, and in regard of his Commandements. Secondly, a contentment and quietnes of minde in all conditions of life, when a man at all times can ſubmit his will vnto the will of God, Iob 1. The Lord hath giuen and taken away, bleſſed be his name: and Dauid, Pſal.39.2. I held my tongue and ſaid nothing, becauſe thou Lord didſt it. Thirdly, loue to God in Chriſt, and to Chriſt in man, 2.Cor.5.14. Rom.9.3. Fourthly, an high eſtimation of Chriſt and his blood aboue all things in the world: Philip.3.8. I count all things dung for Chriſt.

Secondly, the affections towards our Neighbour is to loue him, becauſe hee is Gods childe in my iudgement, 1.Epiſt. Ioh.3.14. and in Chriſt my brother.

Thirdly, concerning our ſelues, to haue a baſe eſtimation of our ſelues in regard of our knowne ſinnes and corruptions:

Paul

Paul cried out that he was the head of all sinners: so the prodigall sonne; I am not worthie to call thee father: Dauid, Haue mercie on me according to the multitude of thy mercie.

Appetite. 6 The sanctification of Appetite stands in the holie ordering of our desires in meate, drinke, apparell, riches, &c. and in the practise of three maine vertues: first, Sobrietie: secondly, Chastitie: thirdly, Contentation: by which the appetite must be gouerned.

Life. 7 Sanctification of life stands principally in three things: first, in an endeuour to doe the will of God, that herein wee may testifie our thankfulnes. Secondly, in testifying our loue to God in man. Thirdly, in deniall of our selues: which is, first, when wee hold God to be wiser than we are, that so wee should be both directed and disposed of by him. Secondly, when wee account him more carefull for vs, than we our selues can be, and so rest well satisfied with what condition of life so euer he sets vs in. Thus are we to practise this grace through our whole conuersation: for wee may not measure it, nor iudge of it by one action good or bad; but looke to the whole course of life, if that be good, the heart is sanctified.

V. The fifth point is, how sanctification is here ascribed to God the Father, seeing all outward workes are common to the whole Trinitie. Ans. Sanctification is attributed and that truly to all the three persons, who haue all stroke in the worke of it, but diuersly. The Sonne sanctifieth by meriting sanctification; the holy Spirit sanctifieth by working it, and by creating the new heart; the Father sanctifieth, by sending his sonne to merit, and giuing his spirit to work it. And here the worke is thus ascribed vnto him, as being the ground and first author of it.

Vse. Labour for the speciall grace of God. The meanes wee are to vse is laid down in Rom. 6.1. to the 14. verse, namely, to beleeue that we were crucified with Christ, buried with him, yea and rose againe with him; because he was vpon the crosse, in the graue, as also in rising from thence in our stead and roome, sustaining our persons vpon him: this is the foundation of our holinesse. Some will aske how this can be a ground of our holines? I make it plaine in this comparison: As a Traitour arraigned, and hanged according to law, is then freed from his fact, the iudge ceaseth to punish him, and he ceaseth to be a Traitour, committeth no more misdemeanour: so the sinner being arraigned at the barre of Gods iustice, and attainted of high treason, is according to Gods law condemned and executed in Christs condemnation and execution, is now as a dead man vnto sinne, and cannot thencefoorth liue thereunto any more.

Now followes the third degree of life eternal, in these words [and reserued to Iesus Christ.] The meaning of which words is plaine in the 1. Epist. of Peter, the 1.5: where he saith, that the elect are kept by the power of God vnto saluation: in the adding of which words to the former, wee are taught that with the gifts of true faith, calling and sanctification, is ioyned vnseparably the grace of perseuerance vnto the end: of which truth we will consider foure maine grounds. 4. Grounds to proue the perseuerance of the elect.

The first ground is, the election of God: that is, his decree wherby he setteth some apart to life. This decree is as vnchangeable as God himselfe is; and as election is vnchangeable, so is the fruite of it in vs, in respect of the ground: and hence followeth it that faith and sanctification are vnchangeable, Rom. 8.3: the predestinate are glorified, Matth. 24.24. the exception sheweth it impossible the elect should be deceiued.

The second ground is the promise of God in the Euangelicall couenant, which is largely propounded in Ierem. 32.40. where is promise made of two things: first, the Lord promiseth that he will not turne from them to doe them good, which is a promise of eternall mercie, shewing the pardon of sinne, being once giuen, is giuen for euer. Secondly, that he will put his feare into their hearts, there is promised continuance of faith and sanctification, for they shall not depart from it.

The third ground, is the office of Christ: in it consider first his Priesthood, secondly his kingly office. First, he was a Priest, partly to offer sacrifice, partly to make intercession for euery beleeuer: so hee did for Peter, Luk. 22.32. that his faith might not faile, and not onely for him, but as appeares in that worthy prayer recommended in Ioh. 17. for all the Disciples, and not for them onely, but for all beleeuers through their word. The same request is in that Chapter repeated thrice. Secondly ly for his kingdome; as he is the head of his Church, his office is 1. to keepe all that are giuen him vnto life, Ioh. 10. 28. I giue vnto them life: and none can plucke them out of my hands. 2. To giue ſpirituall life to his members, Rom. 6. 8. 9. If Chriſt the head died but once, and liueth for euer, then all his members die but once to ſin, and after alwaies liue to righteouſnes: for this life admits of no corruption neither in nor out of temptation.

The fourth ground is the qualitie of grace, as of faith, ſanctification, &c. whoſe nature is to endure to life euerlaſting: for he that once beleeues, remaines euer a beleeuer, 1. Ioh. 3. 9. He that is borne of God ſinneth not, becauſe the ſeede remaineth in him. Now if that remaine whereby he is borne of God, himſelfe muſt alſo ſtill remaine borne of God: vpon which foure grounds we may perſwade our ſelues of the gift of perſeuerance.

Obiect. It is alleaged, nothing is vnchangeable but God, and therefore grace is changeable.

Anſwere. Euery gift is changeable in it ſelfe, ſo man in himſelfe conſidered may fall away: but God hath promiſed a ſecond grace confirming the firſt, by vertue whereof a man cannot fall away.

Obiect. It will be further ſaid, that the child of God when he falleth into a grieuous ſin, (as Dauid did) is guiltie of death, and therfore is not iuſtified, and conſequently falleth away.

Anſwere. When Dauid fell hee was guiltie of death but onely in regard of that ſinne into which he was now fallen, all his former ſinnes being pardoned: yea that ſin alſo was pardoned (though not actually to him before his repentance) yet in Gods counſell; ſo as that ſinne being on Gods part pardoned, he remaines ſtill in the fauour of God.

Obiect. But in time of perſecution many fall away.

Anſwere. If any fall quite away they neuer had true faith: which ſtands in three things: 1. Knowledge: 2. Aſſent: 3. Apprehenſion of Chriſt. The two former they might haue, but the third was wanting vnto them. Againe, thoſe that fall off in perſecution, if they haue true faith they fall not wholy, becauſe the ſeed of God remaines in them; nor finally, becauſe in time they ſhall returne vnto the Lord againe.

Obiect. But this doctrine leades men to ſecuritie.

Anſwere. No, it leades a man from ſecuritie vnto a new life and watchfulnes: ſeeing grace is added vnto grace to keepe vs in the ſtate of grace.

Vſe. Firſt, in ỹ the gift of perſeuerance is ioyned with true faith; I gather that the doctrine of the Papiſts is not of God but a doctrine of diuels, which teacheth that he which is choſen of God, who hath true faith and is iuſtified, may in regard of his preſent right fall away: for how can that be if hee that be choſen be called, ſanctified, and preſerued vnto life?

Secondly, it is falſe that a man trulie iuſtified may loſe his grace, ſeeing with iuſtification is ioyned preſeruation: neither that which teacheth, that a true beleeuer may fall wholy, though not finally, is true.

Thirdly, thoſe alſo are deceiued who thinke that mans ſaluation is pinned vpon his owne ſleeue, and hangeth vpon his owne will; for God would haue all ſaued, Chriſt died for all, the holy Ghoſt giues grace to all: why then are ſome ſaued, ſome not? It is (ſay they) from their owne wil, grace in ſome preuailes againſt fleſh, and they are ſaued; but fleſh againſt grace in the other, who therfore are damned: but this ſcripture ſhewes that to be but a deuice of man, ſeeing whoſoeuer are once elected are called, ſanctified and preſerued to life; and what malice is able to reſiſt this will of God?

2. Vſe. Note here the vnſpeakeable goodnes of God in the worke of Regeneration; in that he not only giues a new life, but preſerues it in vs. Adam once had this life of grace betruſted vnto him and had it in keeping, but he quickly loſt it from himſelfe and his poſteritie. Now God hath reſtored this life againe to beleeuers; but that they might be ſure of it he will now keepe it for them himſelfe.

And reſerued vnto Chriſt] that is, to be preſented and ſet before Chriſt, and that partly in the day of death, partly in the day of iudgement holie and without blame, Epheſ. 5. 27. Whence note: firſt, beleeuers need not feare the day of death or iudgement; nay rather they may reioice in it, as the day of their redemption, yea and of triumph. What an honor was it for Pharaohs daughter to be preſented to Salomon, and Heſter to become the ſpouſe of Ahaſuerus? much more glorie is it for the faithfull thus to ſtand before Chriſt at that day.

Secondly,

Secondly, wee must all our life long prepare and fit our selues to be presented as pure spouses to our Bridegrome: both these duties are laid downe Reuel. 19.7. Be glad and reioyce, for the marriage of the Lambe is come, and his wife hath made her selfe readie. This preparation stands in two things: first, we must betroth our soules to Christ; this is done when God giues Christ, and we receiue him by faith, cleaue vnto him alone, depend on him as the spouse vpon whom her soule loueth. Secondly, wee must beautifie our soules hauing giuen them to Christ: this is done when the holie Ghost sanctifieth the same, and we daily labour in the renewing of our owne hearts.

Thirdly, we must hence be stirred vp to prayer for this gift of preseruation to life euerlasting, & reseruation to Christ, hungring for grace after grace, to bee strengthened in temptation, especially in this last and declining age, wherein the Gospell takes little place in our hearts.

Vers. 2. Mercie vnto you, and peace, and loue be multiplied.] In these words is laid downe the third point in the salutation; namely, the prayer vsually obserued in Apostolical salutations. In which first he prayeth for three things; mercie, peace, and loue. Secondly, that these may be multiplied; that is, continued and increased in and vpon them. First, of the multiplying of mercie: The mercie of God towards the creature is taken in Scripture two waies; generally, and specially: Gods general mercie is that, wherby he is inclined to helpe the creature in miserie, Luk. 6.36. Gods speciall mercie (called riches of mercie, whereby he will haue mercie on whom he will, Rom. 9 15.) is that, by which is granted pardon of sinne, and acceptance in Christ to life euerlasting: and for this hee prayeth in this place. Now because this speciall mercie cannot be multiplied in it selfe, being infinite in God, as himselfe is infinite, therefore by mercie wee must vnderstand the fruites and effects thereof. And for our better instruction herein, three things are to be considered.

Gods mercie in christ is set in the first place, to to bee sought for

First, that mercie is asked in the first place, before peace and loue: teaching vs, that the mercie of God in Christ is to be sought for aboue al things in the world. Psal. 4.6. Many say, who will shew vs any good? but Lord lift thou vp the light of thy countenance vpon vs. Psal. 119.77. Let thy tender mercie come vpon me, that I may liue. This is the foundation of all blessing. aboue all things in the world.

Secondly, note the persons for whom he thus prayeth. To you]: that is, as in the first verse, to those who were called, sanctified, and reserued to Christ; not for vnbeleeuers, vnrepentant, and Apostatates: whence we learne, first, that a man iustified, sanctified, and made heire of life, cannot merit any thing at Gods hands: for merit and mercy cannot stand together, & he that still stands in need of mercie can neuer merit; which doctrine must be maintained against the Romane Church, which teacheth, that a man may put his trust in the merit of his workes, so he doe it soberly. Secondly, that men effectually called and sanctified, because they still stand in neede of mercie, must be in their owne eyes still vile and miserable. Abraham being to speak to God, tearmes himselfe dust and ashes. Iacob acknowledged that he was lesse than the least mercie. Iob cries out that he was vile, and abhorres himselfe. After these examples we must euer keep our hearts as emptie vessels, readie to receiue more mercie.

Thirdly, note the measure of mercie asked; he praies for continuance and increase of mercie to those who had alreadie the riches of mercie. Whence we learne, first, that all the good we haue, or can doe, is of meere mercie; not onely for the beginning and continuance, but also for the increase thereof: as grace is no grace vnlesse it be euery way grace; so also of mercie. Which takes away all conceit of merit, seeing mercie filleth vp all the roome, and leaues no place for merit. Secondly, that the Apostle here also cõfirmeth the former grounds of our perseuerance: for by this prayer, grace is to be added to the former graces, yea multiplied: so the Lord dealeth, not giuing ouer when he hath giuen one grace: for first, he giues his seruant power to beleeue: secondly, he giues an execution of this power. Neither there giues ouer, but by a third grace giues continuance of that power: yea and addes a fourth, which is an execution of that continuance. Thus he deales with all true beleeuers, not onely in respect of faith, but of obedience also:

Phil.2.13. God worketh both the will and the deed. Philip.1.6. He that hath begun this good worke in you, will performe it vntill the day of Christ. So as this may well be called a multiplication of grace, seeing euery beleeuer hath one grace more than Adam had; he had power to obey; so the renewed haue. Secondly, he had the act of obedience; so they also haue. Thirdly, hee had power to perseuere; which they likewise haue: but hee had not the act of perseuerance; which they hauing, therein farre excell him.

The second thing desired in the prayer is peace; namely the peace of God, whereof he is the author; and it is the vnitie and concord of man with God, and with the creatures. Touching this peace, note three things; the foundation of it, which is Christ the second Adam; euen as the first Adam was the author of discord and emnitie, Ephes.2.14. Secondly, the manifestation of it; this peace is offered in the preaching of the Gospel, which therefore is called the glad tidings of peace, Rom.10.15. and the Ministers of it, the Embassadors of peace, 2.Cor.5.20. Thirdly, the kindes of this peace, it is two-fold: first, betweene person and persons: secondly, betweene person and things. The former hath sixe heads, I. Peace betweene man and God, the Father, Sonne, and holie Ghost, properly called reconciliation, whereby God in Christ is at one with man, and man thorough Christ at one with God, of which when man is once perswaded in his heart, then comes this peace, Rom.5.1. from which springs another, namelie tranquillitie of minde, when the mind is quieted in all things that befall, without grudging or impatience, and that becauſe it is the reuealed will of God, Philip.4.11. II. Peace with the good Angels, Ephes.1.10: for men being at peace with God, the Angels are become seruants and ministring Spirits vnto them, Hebr.1.14. III. Peace with a mans self, consisting in two things: first, when the conscience sanctified ceaseth to accuse, and in assurance of Gods fauour beginneth to take his part, to excuse, and speake for him before God. Secondly, when the will, affections, and inclinations submit themselues to the enlightened minde: of which if either be wanting, man is at warre with himselfe, and the peace of God ruleth not in his heart, Coloss. 3.15. IV. Peace of true beleeuers among themselues, who before they beleeued were as Lions, and Cockatrises, Esai.11.6. but now in the kingdome of Christ haue put off that sauage nature, and become peaceable; as Act.4.32. the number of beleeuers were all of one heart. V. Peace of the faithfull with professed enemies; namely, when they endeuour to haue peace with al men, Rom.12.17.18. not requiting euill with euill. VI. Concord of the enemies themselues, with the true Church: for often the Lord restraineth the malice and rage of his enemies, and inclines them to peace. Thus Iacob and Iosephs familie were preserued in Egypt, and Daniel was brought in fauour with the chiefe Eunuch, Dan.1.9.

The second branch of this peace, is when al things, & creatures conspire and agree for the good of the godly. This is called good successe; promised Psal.13. Whatsoeuer the righteous man doth, it shall prosper.

Vse. First, in that mercie is first asked and then peace, wee are by the order taught that peace and good successe are grounded on mercie: so as men for the most part take a preposterous course, who would haue good successe in health, wealth, peace, honour, learning, &c. in that they seeke it out of assurance of mercie in the pardon of sin; whereas this ground must first bee laid as the foundation of al blessing and good successe.

Secondly, we must endeuour that this peace grounded vpon mercie may haue place in our hearts, that wee may haue boldnes in regard of God, comfort in our consciences, peace with our brethren, quietnes and contentednes in all conditions of life, &c. This peace shall preserue our hearts in all things, Philip.4.7. This was Dauids securitie in the middest of his enemies, and danger of death, he would now lie downe in peace, because the Lord did sustaine him, Psal.4.vers.8. This grace preserueth the heart vndanted in many afflictions, euen as a souldier that takes the enemies Ensigne, cares for no blowes or wounds so hee may carrie away the Ensigne; so hee that preserues the peace of God in his heart, makes light of afflictions, seeing hee holdeth that which counteruaileth all of them.

The third grace desired in the prayer is is loue, which is a most excellent vertue,

[a] 1.Cor.13. preferred [a] before faith and hope, in
[b] 1.Tim.1.5 some respects, and made [b] the end of the Commandement. Loue is diuersly taken in the Scripture; sometime it signifieth the loue of God to the creature; and sometime, the loue of man to God and man; and so it is taken in this place, being set after mercie and peace as a fruite of them.

In the handling of this vertue consider three points in generall, before wee come to the speciall parts of it: First, What this loue is; The loue of God and man is a certaine diuine and spirituall motion in the heart, causing it to be well pleased in the thing loued, and mouing it to affect communion therewith: in these two consists the nature of true loue to God and man.

Secondly, Whence hath loue his beginning? A. Not from nature, for the [c] wisedome of the flesh is enmitie with God: yea
[c] Rom.8.7. there is in euery mans nature a disposition to hate God and man when occasion is offered; let the naturall man say neuer so often he loueth God, herein he lieth and deceiueth himselfe: for vrge him to frame and conforme himselfe vnto the word wherein he should testifie his loue, here his wicked heart hating to be reformed, resisteth plainly; saying, I will not haue this man to rule ouer me, I desire none of his waies. This loue then comes from grace, 1.Ioh.4.7. Loue commeth from God, 1.Tim.1.5. it hath his beginning from a pure heart, true faith and good conscience. Which must bee maintained against the Papists, who say that nature affoordeth the inclination, but grace the practise; whereas indeed grace giueth both.

Thirdly, consider the vse of loue; It is the instrument and companion of true faith, which worketh by loue, Galath.5.6. The proper worke of faith is to lay hold on Christ, this faith as a hand can of it selfe doe; but when it commeth to the practise of morall duties, it can no more worke without the grace of loue, then a hand (which can lay hold alone and of it selfe receiue and retaine) can cut any thing without an instrument. Whence it appeareth, that faith in iustification is alone, but in the life of man it worketh by loue: and whereas it hath bin taught for many hundred yeeres that loue is the life of faith, that is vntrue, for it only testifieth that faith hath life. It is alleaged, that as the bodie without the spirit is dead, euen so faith without workes is dead: therfore workes are the soule, and giue life to faith. But this consequence from this comparison is not good, because the soule is not properly the soule of the bodie but of the man, and so it proueth not that loue is the soule of faith. Again, the word Spirit there betokeneth the breath, without which the body is dead, and thus is the comparison to be returned; that as breath maketh not a man liuing, but sheweth him to be aliue, so loue maketh not faith liuing, but testifieth it so to be; yea indeed is the fruite and effect of faith, as breath is of life. Iam.2.26.

More particularly this grace of loue is two-fold: first, that whereby man loueth God: secondly, that whereby man loueth man. In the former note two points: first, what it is; namely, a motion of the heart, whereby it is affected to God, causing it to be well pleased in God, and his workes for himselfe; as also to seeke fellowship with God so much as it can. Secondly, note the measure of this loue, which in Scripture is double: first, that which the law requireth, and that is the full measure of loue, loue in the highest degree, when man loueth God with all his soule, with all his strength, and all the powers of the whole man, so as in man no loue can be aboue it; vnto this all men are bound, yet no man since the fall can attaine. Secondly, that which the Gospell describeth, standing in an vnfained will, and true endeuour to loue God, with all the heart, all the strength, and all the powers; which is a smaller measure than the former, yea and a qualification and moderation of it, yet to none but those that are in Christ. Whereby we come to the right vnderstanding of diuers places of scripture; as 2.King. 23.25. of Iosiah: 2.Chron.15.15. all Iudah sought the Lord with their whole hart. These and such other places must be vnderstood as they are qualified by the Gospell, in that they willed and endeuoured by all good meanes to seeke God; yea this text also must be vnderstood of this second measure, seeing the former being in the highest degree, cannot be multiplied, no not if men were glorified.

The second kinde of this loue is that whereby man loueth his neighbour: which is a certaine diuine and spirituall motion, causing the heart (as the former) both to be wel pleased in man for God, (that is, because he is Gods image and his owne flesh) as also to powre out it selfe and communicate goodnes to his neighbour, in wishing, speaking, and hoping the best of him. Wherein by the way obserue a plaine difference betweene faith and loue: faith is a hand, but to pull Christ to our selues: loue is a hand also, but opening it selfe and giuing foorth vnto others.

In this loue of the neighbour consi-
1 der these three things: first, the order of it: The order that hath been taught for many hundred yeeres is, that first wee must loue our selues, and then others, from this ground, Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe; for the rule (say they) must goe before the thing ruled. But this is not sound, seeing worthie men haue been commended in Scriptures for louing others as well, yea and better than their owne selues; so Dauid loued Ionathan, 1.Sam.20.17. Christ loued his enemies better than himselfe; these began not with themselues: yea indeed the right beginning of loue is in God, and then as a man is a more principall instrument of Gods glorie, hee must be for God preferred in our loue aboue our selues. Thus euery man is bound to loue and preferre the life of his Prince aboue his owne; see the perfect rule of direction herein, Ioh.13.34.
2 Secondly, note the manner of it, set downe in that precept: Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe: that is, as wee are cheerfull, and free to practise the dutie of loue to our selues, so must we doe it to others: for this precept aimeth at the manner, rather than the rule of our loue to man; for that is, as Christ hath
3 loued vs. Thirdly, the kindes of it: it is two-fold: first single, when men loue others, but are not repaid with loue againe; yea when a man loues his enemie, but is not loued again. The second is mutuall loue, that is, when loue is requited with loue, called in Scripture brotherly loue; see Philip.2.2. 1.Cor.1.10: when men are of one iudgement, like minded, speake one thing; and one soule is as it were in many bodies.

The second point is the multiplication of loue, which the Apostle prayeth for vpon good ground, because it ioyneth man to God, and man to man, and so becommeth as it is called the bond of perfection, the bond of the Church, Common-wealth, & of al societies. 1.Cor.13. Loue edifieth, that is, it helpeth to build the kingdome of God, yea it constraineth men to all good duties in their particular callings. Qu. But how shall this loue be multiplied? Ans. By certaine meditations, and practises. The meditations are many; first on Gods cõmandement: Be seruants one to another in loue, Gal.5.13. Secondly, of Gods image, which al men should beare in loue, 1.Ioh.3.16. Thirdly, of the fellowship of the faithfull, hauing all one father, one brother, one saluation, all linked by one spirit, Ephes.4.4. Fourthly, of the loue of God, Ioh.13.35. which hereby we shall be assured of, 1.Ioh.3.14. The practises also are diuers: first, wee must labour to be assured of Gods loue to vs, and encreased vpon vs, Ephes.5.2. Secondly, the law of nature must teach vs to doe as we would be done vnto. Thirdly, our care must be more to loue, than be loued: for to loue is a vertue in our selues, to be loued is the vertue of another. Fourthly, pray daily for multiplication of loue towards God and man, yea towards our enemies; seeing the more this is multiplied the happier is our estate, yea and the condition of the Church vpon earth.

Vers.3. Beloued, when I gaue all diligence to write vnto you of the common saluation, it was needfull for me to write vnto you that ye should earnestly contend, for the faith which was once giuen vnto the Saints.]

Here begins the second part of this Epistle, which is the Exhortation, reaching to the end of the 23. verse. In this verse two things are contained. First, the causes which mooued the Apostle to write the Epistle. Secondly, the matter of his exhortation. The causes of his writing are three. First his loue, noted in the word Beloued. Secondly, his readie and willing minde of himselfe, noted in the word diligence, which signifieth a carefull endeuour and studie to doe the Church good, and it is enlarged by three arguments: first, in that he gaue all diligence, and not some part onely, to further the Church. Secondly, when hee could not speake to ỹ Catholike church, he gaue diligence to write. Thirdly, he writeth not of small matters, but of things most weightie, such as concerne their

their saluation: against which seeing it might be obiected, that he was not able to write of such a weightie matter, hee therefore calles it common saluation to cut off that surmise, as also to shew that it is common to himselfe and the whole Church, of which therefore hauing a share therein he is not ignorant.

3 The third cause in the word [needfull] a necessitie was laid vpon him in that he was called to bee an Apostle, and so bound to further the saluation of the Catholike Church.

Out of these three motiues which caused the Apostle to write, obserue;

1 Firſt, that euery Minister that would deliuer the word faithfully, must haue three things to excite him thereto: first, loue towards the Church to which he is called. Secondly, a readie minde to further the saluation of their soules. Thirdly, the bond of his calling, stirring him vp to faithfulnes and diligence. All these three concurred in Paul: first, his loue appeared, 2.Cor.5.14. Secondly, his readie minde was not wanting, Philip.2.17. Thirdly, for his calling that vrged him see 1.Cor.9.16.

2 Note hence also, that whosoeuer would heare the word, or reade it to saluation, must bring three things in his heart: first, a loue to the word deliuered: This caused Dauid often to muse thereupon, Psal.119.97. Secondly, a readie and diligent minde to receiue and reteine it: this was in the Bereans, Act. 17.11. and in the Galathians, when they receiued Paul as an Angell of God, Gal.4. 14. Thirdly, a consideration of the great necessitie of hearing and reading the word; Prou.29.18. Where vision failes, people perish.

3 Thirdly, in this example of the Apostle, all Pastors must learne diligence in all good meanes for the furtherance of the saluation of their flock: for which cause they are called Watchmen, because they are to watch ouer their soules. Yea Sauiours, Obadiah 21. to put them in minde, that they are to be the meanes of sauing men. They had not need then be entangled with many charges, and other businesses.

4 Fourthly, as the Apostle writeth of the [common saluation] of which he hath good experience; so euery Minister must see that he haue experience in himselfe of that he teacheth others; and haue a taste of that in his owne heart which he would haue others seasoned withall, els his teaching shall be cold.

The second part of this verse is the exhortation: the whole matter and substance may be reduced to three heads. First, that faith is a notable treasure, which hath many enemies. Secondly, that the Saints are the keepers of it. Thirdly, that the office of euery member of the Catholike Church is to hold and maintaine this treasure. For the first, that faith is a treasure, appeareth 2.Pet.1.1. where it is called pretious faith: 2.Cor.4.7. a treasure in earthly vessels; and by this, that a fight is here inioyned against the enemies of it. For the cleering of which, consider two things: first, what it is. Secondly, who be the enemies of it, against whom we must fight; and them we shal ioyntly obserue with the seueral grouds of faith. For the first, this faith is nothing els but ỹ holesome doctrine of the Gospel, called by Paul to Titus 1.1. the truth according to godlines. So 1.Tim.4.1: this faith, which many shall denie, is opposed to the doctrine of Diuels. Now for our more orderly proceeding, wee must consider that this doctrine of faith admitteth a distinction, which Paul himselfe maketh 1.Cor.3.11.12. Some doctrines are of the foundation, without which religion cannot stand, such as are set downe Hebr.6.1. Others pertaine to the foundation, but are not of it, as gold and siluer built vpon the foundation. It shall not be amisse here to stand a while to set downe the holesome doctrine of saluation which is fundamentall, reduced by the Apostle to two generall heads, Faith and Loue. The wholesome doctrine of faith, containes things needfull to be beleeued. The wholesome doctrine of loue containes things necessarily to be practised. And both these are expresly set downe in Scripture, as wee shall shew in their order. 2.Tim.1.13

Grounds of doctrine to be beleeued.

1. Ground. First, That all the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles is giuen by diuine inspiration: 2.Tim.3.16. All Scripture is giuen by diuine inspiration: that is, all the doctrine both for matter, stile, and words of Scripture is deliuered by the inspiration of the holy Ghost. Hence it followeth that all Scripture is authenticall, as hauing the authoritie from God, yea and muſt be beleeued as if God from heauen ſhould ſpeake; without diſputation, or calling any part of it into queſtion. This ground muſt firſt be laid. If it be ſaid, the Scripture may be prooued by reaſon, and by the generall conſent of the Church. Anſ. That is vntrue, for reaſon cannot ſettle the conſcience to beleeue, in any point. But ſcripture telleth there is a God, which reaſon prooueth. Anſ. Reaſon out of nature teacheth there is a God, but by the word of God only I doe beleeue it: inducements to faith may be brought out of nature, but Gods word onely cauſeth true beliefe. Secondly, for the authoritie of the Church; I beleeue not becauſe the Church ſaith ſo, but becauſe the Scripture ſaith it; and the Church I beleeue ſo farre as ſhe conſents with the word and ſpeaketh out of it.

The aduerſaries of this ground againſt whom we muſt fight.

Papiſts enemies to Hebrew and Greek.

First the Turkes, and Turkiſh religion, who denie ſcripture to bee giuen by inſpiration, and denie the bookes of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and in ſtead of them ſtand to their Alcaran. Secondly the Iewes, who refuſe the bookes of the new Teſtament. Thirdly the Atheiſt, who will beleeue nothing of all this. Fourthly, the painted aduerſarie the Papiſt, who vndermines this ground; firſt, ſaying that the Hebrew and Greeke text is corrupted, ſo as wee may not build vpon it, that thereby they might bring their Latin Bible into credit as moſt authentical; and yet (that they might make the ſentence of their Church the rule of faith) the moſt learned of al that Church hold that the Latin Bible is alſo corrupt; ſo indeede they couertly renounce all ſcripture that the ſentence of the Church may obtaine the chiefe ſtroke. Secondly, in teaching that the authoritie of the Church in regarde of vs, is aboue the Scriptures, becauſe wee knowe not the ſenſe thereof, but by the Church: Thus putting downe the true and principall ground of Scripture, that they might more eaſily ſet vp their own dotages.

2. Ground. The ſecond ground concerneth the ſufficiencie of ſcripture, and is this: The Scripture of the Prophets and Apoſtles is a perfect rule of faith and manners: It is of all things to be beleeued or done to ſaluation. 2. Tim. 3. 16. The Scripture is profitable to teach, improue, correct, inſtruct in righteouſnes, to make the man of God abſolute, yea perfect in euery good worke. If it make him perfect in al kind of teaching, it is alſo able much more to make euery man perfect to all the duties of his calling; Gal. 1. 8. If an Angell ſhould teach otherwiſe, that is, diuerſe or beſides, though not contrary to that which is taught, hee ſhall bee accurſed; many doctrines indeed of Artes and other things are diuers and beſides it; but the meaning is, that no doctrine of ſaluation muſt be brought, no not beſides it, therfore the bookes of the Prophets and Apoſtles containe a perfect rule. Many things which cannot bee found in ſcripture may be ſupplied by tradition? Anſ. Traditions can neuer ſettle the conſcience, for though diuerſe of them are found in the writings of the fathers, yet they were ſubiect to error, and ſo might and did erre in them.

Aduerſaries of this ground to bee contended with.

First, all men by nature; Iob. 22. 14. Who ſay to the Almightie, Depart from vs, for wee deſire not the knowledge of thy waies: yea our common Proteſtants, who in iudgement acknowledge this rule, yet in their life they leaue it, and take the leaden rule of naturall reaſon, ſenſe, ſight, and feeling, and few there be that liue by faith.

Secondly, the Romiſh Church, for firſt, they make the written word a thing ruled by ſetting vp another Rule; ſaying, that there are two kindes of Scripture: The firſt is inward, written in the heart of all Catholikes, which is the vniuerſall conſent of the Church: The ſecond is outward, written by the Prophets and Apoſtles, an inken ſcripture (ſay they) and a dead letter without the former. Whereas the cleane contrarie is true, the true rule being the ſcripture of the Prophets and Apoſtles; and the other in the heart in this life, but an imperfect patterne drawne according to the former. Secondly, they ouerturne the ground, in ioyning to the written word vnwritte traditions; ſo making it but half a rule, and indeed as good no rule: but where are theſe traditions? In the writings tings of Fathers they say: But how shall we know them to be scripture? Because the Fathers say so: But how shall wee know they say true? Here must they flie to man, whereof yet no man can assure 3 vs. Thirdly, in teaching that the true sense of scripture cannot be found without the Churches determination, and so indeede make it no rule, because a right rule both ruleth it selfe, and is plaine to rule other things also.

The myſterie of iniquitie ſupported by a myſticall Scripture.

3. Ground. The third ground is: There is one true God. By one, I meane one in number, not two: 1.Cor.8.6. To vs there is but one God, that is, to the Church, to vs that looke to bee saued: which is plaine by this reason, for there can be but one infinite, and if there were two or moe Gods, there should be two or moe infinites, which is impossible.

Aduersaries to this ground.

First, the common Protestant, who in iudgment holdeth one God, yet in heart and life he setteth vp two or moe: some riches, some pleasure, some one sinne or other: for where a mans heart is, there is his God. Paul saith, some make their belly their God: and that the Diuell is the God of the world.

Popery a monster of many heads, setteth vp many Gods.

Secondly, the maine Enemie is the Popish Church, which in word holdeth one God, but diuers waies set vp diuers gods. As first the Pope himselfe, who (by their reformed Canon law) is to iudge all, and to be iudged of none. Who maketh himselfe a forgiuer of sinnes and that properly: yea, a maker of lawes to binde conscience aswell as Gods lawes, which is horrible blasphemie. Secondly, the Virgin Mary, whom they make a Goddesse as Christ a God: as Christ a King, so her a Queene; as he a Lord, so her a Ladie: yea they set Christ below her, whom they desire to commaund her sonne by the right of a mother: yea and in some of their reformed Seruice bookes, they trust in her for saluation.

Thirdly, the Saints whom they pray vnto; wherein they attribute vnto them the knowledge of the secrets of mens hearts, and omnipresence, for they must also be in all places; which are things proper vnto God alone.

4. Ground. The fourth ground is, that God is all sufficient in himselfe: Gen.17.1. I am all sufficient: that is, he hath in himselfe all perfection: for first, he taketh being from none, but giueth being to all. Secondly, for substance he is a Spirit of perfect nature. Thirdly, euery way infinite, in regard of time, place, attributes. This may well be called a ground, for whosoeuer placeth any want or imperfection in God, denieth God, and maketh him no God.

Aduersaries hereof.

First, the common people, who conceiue a God made all of mercie without his iustice.

Papists rob God of his mercy and iustice.

Secondly the Papist, who robbeth God of his perfection two waies: first, they attribute an imperfect iustice vnto him, namely, such a one as may be satisfied by mans satisfaction. Secondly, an imperfect mercie, whereof our own merits must make a supplie: teaching that indeed Christ must make vs iust: but we must make our selues more iust and merit saluation.

5. Ground. The fifth ground is: There be three in heauen, the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost, and these three are one God, 1.Ioh.5.7.

Quest. How can it be that three are one God?

Answere. Anf. It is a mysterie, which the ancient Church answered thus: They be three in person and one in substance; so wee also say they be three in manner of subsisting, but one in nature and Godhead: Three they be distinguished in person, the Father not being the Sonne, nor the holy Ghost, and so in the other persons, 3. subsistences in one nature. Ioh. 17.2. This is life euerlasting, &c. This is a groūd because wee must worship one God in three persons, neither can wee aright thinke of God out of the Trinitie.

Aduersaries of this ground.

First, Heretikes innumerable whose memorie is accursed; as Arians of former and later times, denying the Godhead of Christ. Secondly, the Turke and Iew, who hold an absolute God out of the persons. Thirdly, our common people, who pray to such a God in their owne names out of the Sonne and holie Ghost. Fourthly, the Popish Church, which denieth by their doctrine the three persons: for hee that denieth the Sonne, denieth the Father and holy Ghost, 1.Ioh.2.23. Now they denie the Sonne both in his natures aboliſhing his Manhood in their doctrine of the Sacrament, as alſo his offices of King, Prieſt and Prophet, for which we muſt vtterly ſeparate from them.

Papists become Antitrinitaries

6. Ground. The ſixth ground is: That nothing commeth to paſſe without the ſpecial decree, will and prouidence of God: Matth.10.23. A ſparrow fallet h not to the ground without his will. Obiect. Ob. Sinne is againſt Gods will, and therefore commeth to paſſe without his will. Anſwere. Anſ. That which is againſt the will of God is not without his will. Queſtion. Queſt. How can this be? Anſ. No ſinne commeth to paſſe but God decreeth the permitting and being of it: now to permit ſinne and the being of it, is neither the cauſing of ſinne, nor the doing of it, but the not hindring of it, to which he is not bound. This ground being denied chance will be brought in, and God himſelfe denied.

7. Ground. The ſeuenth ground is: That God hath choſen ſome men before the world was, to be partakers of the riches of his mercies, and paſſed by others becauſe it was his will, Roman.9.18. He will haue mercie on whom he will, Ephes.1.4. 1.Pet.2.9. Some are a choſen generation, and therfore ſome are not choſen. Againe, whom he will he hardeneth: he hideth the myſteries of the kingdome from ſome: why? becauſe his pleaſure was ſuch, Matth.11.25. And of this there is good reaſon, for in nature the firſt cauſe ordereth the ſecond cauſes, and not the ſecond the firſt. Now Gods will is cauſe of all cauſes; which therefore muſt rule all as the ſupreme, and not be ruled by any other. That this is a ground appeareth, 2.Tim.2.19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, the Lord knoweth who are his: and indeede none other can bee the ground of grace and happines vnto vs, than the counſaile of God in electing vs, called therefore of the Apoſtle a foundation.

Aduerſaries hereof.

Firſt, our common people that thus abuſe this doctrine: If I be choſen to ſalnation I ſhall be ſaued, therefore I may liue as I liſt. They might as well reaſon thus: The tearme of my life is ſtinted, none can lengthen or ſhorten it, I will therefore neither eate nor drink, nor vſe Phyſicke, nor other meanes of prolonging my daies: which what were it elſe but to murther the bodie? So theſe from the ſame ground become murtherers of their ſoules; whereas men choſen to the end, will preaſe after the meanes and conclude otherwiſe, and ſay, I will vſe meanes that I may come to life. Secondly, others more learned are aduerſaries to this ground, who teach that God for his part hath choſen all men to life; and for his part would haue all ſaued, and that Chriſt for his part hath redeemed all, and the holy Ghoſt giueth or offereth grace to all. If wee aske, why then are not all ſaued? They anſwere, becauſe God foreſawe thoſe who would beleeue, whom hee appointed to ſaluation: he foreſaw alſo others who would not beleeue, and adiudged them to damnation. But by this doctrine ſhall Gods will hang on the will of man, and bee ruled by it, ſeeing hee would haue men ſaued, but man will not; and ſo this ground is in part raſed.

8. Ground. The eighth ground is: That God made the heauens and the earth, and all things that haue being in them: Col.1.16. By him were created all things which are in heauen and in earth. This is a principle: for if creatures had no beginning, then are they become Gods; which would ouerthrow the Godhead. But all things were Obiect. not made beſides God. For the higheſt heauen the Throne of God is eternall as God himſelfe is. Anſ. The Throne of Anſwere. God is a creature as well as the reſt: Heb.11.10. He looked for a citie hauing a foundation, whoſe builder and maker is God. In the world are many euils which Obiect. could not be from God, the foundation of all goodneſſe. Anſ. Euill is of three Anſwere. ſorts: firſt naturall, which commeth by nature corrupted, as ſicknes, diſeaſes, plagues, and death it ſelfe. Secondly, materiall euils, as hurtfull beaſts, poiſons in trees, plants, beaſts; theſe are created, and the very poiſon of them is a creature. Thirdly, morall euils, which be tranſgreſſions againſt the Morall law and Commandement of God. Of the two former God is the author and cauſe: Eſai.45.7. I create euill: that is, naturall and materiall: but of the third, that is, morall euils which be ſinne, God is no cauſe. Ob. But God is the cauſe of all Obiect. things, and ſinne is ſome thing. Anſ. Sin Anſwere. is no creature, but the deſtruction of Gods image which is a creature, effected by the creature: for though the creature creature cannot make a creature, yet it can destroy a creature.

The aduersarie to this ground is the Atheist, who holdeth the creatures to haue been from euerlasting, and so by denying one God, hee maketh manie thousands.

9. Ground. The 9. ground is, that God made man according to his owne image, Gen. 1. 27. For by creation man had three things: first, the substance of bodie and soule. Secondly, in them the powers and faculties of minde, will, affections, &c. Thirdly, an excellent conformitie of all these to the will of God: This is the image of God, called in the Scripture righteousnes and holinesse. This is a ground: for the image of God is the substance and body of the law; hee therefore that denieth this, denieth the law, the fall from it, and restoring vnto it by Christ.

10. Ground The 10. ground is, that by Adam, sinne and death entred into the world, and in him all meere men sinned, Rom. 5. 12. To the conceauing of which wee must know, that the first sinne of Adam was eating the forbidden fruite; the next was, the putting out of Gods image, in stead of which corruption of heart tooke place so farre, as (the seede of all sinne being within him) he was prone and readie to euery sinne. Now Adam being a publike person, and hauing receiued whatsoeuer hee had for himselfe and his posteritie either to hold for, or lose from both; hence is it that both those sinnes are become the two first sinnes in our conception, he sinning wee sinned, and with him haue the seeds of all sin within vs by nature, no sinne excepted, no not the sinne against the holy Ghost. Yea no otherwise is it with vs than with a noble man practising treason, whose whole blood is therby stained. Ob. But Christ came of Adam, therefore he in Adam sinned. Ans. God made this law with Adam, that all who came of him by ordinarie generation should be guiltie of his sinne: but Christ was extraordinarily conceiued by the holy Ghost, and took of Mary Adams nature, but not Adams sinne. Againe, Christ came of Adam, but from him as a beginning, and not by him as by a father; whereas all other men are both from Adam and by him. This is a maine ground of our religion, without which there could bee no redemption.

Aduersaries hereof are:

First, our common people, who say they euer kept Gods law, and loued him with al their heart, and their neighbours as themselues, and thinke hence all is well: but were it so as they dreame, they had neuer fallen in Adam, and so Adams sin had not gone ouer all men.

Secondly, the Popish Church: first, in teaching that the Virgin Mary (who came of Adam by ordinary generation) was conceiued without sinne: notwithstanding she was saued, not by her bearing of Christ in her wombe, but by beleeuing on him with her heart. Secondly, in that they teach that men are not wholy dead in sinne, but in part, or halfe dead, yea that being a little holpen they can keepe the law; as though by sinne men had not been wholy depriued of the glorie of God.

Papists controule the Apostle where he saith, that sin entred by one ouer all.

11. Ground The 11. ground is, that the Law and Gospell are two parts of the word of God, and are diuers kindes of doctrine. By the Law I vnderstand that part of Gods word which promiseth life to the obeyer. By the Gospell that part which promiseth it to the beleeuer. These I say are diuers kindes of doctrine; to the cleering of which consider first, their consent and agreement. Secondly, their dissent and difference. First, the Law and Gospell consent: first in the Author; of both which is God. Secondly, in their generall matter, for both require iustice and righteousnesse to saluation. Thirdly, in their end, namely the glorie of God. Secondly, they dissent in sixe things: First, the Morall law is written in nature by creation; yea and since the fall we haue some remainder of it in vs. Rom. 2. 15. The Gentiles shew the effect of the law written in their hearts: but the Gospell is not in nature, but aboue the reach of nature created, much more corrupted. The ground of the law is the image of God; but the ground of the Gospell is Iesus Christ. Secondly, the Law will haue vs doe something that we may be saued by it, and that is to fulfill it. The Gospel requireth no doing of vs, but onely beleeuing in Christ. Ob. But beleeuing is a worke to be done. Ans. The Gospell requireth it not as a worke, but as it is an instrument and the hand of the soule to lay hold vpon Christ, Rom. 4. 5. and 3. 21 and

and 10.5. Hence is it that the Law requireth righteouſnes inherent; but the Goſpell, imputed. Thirdly, the Law is propounded to the vnrepentant ſinner to bring him to faith; but the Goſpell to the beleeuer to the begetting and increaſe of faith. Fourthly, the Law ſheweth ſinne, accuſeth and reuealeth iuſtice without mercie; but the Goſpell couereth ſinne, and is a qualification of the rigour of the Law. The Law ſaith, Curſed is euery one &c. The Goſpell qualifieth that and ſaith, Except he beleeue and repent, euery man is accurſed. Thus the Law which onely manifeſteth iuſtice is moderated by the Goſpell, which mingleth mercie and iuſtice together: iuſtice vpon Chriſt, mercie vnto vs. Fiftly, the law telleth vs what good workes muſt bee done; the Goſpell, how they muſt bee done: the former declareth the matter of our obedience, the latter directeth vs in the manner of obeying: the former is pleaſed with nothing but the deede, the latter ſignifieth that God is pleaſed to accept the will and vnfained endeuor for the deede it ſelfe. Sixtly, the Law is no worker of grace and ſaluation, no not inſtrumentally, for it is the miniſterie of death; the Goſpell preached worketh grace onely, though the Law may be a hammer to breake the heart and prepare the way to faith and repentance.

Aduerſaries hereof are;

The Papiſts, who hold that they are one doctrine only, but herein differing, that the Law is more darke, the Goſpell more plaine, the former more hard to fulfill, the latter more eaſie; that is as the roote of a tree, this as the bodie & branches: by which premiſes they would conclude Chriſt to be no Sauiour, but an inſtrumẽt rather for vs to ſaue our ſelues by, he giuing vs grace to keepe the Law: for a ſinner muſt needes bee ſaued by works, if there be no difference between the Law and the Goſpell, and if the Law which requireth workes were not moderated by the Goſpel, which requireth not workes but faith.

12. Ground The 12. ground is, The Word was made fleſh, Ioh. 1.14. This is a maine ground, as in 1. Ioh. 4.3. Euery ſpirit that doth not confeſſe that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, that is, euery doctrine in which Chriſt is denied to be come in the fleſh, is not of God but of Antichriſt. Now by [Word] I vnderſtand the eternall ſonne of God, the ſecond perſon in Trinitie, the very ſubſtantiall word of the Father. It is added [was made] not as though the ſonne of God was turned into fleſh and ceaſed to bee Gods ſonne, but as Heb. 2.16. in that he tooke not the ſeede of Angels, but of Abraham. The meaning then is, that the Sonne of God * abiding ſtill the word tooke (that is) receiued into his perſon our nature; Phil. 2.7. He tooke vpon him the forme of a ſeruant. The word [fleſh] ſignifieth firſt mans nature which Chriſt tooke vnto him, namely a true nature of man, not phantaſticall or apparant onely. Secondly, the whole nature of man conſiſting of true and perfect ſoule and bodie, with all things that belong to the entire nature of man; for if he had taken mans nature only in part, he had redeemed it but in part. Thirdly, the properties of man in ſoule, minde, will, affections; in body, breadth, length, circumſcription, &c. Fourthly, the infirmities and frailties of mans nature without ſin; where muſt be noted, that Chriſt tooke not all infirmities of mans nature, as ſin and corruption, neither euery perſonall infirmitie of euery perſon, as blindnes, Gowte, or this and that particular diſeaſe. Here by the way it may be asked, whether Chriſt had obliuion in his agonie, as ſome haue thought? To which may be anſwered: That euen whē he vttered thoſe words [Father if it be thy will let this cup &c.] it is not fit to attribute obliuion vnto him, which properly is a forgetfulnes of thoſe things which we are bound to remember, for thus wee ſhould draw ſinne vpon him: but rather to aſcribe it to ſuſpending of the memorie: which is when a man neither forgetteth nor remembreth. For as in the will be three things, 1. willing, 2. nilling, 3. ſuſpending of the will, which is neither of the former; ſo alſo is it in memorie, which remembreth, forgetteth, and ſuſpendeth memorie for a time. Now the ſumme of the whole ground is; That the Sonne of God, the ſecond perſon and ſo abiding, tooke vnto him the perfect nature of man, in all things being like vnto vs, ſinne onely excepted: for the further cleering of which, conſider theſe foure concluſions: firſt, The Sonne of God made man is not

* μένων ἐν, ὑπόστασιν ἔλαβε.

two persons distinct, but one alone.

Quest. Quest. How can this be? for as he is the Sonne of God he is a person; and as he is a man he is a particular person, as euery seuerall man is, and therefore hee is two persons.

Answere. Anſ. Euery particular man is a person, because he subsisteth of himselfe; but the manhood of Christ subsisteth not in it selfe, but in the second person onely, so that Christ God and man is but one person: for euen as body and soule make one man, so Godhead and Manhood make but one Christ. Secondly, this one person consisteth of two distinct natures, the Godhead, and the Manhood standing of bodie and soule. Thirdly, these two natures are vnited and ioyned into one person, for the Godhead doth take the Manhood and support it. Fourthly, these two natures after coniunction remaine distinct, the Godhead is not the Manhood, neither on the contrary: but still distinguished, first in regard of themselues. Secondly of their properties; for the properties of the one are not the properties of the other. Thirdly of their actions; for the actions of the Godhead are not communicated to the Manhood, neither is the worke of one nature the worke of another.

Aduersaries hereof are;

Popish doctrine denying Christs humanitie is of Antichrist.

Obiect. Answere.

First, Heretikes innumerable which are not knowne to all; but knowne enemies are: first, Iewes, who denie Christ to come in the flesh. Secondly, some Iewish Arrians compounded heretikes, who haue withstood Christs incarnation; some of which haue suffered amongst vs. Thirdly, the Papists, the substance of whose doctrine robbeth Christ of his humane nature, though they confesse him incarnate: for since his death (they teach) his bodie is become inuisible, and in innumerable places at once; so they abolish the Manhood of Christ, and turne it into the Godhead, seeing it is become infinite and vncircumscribed. Ob. They alleage, God can make it to be in many places at once. Anſ. We may not dispute what God can doe, but what he will doe; so farre as he hath reuealed. Secondly, it stands not with the power of God to doe some things, as those which imploy contradictions to be true at the same time. Of which nature this is to make a true bodie to be in many places at once, yea to be in heauen, and also euery where on earth. But his bodie is glorified, and therefore may be in many places at once. Anſ. The words [this is my bodie] were spoken before his glorification. Secondly, glorification taketh away the corruption; but not the true properties of his bodie, as length, breadth, thicknes, and circumscription. Ob. But this ioyned together must be in the same place, and cannot be seuered; and therefore his Manhood being ioyned to his Godhead, must needes be euery where. Anſ. The antecedent is false: for things ioyned together may bee the one in one place, the other in another; as the bodie of the Sunne is ioyned with his beames and light, and yet the bodie of the Sunne is in heauen, but the beames and light in the earth also.

Obiect. Answere. Obiect. Answere.

The 13. ground is, that Iesus is Christ. 1. Ioh. 2. 22 Who is a lier but he that denieth that Iesus is Christ, the same is the Antichrist: From which place wee may gather two thinges. First, That Iesus is Christ. Secondly, That it is a ground susteyning our whole saluation. For whosoeuer denieth it is Antichrist; see 1. Cor. 3. 10. The meaning of the ground by Christ I vnderstand the annointed Sauiour and Redeemer; who is a King, Priest, and Prophet. First, as he is a king his power manifesteth it selfe in three thinges; First, in sauing and destroying not the body onely as other kinges, but the soule also. Secondly, in pardoning sinnes or reteyning them. Thirdly, in making lawes to bind consciences. Secondly, his Priestly office standeth in two thinges: First, in a power to offer sacrifice propitiatorie for the sinnes of whole mankind. Secondly, in making intercession to God for mankind: Thirdly, his Propheticall office consisteth in three thinges: First, in reuealing to man the will of his father. Secondly, in enlightining of the mind to vnderstand that will reuealed. Thirdly, in framing of the harte to performe obedience vnto it, together with the setling of it in the truth. Thus he is the Christ, that is the annoynted of God.

13. Ground

But we must yet here goe further and vnderstand by Christ a perfect Christ, a perfect Redeemer, without any partner, fellow, or deputy: for if hee haue a partner, ner, he is but halfe a redeemer, and if he haue a fellow or deputie, how is he omnipotent, or omnipresent? This is plaine by testimonie of Scripture; There is none other name, Actes 4. 12. therefore there is no fellow or partner. There is one Mediatour, that is but one, 1. Tim. 2. 3. yea by himselfe he purged our sinnes, Heb. 1. 3. without fellow or deputy: whose Priesthood is such as cannot passe from himselfe to another. Heb. 7. 24. Obiect. But Ministers haue power to remit and retaine sinne, hauing the keyes giuen them. Answ. The keyes are not giuen to Ministers to pardon men properly, but Ministerially to pronounce and declare that God in heauen doth pardon them. Ob. The Saints shall iudge the world, and therfore not Christ onely. Answ. They shall not iudge by pronouncing a soueraigne sentence of absolution or condemnation, which is proper to Christ the Iudge; but by assisting him (as Iustices vpon the bench) both by witnessing and assenting vnto that righteous iudgement. Obiect. Psal. 45. 7. He is annoynted with oyle of gladnes aboue his fellowes: therefore hee hath fellowes. Answ. All that beleeue in Christ are the fellowes of Christ: but in his annoynting, that is in grace, though not in office. Obiect. But Ministers are Christs deputies. Ans. Ministers are properly no deputies, but instruments to declare the will of God, and can go no further then to teach the eare: for it is Christ himselfe that enlighteneth the mind. But it will bee said that Kinges are Christs deputies on earth. Answ. They are his deputies as hee is God equall to his father, not as hee is Mediatour.

Aduersaries of this maine ground are;

The Romish Church, who rob Christ of all these three offices. For first, his kingly office they giue part of it to the Pope, in making him to remit sinnes properly; to make lawes to bind conscience properly, as Gods lawes do, which is a power equall to Christs, & so they make him check-mate with Christ. Secondly, his Priestly office is giuen to the Masse-priest, who by their doctrine hath power to offer a propitiatorie sacrifice for the sinnes of the quicke and dead; yea euery Papist hath a peece of it, because euery one of them may satisfie the iustice of God for his sins by his owne merit. And for his intercession, the secód work of his Priesthood, that is dealt among the Saints (among whom the Virgin Mary hath the greatest part) who are inuocated as intercessors, not onely by their prayers, but by their merits in heauen. Thirdly, his Propheticall office is bestowed likewise vpon euery Pope, who is without scripture to determine infallibly, by an inward assistance of the Spirit locked vp in his breast, of all matters concerning faith & manners, which is the proper office of him who is the proper Doctor of his Church. Therefore this Romish doctrine established by the Councell of Trent, is an hereticall and Antichristian doctrine, making God an Idoll God, which is concluded out of the place alleaged, thus: He that denieth Iesus to be Christ, is Antichrist. And againe, He that hath not the Sonne, hath not the Father. But the Romish Church denie Iesus to be Christ, and hath not the Sonne, becaus it ouerturneth his person and oppugneth all his offices: and therfore neither haue they the Father, but an Idoll God, and so consequently their doctrine is Antichristian and hereticall. For which cause the reformed Churches haue iustly separated from them, and ought euer, so long as they denie this ground, so to doe.

Papists worse than the souldiers in parting christs garments.

The romish Church denie Iesus to be Christ.

The 14. ground is: He that beleeueth in Christ shall not perish, but haue life euerlasting, Ioh. 3. 16. God so loued the world, &c. For the better handling of it consider first for the meaning, what this faith is. Secondly, that it is a maine ground of true religion. Thirdly, the enemies of it. For the first: In this faith are two things: first, knowledge. Secondly, application of the thing knowne. The knowledge is, of Christ and his benefits; of which some measure must be had, or else there can be no faith. Esay 53. 11. By his knowledge shall my righteous seruant iustifie many. Ioh. 17. 3. This is life eternall, &c. And this stands with reason, that the thing to bee beleeued must first bee knowne: for faith without knowledge is fancie. The Romane Church hath then erred, which teach that there is a faith to saluation whereto knowledge is not required, such a one as standeth only in an assent to the faith of the Church. The second thing in faith (which is the more principall)

14. Ground

The easie of Romish faith hangeth in the ayre without foundation.

principall) is an application of things knowne: namely of Chriſt and his benefits vnto our ſelues in particular. And herein ſtandeth the very ſubſtance of true faith, which is not cauſed by any naturall affection of heart, or action of will, but by the ſupernaturall action of the minde enlightened by the ſpirit of God, reſoluing vs that Chriſt and his merits belong vnto vs in particular. That this true particular application is required in true faith is proued by theſe reaſons: Firſt, that which wee lawfully aske by prayer wee muſt beleeue by a ſpeciall faith: but in prayer we lawfully aske the pardon of our ſinnes in particular, and life euerlaſting by Chriſt; therefore we muſt beleeue the pardon of our ſinnes and life euerlaſting by Chriſt. The aduerſaries can denie nothing but the firſt part of this reaſon, which is the very word of God it ſelfe. Mark. 11.24. Whatſoeuer ye deſire when you pray, beleeue yee ſhall haue it, and it ſhall be done vnto you. Where in euery petition of prayer our Sauiour requireth two things: firſt, a deſire of things promiſed. Secondly, a particular faith of things deſired, ſtanding in aſſurance that they ſhall be granted. Secondly, whatſoeuer the holie Ghoſt doth infallibly teſtifie to vs particularly, that wee muſt beleeue particularly: but the holy Ghoſt doth particularly teſtifie by infallible teſtimonie to euery beleeuers conſcience, his owne adoption and pardon of ſinne, and acceptance to life euerlaſting; and therefore it muſt be particularly beleeued. Here the Papiſt excepteth and ſaith, that this teſtimonie of the ſpirit of God, is not certain but probable onely, and a man may be deceiued in it. But the Apoſtle Rom. 8.16. anſwereth this allegation: The ſpirit of God teſtifieth with our ſpirits that we are the children of God: and cleereth this teſtimonie of fearfulnes and weaknes in the former words: where he ſaith, it is not the ſpirit of feare which wee haue receiued, but ſuch a ſpirit as maketh vs crie Abba, father, and with a ſtrong voyce: yea and for the further aſſuring vs in this teſtimonie, it is called the * ſeale, and earneſt penny of the ſpirit in our hearts, than which things what are more ſure and certain ratifications among men, whoſe teſtimony (though it be but of two men, but much more of three) ſeale or earneſt if it be ſufficient confirmatiō vntō men, how much more ſure is the teſtimonie, ſeale, and earneſt, of the ſpirit of God vnto vs? Thirdly, that which God offereth and giueth vs particularly, we muſt particularly receiue: but God offereth and giueth vs Chriſt and all his benefits particularly in the Word & Sacraments, and therefore wee muſt haue particular faith to receiue him. It will here be ſaid, we grant all this, we muſt receiue Chriſt and his benefits in ſpeciall; but we doe it by hope; as the Papiſts teach to hope well. Anſ. It is a work of faith alone: Ioh. 1.12. As many as receiued him, &c. Who were they? The next words ſhew, euen they that beleeued on his name. Againe, in the Sacrament of the Supper, Chriſt is offered as the bread and water of life to euery one in particular: and therefore euery beleeuer muſt haue ſomething in his ſoule proportionall to a hand and mouth, for the receiuing and feeding vpon him; which is nothing elſe but faith ſpecially applying Chriſt and his benefits: ſee Ioh. 6. 35. Fourthly, the example of beleeuers in the Scriptures prooue the ſame truth. Abraham beleeued by a particular faith, which was imputed to him for righteouſnes, Rom. 4. 23. So alſo Paul, Galat. 2.20. I liue by the faith of the Sonne of God, who loued me, and hath giuen himſelfe for me. Now both theſe are patternes and preſidents for vs to follow, that as they beleeued, and particularly applied Chriſt to themſelues, ſo muſt we: ſee Rom. 4.14. 1. Timoth. 1.16. Now frō theſe two, namely knowledge and application, followeth Confidence, whereby wee truſt and relie our ſelues vpon Chriſt and his merits thus knowne and applied vnto ſaluation; which becauſe it inſeparably followeth faith, is often in the Scripture put for faith it ſelfe: I diſtinguiſh it from faith, becauſe it hath been ſaid (though falſely) that it is a part of faith, which indeed is a fruite and a follower of faith: and the Apoſtle Epheſ. 3.12. doth manifeſtly diſtinguiſh them; By whom we haue boldnes and entrance with confidence by faith in him.

* 2. Cor. 1. 22.

The ſecond point in this ground is the weight of it. That it is a maine ground of Religion, appeareth thus: If the inheritance of life (ſaith Paul) be not by faith, it is not ſure, Rom. 4.15. For if we were intitled by workes, the promiſe ſhould not be certaine: he then that oppugneth pugneth this ground of particular faith, ouerthroweth the Goſpel, as which cannot aſſure a man of ſaluation. Secondly, in the Catechiſme of the Primitiue church, faith in God is made one groũd, Heb.6.1. Thirdly, this ground being the moſt maine promiſe of the Goſpell, whoſoeuer ouerthroweth it, hee depriueth men of all comfort of religion.

Aduerſaries.

The aduerſaries of this ground are, firſt the common people, who for the moſt part profeſſe that they are not certaine of the pardon of their ſinnes; they hope well, becauſe God is merciful; but to be certaine they thinke it impoſſible: as though there can bee hope and confidence where is no aſſurance: but ſpeciall hope alwaies preſuppoſeth ſpeciall faith. Secondly the Papiſts, for they condemne ſpeciall faith for theſe reaſons: Firſt, where is no word, there (ſay they) can be no particular faith; but there is no word that ſaith, thou Cornelius, Peter, Iohn, &c. ſhalt be ſaued. Anſ. It is true indeede, there is no particular faith where there is no particular word, or which is proportionall: but the Miniſter truly applying the generall promiſe to this & that particular man, it is as much as if a mans name were regiſtred in the ſcripture. Secondly, wee haue in ſubſtance a particular word, in that God who hath giuen the promiſe, hath giuen alſo a commandement, to euery beleeuer to applie the ſame vnto himſelfe. 1.Ioh.2.23. This is his commandement, that we beleeue in the name of his ſonne Ieſus Chriſt, which is equiualent to a particular word. As a King giues a pardon to a thouſand men, but nameth neuer one of them: yet euery of them trulie applying the pardon, according to the Kings intention haue the benefit of it, as ſurely as if all their names had bin ſet therein.

Indeed no word ſaith thou Boniface the 8. or thou Pope Iohn the 22 ſhalt be ſaued.

Obiect. II. Obiect. Many that applie the generall promiſe to themſelues are deceiued and faile; yea euery wicked man ſaith he beleeueth in the ſonne of God, wherein he is deceiued.

Anſwere. Anſ. Many indeede faile in their ſpeciall application, but it is onely vnbeleeuers: but they muſt proue that none truly can applie the promiſe ſpeciallie, which all true beleeuers doe.

Obiect. III. Obiect. They ſay: In regard of God wee muſt beleeue, but in regard of our ſelues we muſt doubt.

Anſwere. Anſ. Yea in regard of our ſelues wee muſt not onely doubt but deſpaire: yet beleeuers being found not in themſelues but in Chriſt, may proue themſelues whether they are in the faith or no, 2.Cor. 13.5. For whoſoeuer repenteth, knoweth that he doth repent: We know we are of God, 1.Ioh.5.19. Ob. But all men in the world are full of doubting, and how can doubting ſtand with certaintie of ſaluation? Anſ. Conſider faith firſt as it is in it ſelfe, ſo it is certaine. Secondly, as it is in vs, & ſo it is mingled with much doubting, which is not of the nature of faith, but contrary vnto it; and yet theſe may and muſt ſtand together in the beleeuer, for doubtings may diſturbe, but not deſtroy true faith: for the Lord (notwithſtanding them) accepteth our weak faith as perfect, and our will to beleeue for beleefe it ſelfe, where he ſeeth griefe conceiued for doubtings, ſtrife againſt them, and endeuour to haue our faith increaſed. Ob. But to beleeue pardon of our ſinnes, is to enter into Gods counſell. Anſ. That is falſe, becauſe pardon of our ſinnes is reuciled. Ob. But your Church (ſay they) abhorreth reuelation. Anſw. Neither the ſcripture nor our Church condemneth Reuelations contained in the ſcripture, but thoſe that are without, beſide, or againſt ſcripture: Epheſ.1.7. The ſpirit is called the ſpirit of Reuelation: ſee alſo 1.Cor.2.12. As for this reuelation of pardon of ſinne to the beleeuer it is contained in the ſcripture, and is no more a prying into Gods counſell, than it is for a Traytour to beleeue that he is pardoned, when certaine newes of his pardon is brought vnto him from the King, of whom none can ſay he entreth into the Kings counſell. Hence we conclude, that ſeeing the doctrine of the Papiſts ouerthrow this maine ground, wee muſt take heede of ioyning our ſelues vnto them.

15.Ground The 15.ground is: That a ſinner is iuſtified by faith, without the workes of the Law, Rom.3.28. Wherein conſider firſt the meaning; ſecondlie the weight; thirdly the aduerſaries. For the meaning three things muſt bee knowne. Firſt, what it is to be iuſtified. Secondly, what it is to bee iuſtified by faith. Thirdly, what workes are to bee excluded from iuſtification. Concerning the firſt. In iuſtification there be three diſtinct actions of God: firſt, the freeing of a ſinner from his his sins for the merits of Christ: Act. 13. 39. From all things from which they could not be iustified by the law of Moses, by him euery one that beleeueth is iustified: that is, acquited from them. Paul opposeth it thus to condemnation, Rom. 8. 33. which is nothing else, but a binding of a man to iust punishment. The second action is, the reputing and the accepting of a sinner as iust for the merit of Christ. Esay 5. 23. Woe vnto him that iustifieth a wicked man: that is, not to make but accept him iust; and in the Gospell, Wisedome is iustified of her children, that is, approoued and acknowledged. The third is, the acceptation of a sinner to life euerlasting in Christ. For after that God hath absolued a sinner, and reputed him as iust, there must follow this acceptation to life, which is therfore called the iustificatiō of life, with the reason rendred in the same place: for that like as Adams sinne is imputed vnto all, by which death entred; so Christs obedience imputed to beleeuers, bringeth life and iustification. Out of which three actions wee may gather a true description of iustification, to wit, It is an action of God the Father, absoluing a sinner from all his sinnes, for the merit of Christ, accounting him as iust, and accepting him to life euerlasting.

Rom. 5. 18.

II. Point. What it is to be iustified by faith. For the cleer vnderstanding of this waighty point, we must answere 2. questions. First, what is the very thing for which a sinner is iustified? Ans. It is the obedience of Christ the Redeemer and Mediatour, passiue and actiue: the former standing in suffering the death of his bodie, and the paines of the second death in his soule; the latter, in fulfilling the law. The truth of this answer appeareth thus: Since our fall we owe to God a double debt: we breake the law, and are bound to make satisfaction. Secondly, being creatures wee must fulfill the rigour of the law, and performe what it requireth: neither parcell of which debt, seeing we (being bankerupts) are able to pay, wee flie to our suertie who must pay both for vs: the former hee doth by his death, being made a curse for vs, and so redeemed vs from the curse, Galath. 3. 13. the latter by perfect obedience vnto the law, that so in him wee doing these things, might liue in them, vers. 12. The second question is: Seeing the obedience of Christ is the matter of our iustification, and is out of our selues; how commeth it to bee made ours? Ans. To make it ours, first God must giue it vs: secondly wee must receiue it. First, God giueth it vnto vs, when he giueth vs Christ himselfe, for it is giuen with him, and it is made ours when God in mercie esteemeth, iudgeth, and accounteth it to be ours, for it is ours by imputation: which appeareth by these two reasons: First, as Christ is made our sinne, so are we made his righteousnes, 2. Cor. 5. 21: but hee is made our sinne by imputation, and therefore his iustice being inherēt in him, is made ours by imputation. Secondly, as the first Adams disobedience is made ours, so Christs the second Adams obedience is ours, Rom. 5. 17. 18. but that is ours by imputation, and therefore Christs obedience also. Secondly, to make this obedience ours, we must receiue it, and that can be onely by faith, which is the hand of the soule receiuing into it the things that are giuen vs of God: where note by the way, that a sinner is not iustified by the dignitie of his faith, but as it is an instrument whereby Christs obedience is applied vnto the soule.

Note.

III. Point. What workes are excluded from iustification. Ans. The workes of Morall and Ceremoniall law, workes of nature and grace. That euen workes of grace are excluded, appeareth by these reasons. First, a sinner must so bee iustified, that all cause of boasting may be cut off, Rom. 3. 27. But if a man were iustified by workes of grace, he might boast still, yea though hee acknowledge the workes to be of God: see the Pharisies example, Luk. 18. Secondly, if a man were iustified by the workes of the law, then our iustification should stand by the law; but that it doth not, Rom. 4. 14. for then the promise were made voide; yea the tenour of that whole Chapter prooueth, that Abraham hauing store of good workes, was yet iustified by faith without the works of the law; the which thing also that obiection in chap. 6. 1. witnesseth: What then, shall we continue in sinne? drawne out of the fiue former chapters thus: If a man may be iustified by faith without workes, we may continue in sinne; which obiection were no obiection if that had not been the intent of the Apostle, to prooue iustification ſtification by faith onely, without the workes of the law. Thirdly, Paul was not iuſtified by any workes: 1.Cor.4.3. I know nothing by my ſelfe, yet am I not therby iuſtified: where he noteth two things of himſelfe: firſt, that hee had a good conſcience within him: ſecondly, that he was not thereby iuſtified; where hee debarreth all works of grace. Fourthly, we are ſaued by grace without workes: theſe workes excluded are workes of grace, for they are all ſuch as God hath prepared to walke in, Epheſ.2.8. Fiftly, a man muſt firſt be iuſtified before he can doe a good worke: and therfore works follow iuſtification, and cannot cauſe it. Yea and as all workes are excluded, ſo al vertues alſo (excepting faith) are here reiected. For as in a man that ſtandeth to receiue a gift, no part doth any thing to receiue it but the hand, yet hauing receiued it, all other parts teſtifie thankfulnes, the tongue, the feete, and all the bodie: euen ſo wee receiue the matter of our iuſtification by faith alone, not by hope or loue; but after the receiuing of Chriſt, theſe with the other graces work and ſhew themſelues.

The ſecond point in this ground is the weight of it, appearing herein, that he that ouerthroweth it, ouerturneth the faith: Rom.4.14. If they of the law be heires of life, faith is made voide, and the promiſe of none effect. And Galath.2.21. If we be iuſtified by workes, Chriſt died in vaine.

Aduerſaries. Aduerſaries hereof. Firſt, the home-aduerſarie is the common ſort of ignorant people and all naturall men, who with the young man ſay, What ſhall I doe to be ſaued? They ſay they will be ſaued by faith in Chriſt, but when it commeth to the point, they will be doing ſomewhat, and ſtand much vpon their good meaning and righteous dealing. Secondly, the forreine enemie is the Popiſh doctrine & Romiſh religion, which teacheth that there be two iuſtifications. Firſt, when a man of an euil man is made a good man; this is by grace of the holy Ghoſt put into the heart: the latter is whereby a man is made of good, better, which is by good workes. But what Church ſoeuer holdeth this, is fallen from grace. This is a peremptorie ſentence (will ſome ſay) and no generall Councell hath ſo determined. Anſ. The more is the pitie. But Gods word hath peremptorily determined it: Galat.5.4. They are abolished from Chriſt and fallen from grace, whoſoeuer will be iuſtified by the law, as the Romane Church at this day. They ſay our doctrine maintaineth looſenes of life, by excluding all workes from iuſtification. Anſ. Though we exclude the beſt works from iuſtification, yet we debarre them not from Chriſtian conuerſation, but therein require them as fruits of the ſpirit plentifully. Ob. But it is abſurd (ſay they) that one man may be iuſtified by the righteouſnes of another. Anſ. Adams ſinne is made ours, and they marueile not at it; what greater abſurditie is it, that the ſecond Adams obedience, anſwering to the firſt Adams ſinne, ſhould bee ours in like manner?

The Popiſh church fallen from grace.

Obiect. Anſwere. Obiect. Anſwere.

The 16. ground is this: Except a man be borne anew, of water and of the holie Ghoſt, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God, Ioh.3.5. In which obſerue firſt the meaning, ſecondly the weight, thirdly the aduerſaries. In the firſt conſider two points: firſt, what it is to be borne againe: ſecondly, of what neceſſitie it is. For the former, wee muſt know, that there muſt bee in him that is borne againe three things: firſt, a reall change from one eſtate to another. Secondly, there muſt be a roote from whence this change may ariſe. Thirdly, a new life. Firſt, the chaunge is, when a man of a meere naturall man is made a new man: not in regard of his bodie or ſoule, or powers of them, all which a man retaineth the ſame after his regeneration, but in regard of Gods image reſtored, and renewed by Chriſt, Epheſ.4.24. This is the reſtoring of that new qualitie of righteouſnes and holines loſt in Adam, for ſo the Apoſtle deſcribeth this new birth in the place alleaged. This change is attributed to water and the holy Ghoſt, wherein [by water] our Sauiour alludeth to ſome ſpeeches of the old Teſtament; as Ezech.36.25. where the Prophet ſpeaketh of the cleanſing of the Church, by powring cleane water vpon it: that is, infuſing new graces into the heart, which take place of the old corruption. And by the holy Ghoſt, he ſheweth that this cleanſing of vs is by the inward working of the holy Ghoſt. Obiect. But it will be ſaid, if a man bee a new man, hee muſt haue a new ſoule. Anſ. This new qualitie of righteouſnes and holines is as it were

16. Ground

were a new ſoule, for in a regenerate man, there is a bodie ſoule, and beſides the ſpirit, which is the grace of ſanctification, oppoſed to fleſh, and corruption of nature, Rom. 8. 10. This is as it were the ſoule of a ſoule renewed.

Secondly, that a man may come to this eſtate, there muſt be ſome root and beginning, whence this change may ariſe, and that is no other than Chriſt crucified, the Redeemer and Mediatour, of whoſe bodie beleeuers are members, of his fleſh and of his bones, Epheſ. 5. 30. for looke as Eue was made of the ſide of Adam, ſo is euery beleeuer of the blood of Chriſt; and as euery man, ſo farre as he is a ſinfull man, ſpringeth from the firſt Adam, ſo doth euery man, ſo farre as he is renewed, ſpring from the ſecond Adam Chriſt Ieſus. Now that a man may ſpring out of Chriſt, he muſt firſt (being taken out of the wilde Oliue the old Adam, Rom. 6. 5.) be ſet and ingrafted into the ſecond Adam as a new ſtocke, and that by faith wrought in the heart by the ſpirit of God: by which inciſion hee receiueth from Chriſt two things: firſt, in regard of his ſoule, holines: ſecondly, in regard of bodie, incorruption, ſeeing that the whole man is vnited vnto Chriſt, and ſo both ſoule and body receiue immortalitie and glorie.

Thirdly, in this new birth there muſt be a new life, by which if any liue not, he is not borne again: for the diſtinct knowledge of which life wee muſt diſtinguiſh of life: life is vncreated, and created: vncreated life is the life of God, yea God himſelfe; of which kind this is not. Created life, is either naturall, or ſpirituall: Naturall, is that which we liue by naturall meanes, as meate, drinke, ſleepe, phyſicke &c. of which kind this new life is not: but this is that ſpirituall life, whereby a man in this life is ruled by the ſpirit of God according to the word; and it ſtandeth in two thinges: Firſt, when the ſpirit dwelleth in the heart; Secondly, when the ſpirit ruleth the hart: or more plainely, this life hath two degrees: Firſt, when a man beginneth to ſauour, affect, and will ſpirituall things, loueth them, and chiefely affecteth them, Rom. 8. 5. when they haue ſome ſauour and reliſh vnto him. Secondly, when a man in all eſtates liueth by a iuſtifying faith, and ordereth his life thereby. The iuſt man (ſaith Abacuke) liueth by faith, and this is, as it is truly called life eternall; the beginning and firſt degree of which euerie beleeuer hath poſſeſſion of, euen in this life.

The ſecond point in this ground is, the weighs of it; for which obſerue the neceſſitie of the new birth, in the former words where it is ſaid, that without it a man ſhall neuer ſee the kingdome of God, much leſſe enter into it. No man is in Chriſt (and ſo conſequently out of ſtate of ſaluation) who is not a new creature, 2. Cor. 5. 17. No outward prerogatiue can bring a man in requeſt with God, vnleſſe hee be a new creature, Gal. 6. 15. It is a conſtant truth of Chriſt, Ioh. 13. 8. If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no part in me.

The third point is: The Aduerſaries: who are, firſt, euery man by nature, the wiſedome of whom herein is enmitie with God. For euery one naturally is willing to yeeld vnto God ſome externall ſeruice, and ceremoniall worſhip; as in the Church to draw neere to God with their lippes: but when they ſhould come to their renewing, and the mortifying of their luſts, O then they ſtorme and ſwell, and caſt off this yoke, becauſe they ſay it abridgeth them of their eaſe, libertie and pleaſure, and they cannot bee their owne men for it. Secondly, the Romane religion, which for many hundred yeres hath ſtood in ceremoniall and bodily actions, rites, geſtures, apparrell, and moſt of all in outwarde penance, borrowed partly of the Iewes, and partly of the Heathens: but all this doctrine of the new birth, of mortifying hidden luſts, and deniall of a mans ſelfe, is dead and buried among them, little hereof is ſpoken or written in the great volumes of their greateſt Clerks. But ỹ doctrine which is from God is ſpirituall, as God himſelfe is, and moſt concerneth the inner man. Secondly, they are great aduerſaries hereof, in teaching that man (though captiue to ſinne) hath a power in his nature, whereby, if the holy Ghoſt free him, he can of himſelfe will and doe that which is good: which if it were ſo, then he is but in part new, and ſo is no new man. Secondly, a regenerate man muſt be a new creature: now creation is a framing of ſomething out of nothing, not of ſomething into ſomthing. Thirdly, thus a man ſhould be but halfe dead, and ſo could not be borne againe, but onely ſtengthened, euen as a man in a ſwoune, of whom wee cannot ſay properly he is reuiued, becauſe hee was not dead, but recouered.

Aduerſaries.

Romane religion leadeth not to the new birth, and therefore goe not to heauen.

17.Ground The 17.ground is out of Galath.5.1. Stand faſt in the libertie wherewith Chriſt hath made you free. For the meaning of which we muſt know, that Chriſtian libertie which wee are exhorted to maintaine, ſtandeth in a double freedome: Firſt, from the Morall law: ſecondly, from the Ceremoniall. From the Morall law two waies: firſt, from the curſe of the law, Rom.8.1. There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt. Secondly, from the rigour of it, which requireth perſonall and perfect obedience: this rigour is moderated by Chriſt; whence followeth a freedome alſo from iuſtification by workes, Rom.5.1. Galath.5.4. The ſecond freedome is, from the Ceremoniall law, which hauing an end put to it by Chriſt, bindeth no man: but our libertie is procured to vs in meates, drinkes, and all things indifferent with good conſcience, ſeeing to the pure all things are pure, Tit.1.15. Where we are commaunded to ſtand faſt, wee ſee the weight of it to be ſuch, as it may not be departed from, nor forſaken, for then we become debters againe to the whole law, and ſo are fallen from Chriſt.

Aduerſaries. Aduerſaries hereof, are firſt the Libertines; as the Family of loue, who being (as they ſay) deified, are ſo carried by the holie Ghoſt that they cannot ſinne, no though they ſhould commit fornication: but no man is freed from obedience to the law by Chriſt, although hee be from the curſe and rigour of it. Secondly, all that take libertie to ſinne, becauſe they ſay, God in Chriſt is mercifull: but Chriſt freed from ſinne, not vnto it.

Poperie maketh moe ſinnes than euer God made. Thirdly, the Romane Church, holding that the Pope hath power to make lawes binding conſcience properly, preſcribing ſuch things to be done, the obſeruing of which is the worſhip of God, and meritorious; as on the Popiſh faſting daies, yea and Wedneſdaies and Fridaies, not to eate fleſh, euen this law bindeth the conſcience of a Papiſt, and ſuch abſtinence (they ſay) is a worke of merit, and a worſhip of God. But it will be ſaid, that Princes and Magiſtrates make ſuch lawes, of meates, drinkes, apparell, and muſt be obeyed. Anſ. Theſe Anſwere. lawes bind not conſcience, but the outward man. Secondly, they do not abrogate our libertie, but moderate the ouer common vſe for the common good: but Popiſh doctrine accounteth the breach of any of theſe mortall ſin. Ob. Obiect. Yea, but they forbid fleſh for temperance ſake, becauſe it ſtirreth vp luſt. Anſw. But they forbid not the hoteſt Anſwere. wines, ſpices, Conſerues, & ſuch meates and drinkes, which more ſtirre vp luſt than fleſh: and therefore this is but a ſhift.

The 18. ground is in Matth. 18.18. 18.Ground Whatſoeuer the Church bindeth in earth, is bound in heauen; and whatſoeuer it looſeth in earth, is looſed in heauen. In which ground obſerue firſt the meaning, ſecondly the moment, thirdly the aduerſaries. Firſt, to know the meaning, two things are to be handled: firſt, what is this power of binding and looſing, which the Church hath. Secondly, what is the ratification and efficacie of this power out of thoſe words, is bound and looſed in heauen. Concerning the former: This power of binding and looſing is that authoritie giuen by God to his Church on earth, whereby it pardoneth or retaineth vnpardoned the ſinnes of men: for mens ſinnes are cords and bands which binde them, Prou.5.22. and chaines of blacke darknes, wherein men are reſerued vnto damnation, 2.Pet.2.4. and hence fitly when mens ſinnes are pardoned, are they ſaid to be looſed, and bound if they be not. This power is called Matth. 16. the power of the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, for mens ſinnes are as lockes, yea bars and bolts, ſhutting vpon them the doores of heauen: and hence alſo when the Church pardoneth ſinnes, the doores of heauen are ſaid to be opened, and when it retaineth them, heauen is ſhut againſt the ſinner. Indeede pardon of ſinne is properly granted and giuen by God; but yet men are truly ſaid to pardon and retaine ſinne, when miniſterially they pronounce that God pardoneth, or doth not pardon. Ob. It will be Obiect. ſaid, that men vpon earth know not whoſe ſins God will pardon, and whoſe he will not. Anſ. It is poſſible for man Anſwere. to know whoſe ſinnes God wil pardon, and whoſe hee will not; for God hath generally made knowne that he will remit the ſinnes of all beleeuers and repentant ſinners, but will retaine their ſinnes, who goe on in the ſame. Now we may may know particularly who these bee that doe repent and beleeue; for the tree is knowne by the fruite, according vnto which the Church may pronounce a true sentence. Further, to know more distinctly what this power is, the parts of it are to bee considered, and they bee two; for it standeth partly in the ministerie of the word, and partly in the iurisdiction of the Church vpon earth. The ministery of the word is either publike or priuate. First, the publike ministerie of the word is called the preaching of it; in which is this binding and loosing, opening and shutting, it being an ordinance of God, in which Ministers are called of God to pronounce in the name of God pardon of sinne to the penitent, and condemnation to the obstinate: and here must bee noted, that this binding and loosing in the publike Ministerie is generall vnto all, but with Obiect. exception of faith and repentance. Ob.

But seeing it is generall it is of no great Answere. force. Ans. It is: for euery hearer must applie this general doctrine to his owne person, and say with the Virgin Mary, applying to her self the Angels speech: Be it vnto me according to thy word; this maketh it forcible in the conscience.

2. The priuate Ministerie standeth in two things: first, priuate admonition: secondly, priuate comfort. Priuate admonition is Gods ordinance, whereby the Minister in Gods name bindeth a man to iudgement for his sinne, except hee repent: thus Peter dealt with Simon Magus, Act. 8. 21. 22. Priuate comfort is, when vpon true repentance the Minister pronounceth vpon the beleeuer pardon of sinne without condition. Thus dealt Nathan with Dauid, 2. Sam. 12. 22. Dauid said, I haue sinned; Nathan hereupon telleth him his sinnes are forgiuen. Secondly, concerning the Iurisdiction of the Church; It is a power giuen of God to the Church, whereby it vseth correction vpon open sinners for their saluation, and it standeth in excommunication and absolution. Excommunication is a sentence excluding open and obstinate sinners out of the kingdome of God, and consequently from the societie of the Church; for this followeth the former, If he will not heare the Church, let him be an heathen. Paul calleth this sentence a giuing vp of a man vnto Satan.
Ob. But no man can exclude another from the kingdome of God. Ans. The Church excludeth not properly, but by declaring that God hath excluded such.
Ob. But the true childe of God may bee Obiect.
excommunicated, and yet is not shut out of heauen. Ans. In some sort and Answere.
for a time he may be said to be shut out of heauen, but conditionally and vntill repentance. The contrarie hereof is publike absolution, when open sinners repenting, are by the Church openly declared to be members of the kingdome of heauen, and so admitted and receiued againe into the Church. This power of the Church differeth from the power of the Ciuill Magistrate in foure things. First, the power of the Church is ordered onely by the word; but Ciuill power by other ciuill lawes also. Secondly, the former correcteth only by voice, in admonition, suspension, and excommunication; the latter by reall and bodily punishments. Thirdly, all spirituall correction, as excommunication it selfe, standeth at the repentance of a sinner, and proceedeth no further: but the punishments of Ciuill power stay not at repentance, but proceede on euen to the death of the malefactor (notwithstanding his repentance) if he be a man of death. Fourthly, in the Ciuill power bee three degrees of proceeding: first, the knowledge of the cause. Secondly, the giuing of the sentence. Thirdly, the execution of the punishment. In Ecclesiasticall are the two former, but the last belongeth to God alone.

The second thing in the meaning is, to know what the ratification of this power is: namely, to be bound and loosed in heauen; that is, when the Churches iudgment, following the iudgement of God, doth acquite, or condemne a sinner, God in heauen hath done it alreadie and ratifieth it. For in absolution (as also in the other) pardon of sinne is first giuen in heauen: secondly, the Church pronounceth this according to Gods will: & thirdly, God ratifieth it thereupon in heauen, and confirmeth it as sure as if on earth he had pronounced the pardon.

The second point. The weight of this ground may appeare, Mat. 16. 18. where the maine promise of the Gospell for the stablishment of the Church is contained: Vpon this rocke I will build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not preuaile against it: and the ground of our aſſurance thereof, is added verſ. 19. I will giue thee the keyes of the kingdome. This maketh the Church preuaile againſt the gates of hell, becauſe it openeth & ſhutteth heauen. Secondly, hereby the word and Sacraments are preſerued from pollution and prophanation, the ſoules of men pulled out of the ſnares of the Diuell, and Gods kingdome ſet open vnto them: which being taken away, there will be no difference left betweene the kingdome of God and the kingdome of the Diuell. Which power of the keyes in opening and ſhutting heauen by the miniſterie of the word, ſeeing wee haue eſtabliſhed by the lawes of the land, we haue the ſtate of a true Church, and therefore no man can in good conſcience ſeparate from vs as no Church and people of God: indeed if it had not the power to open heauen vnto men, it were time to ſeparate from it.

3. The Aduerſaries of this ground, are firſt the ignorant people, who popiſhly thinke that this power is onely giuen to Peter, whoſe office now is to open and ſhut heauen. But this power was giuen to all the Apoſtles as well as Peter, and in them to al Miniſters, Churches and Congregations: yea, and it is not exerciſed in heauen but in earth. Secondly, all Atheiſts and Epicures that contemne and skorne the Word, Sacraments, and all holy things, yea euen the power of the Church it ſelfe. Thirdly, all Papiſts and the Romiſh religion; who aboliſh all binding and looſing in the publike Miniſterie, and haue brought al to a priuate ſhrift, and abſolution, which in truth is nothing elſe but a racke and a gibbet to the conſcience: for firſt, men muſt ſeeke for it at the hands of the Prieſt: ſecondly, they muſt confeſſe all their ſinnes to the Prieſt: thirdly, they muſt make ſatisfaction to the iuſtice of God, euen ſuch as the Prieſt ſhall enioyne them. But all this is directly contrary to ỹ word: for firſt, Miniſters muſt offer pardon of ſin before it bee ſought for. Secondly, in Chriſt pardon is offered freely, wee neede no ſatisfaction of our owne. Thirdly, they impoſe a heauier yoke, than euer Chriſt or his Apoſtles did vpon men, when they enioyne them to an enumeration of all their ſinnes, before they can be pardoned: the depth of which policie hath been founded. Secondly, that Religion hath turned this power Eccleſiaſticall to a Ciuill power, whereby they take vpon them to excommunicate Kings & Emperours, not only out of the Church, but alſo out of their kingdomes and Empires, whom (they ſay) they may ſet vp and depoſe at their pleaſure, as hauing power to wreſt the Scepter out of the hands of whatſoeuer Monarch ſhall not ſtoope vnder their Popes authoritie. Theſe bee the maine enemies of this ground, againſt whom we muſt for euer contend.

In ſtead of the two keyes, Poperie hath deuiſed the picklock of Shrift.

That in nothing the Pope ſhuld be vnlike the diuell, he ſaith with him, All theſe are mine, and I giue them to whom I will.

The 19. ground of faith is: There is, hath been, and euer ſhall be a Church, out of which is no ſaluation. This is an Article of our faith, and a maine ground of religion: for if there be not euer a Church of God, Chriſt is ſometime no Redeemer, no King, becauſe there ſhould be no people redeemed, nor ſubiects to the rule of his word and ſpirit. Of which conſider two things: firſt, what this Church is: ſecondly, who be the aduerſaries of this ground. For the firſt: The Church is a companie of men, choſen to ſaluation, called, vnited to Chriſt, and admitted into euerlaſting fellowſhip with him. See Hebr. 12. 23. and 1. Pet. 2. 9. Compare theſe two places, and this diſcription wil eaſily bee gathered. The properties of this Church are theſe ſixe which follow. Firſt, being the Spouſe of Chriſt, ſhe is one onely indeed, although diſtinguiſhed in regard of time, as the Church of the old Teſtament and of the new. Secondly of place, as of England, Scotland, &c. Thirdly of condition, as the Militant and triumphant: all theſe make but one bodie of Chriſt. Secondly, it is inuiſible, not to bee ſeene but beleeued: for election, vocation, redemption, can onely be beleeued; yet ſome parts of it are viſible, as in the right vſe of the Word and Sacraments appeareth. Thirdly, to this aſſemblie and no other belong all the promiſes of this life, and the life to come, eſpecially forgiuenes of ſins and life euerlaſting. Fourthly, it conſiſteth onely of liuing members, quickened by the ſpirit of Chriſt, not of any hypocrites or wicked perſons. Fiftly, no member of it can be ſeuered or cut off frō Chriſt, but abide in him and with him for euer. Sixtly, it is the ground & pillar of truth; that is, the doctrine of true religion is alwaies ſafely kept and maintained in it.

19. Ground

Sixe properties of the church.

Obiect. The Churches in earth are true

Churches,

Churches, and yet in these are many hypocrites and Apostataes, who fall from their profession. And therefore all are not liuing members. Answ. In visible Churches are two sortes of men: Iust men, and hypocrites; who although they bee within the Church, yet the Church is not so called of them, but in regard of them onely who are truly ioyned vnto Christ, who are the better part, although not the greater: Euen as a heape of wheate and chaffe together is called an heape of wheate, or a Corne heape, of the better part.

Aduersaries. Aduersaries hereof are Papists, who frame not the Church by these true properties, but by other deceitfull markes, as succession, multitude, antiquitie, and consent: for when ỹ Church first began there could be none of those, at least not the three former, and yet was there a true Church. Secondly, all these agree to Heretikes, as among the Iewes what was more challenged than these? and yet Christ saith, they were blind leaders of the blinde. But the true marke is the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles truly taught and beleeued. A note of Christs sheep is the hearing of his voice, Ioh. 10.27. And, Ye are in the Father and the Sonne, if ye abide in the Word which yee haue heard from the beginning, 1. Ioh. 2. 24. See Ephes. 2.20.

Papists here take their marks amisse.

20. Ground The 20. ground is: That there shall be a resurrection of the dead in the end of the world. This was one of the sixe grounds of Catechisme in the daies of the Apostles, Heb. 6.2. Hymeneus and Philetus destroyed the faith of certaine, in teaching that the Resurrection was past alreadie.

Aduersaries. Aduersaries hereof, are the Familie of loue, who hold that there is no Resurrection but only in this life.

21. Ground The last ground of doctrine is: There shall be a generall iudgement of all flesh. It is one of the grounds, Heb. 6.2. In which iudgement euery mans workes shall be tried, and euery man accordingly shall receiue sentence of life or death eternall.

Aduersaries. The aduersaries hereof, are first the Atheist, who denieth God himselfe, and consequently his iudgement. Secondly the drowsie Protestants, who in iudgement denie not the last iudgement, but yet plainly shew in their liues that they are not perswaded of it, for then would they make more conscience of sin, and of pleasing God in all things. These are the maine grounds of beleefe, vnto which all other may be reduced. Now follow the grounds of obedience and practise.

The first ground of practise is, Luke 13.3. Except ye repent ye shall perish. In which two things are to bee obserued. First the dutie required, that is, Repentance, the necessitie of which appeareth, in that without it men perish. Secondly the aduersaries. Concerning repentance two things must be taught: first, what it is: secondly, what is the vse of it. For the first; Repentance (as Paul describeth it) is a conuersion whereby a sinner turneth himselfe vnto God, and bringeth foorth fruites worthie amendement of life. There be two kindes of conuersion of a sinner: first, that whereby God turneth man. Secondly, that whereby a man being turned by God, turneth himselfe by grace: the former is not repentance properly, but the latter. Iere. 31.18. Conuert thou me, and I shall bee conuerted. Surely after that I conuerted I repented. Quest. In what part is this conuersion made? Ans. It beginneth in the minde, but it is of the whole man, the minde laying off all purpose of sinning, the conscience calling backe from sinne, the will not seeking to fulfill the lusts of it; but the whole man endeuouring to please God thorough his whole conuersation: further, repentance is attended with diuers fruites, worthie newnes of life. These are the duties of the Morall law, performed in faith and truth without hypocrisie: which because they proceede from the same beginning, are approoued of God as repentance is. The second point in this dutie is, the vse of repentance, and that is not to be a cause of saluation, but only a way, wherein men must walke to life euerlasting. We are slandered by the Popish church, while they exclaime that our doctrine requireth nothing but faith to be saued by, and so wee become enemies to all good workes. But this is not our doctrine, for we hold the workes of repentance to be the way of saluation. Indeed when we speak of the instrument wherby we lay hold vpon Christ, that we say is faith onely, not hope, loue, or any workes: but when wee speake of a way to life, then faith is not alone, but repentance is required, hope, the feare of God

1. Ground.

Act. 26, 20.

God, and euery good worke. So women are ſaid to be ſaued thorough bearing of children, 1.Tim.2.15. namely, as a way wherein they practiſe their faith and obedience. Thus Abrahams faith and workes went together, Iam.2.22.

Secondly: The Aduerſaries of this ground, are firſt profeſſors of Religion, who content themſelues with a fained repentance: for moſt men being pricked and ſtung with the ſenſe of their ſinnes, for a while will hold downe their heads like a bulruſh, breake off their companie, come to Church, pray, heare the word, and performe other duties: but when the remorſe is once paſt, they returne to their former courſe of licentiouſnes, and this is thought a ſufficient repentance; whereas it is but ceremoniall, and a fig leafe whereby men ſeeke to couer themſelues: for true repentance changeth the minde, will, affections, conſcience, yea all the actions of life.

Secondly, the Romiſh Church, which for many hundred yeeres hath ouerturned this doctrine: as firſt in generall aboue theſe 500. yeeres, penance and publike confeſſion of perſons excommunicated, hath bin by them taken and deemed to be repentance it ſelfe; any other hath been ſcarſe taught or knowne in theſe partes of the world. Secondlie, repentance is by them turned into a iudiciall proceeding and ſentence of the court, wherein ỹ Miniſter muſt be iudge, the ſinner muſt come vnder confeſſion; the Miniſter muſt paſſe ſentence, and the other muſt make ſatisfaction accordingly; which is an high abuſe of this doctrine. Thirdly, they hold the workes of Contrition, Confeſſion, and Satisfaction, to merit, yea and to conferre pardon of ſinne, and ſo aboliſh the merit and ſatisfaction of Chriſt. Secondly, the world hath bin by that Church deceiued in diuers particulars concerning this doctrine; as namely, firſt it hath bin taught that repentance, for the originall of it, is partly from nature, partly from grace; partly from God, partly from our ſelues: which is a falſe foundation, ioyning light with darkeneſſe, it being wholy from grace. Secondly, remorſe of conſcience (which the very diuels may haue) is made a parte of repentance; Saul himſelfe, nay Iudas wanted not this contrition, which is no grace, but a preparation vnto it. Thirdly, they make Auricular Confeſſion, whereby euery man is bound to confeſſe all and euery one of his ſins, with their circumſtances in the Prieſts eare, ſo neceſſarilie vnto repentance, as without which he cannot haue pardon; which is a very gibbet to the conſcience. Fourthly, they turne their Canonicall ſatisfaction into ſatisfaction of Gods iuſtice for ſinne, wherein blaſphemouſly they ouerthrow the moſt perfect ſatisfaction of the Sonne of God. We are therfore to praiſe God who hath taken from our neckes this yoke of the Roman Church, which neither wee nor our fathers were able to beare.

A patterne of Popiſh penitence.

The ſecond ground of practiſe is concerning the exerciſe of repentance, Luk. 9.23. If any man wil come after me, let him deny himſelfe, and take vp his croſſe and follow me. In which ground we will conſider three thinges: firſt the meaning, ſecondly the moment, thirdly the aduerſaries againſt whom wee muſt contend. For the meaning; If any man wil follow me] that is, will bee my Diſciple, (for Diſciples vſed to follow their Maiſters and teachers) hee muſt learne three duties: Firſt, Let him denie himſelfe: Secondlie, take vp his croſſe: Thirdlie, follow mee: To the deniall of our ſelues three things are required: Firſt, we muſt for the magnifying of the grace of God abaſe our ſelues euen to nothing. An example whereof wee haue in Paul, 1.Cor.3.7. I I haue planted, Apollo hath watred: but neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watreth, but God that giueth increaſe: If the planter bee nothing, much leſſe the planted. We are not able as of our ſelues to think a good thought. And againe, All our ſufficiencie is of God. Secondly, wee muſt renounce our owne reaſon and will, and bring them vnder ſubiection to the will of God, wee muſt not ſtriue to haue willes of our owne, but let Chriſts will be ſufficient for vs, his wiſedome muſt be our reaſon. Thirdly, wee muſt eſteeme all things as dung for Chriſt, and preſerue within vs a readines to leaue and forſake friends, riches, honours, yea our libertie and life it ſelfe (if need be) for his ſake and a good conſcience.

2. Ground.

The ſecond dutie is, To take vp our croſſe daily: vnto which two things are required: firſt, euery member of the Church muſt make reckoning of, and looke for daily croſſes, priuate and particular ticular in his calling and in his profession. Secondly, when the crosse commeth it must be taken vp cheerfully, and borne with reioycing: Matth.5.12. Reioyce and be glad, namely euen when men reuile and persecute you: Rom.5.3. Iustified persons are able to reioyce in tribulations; according to the exhortation, Iam.1.2. Count it an exceeding ioy. An example of the Saints, Hebr.10.34. who suffred with ioy the spoyling of their goods.

The third dutie of a Disciple is: after the two former to follow Christ. For when Christ saith, And follow me, it is as though he had said: I goe before bearing my crosse, let my Disciples follow me step by step in bearing of this crosse. This containeth in it the maine duties of Christian religion: to the performing of which two things are to be done: first, wee must beare the crosse in obedience, as Christ did, who most willingly abased himselfe to the death, euen the death of the crosse, in obedience to his Fathers will. Qu. But wherein stood this obedience of Christ? Ans. In the practise of three speciall vertues: first, Meekenes, he opened not his mouth, hee reuiled not being reuiled, reuenged not when hee might. Secondly, Patience, he grudged not to suffer those bitter torments for his very enemies. Thirdly, Loue, he prayed for those that pierced him, and shed his heart blood: in all which it is our part to imitate him. Secondly, wee must be conformable vnto Christ being our head; which conformitie consisteth in crucifying our body of corruption, euen as he was crucified vpon his crosse. We must arme our selues with Peters exhortation, 1.Pet.4.1. to suffer in the flesh, as Christ suffered in the flesh. Which whosoeuer doth, he ceaseth from sinne: he liueth not henceforth after the lusts of men, but after the will of God, vers.2. The learning of this dutie helpeth forward our obedience vnder the crosse, which many cannot attaine vnto (who in the time of their peace are in some sort obedient) because they beare not about in their bodies the dyings of Christ daily. 2.Cor.4.

The second point. The moment and weight of this ground, appeareth Luk.9 24. He that will saue his life, shall lose it, that is, that will not take vp his crosse to follow Christ, shall neuer be saued. Againe, Baptisme is a maine ground, Heb. 6.1. namely, as it is ioyned with inward baptisme, for els outward baptisme may be wanting, so it be without contempt; but both together are a maine ground, especially in regard of that stipulation we make, and that profession which wee receiue vpon vs thereby, of forsaking euen our selues and following of Christ, without which can bee no saluation: which being the matter and substance of this ground, sheweth euidently the importance of it.

The third point. Aduersaries of this ground are, first among our selues, such as are content to make Christ a Sauiour and Redeemer, but not a patterne and example of imitation in his vertues: but Christ will not be made a packhorse only to beare sinnes, seeing hee hath propounded himselfe a president to be followed of those who looke for saluation by his sufferings; they must first bee his Disciples, before he be their Redeemer. Secondly, a more wicked enemie withstanding this doctrine is the Church of Rome. In exalting nature, and extenuating the grace of God; as first, holding that all sinnes deserue not not death, but may bee done away with a little knocking on the breast, or such light sorrow. Secondly, that by nature a man hath free will in his conuersion, and being helped by the holy Ghost, can moue himselfe vnto saluation. Thirdly, that after iustification there is nothing in a man that God can hate. Fourthly, that a man may merit life, and performe workes of satisfaction to God; which diuellish doctrines what else doe they but make the heart swell with pride, so as it can neuer be brought to the deniall of it selfe.

Popish doctrine sufferreth not a man to set one foote forward towards Christ, because it resisteth deniall of a mans selfe.

The third ground is taken from the Morall law: Thou shalt haue no other God before my face. The scope and meaning of which law is to direct vs in chusing the true God onely to bee our God; which is done, first, when we know and acknowledge him as hee hath reuealed himselfe in his word: secondly, when wee giue our hearts vnto him, according to that precept; My sonne giue me thy heart. Now the heart is giuen to God when he is loued and feared aboue all, when he is alone trusted in, relied on in danger, when we ascribe all power vnto him, beleeue in him, subiect our selues vnto him in our very conscience; for whatsoeuer hath these is become our God. Secondly, that this is a ground

3. Ground.

cannot

cannot bee doubted: for whosoeuer taketh not the true God for his God, is out of all way to saluation, seeing there is no couenant betweene God and him, and being out of the couenant, can haue no part nor inheritance in Gods kingdome.

No marueile if that religion teach to denie honour and alleageance due to our earthly Gods.

Thirdly, Aduersaries of this ground are, first the Romish doctrine, which committeth high treason against God, in giuing his honour to other things: as to Saints and dead men, whom they make Gods, by teaching inuocation to bee due vnto them, and so attributing an infinite power, wisedome, or presence vnto them, which are Gods proprieties. Secondly, in teaching that men can merit, they make them Gods. For if Christ himselfe had bin a meere man, he could not haue merited. Thirdly, in ascribing to dead creatures the vertue of the holie Ghost; as to water, the power of sanctification, driuing away diuels, and washing away sinnes. Fourthly, in setting vp the woodden Crosse for a God, which must be worshipped with the same worship and affection as God himselfe is. The Virgin Mary they make a Goddesse, and Queen of heauen, whom they pray to commaund her sonne. And lastly, the Pope, to whom they giue power to pardon sinne properly, and to make lawes to binde conscience, as properly as Gods lawes doe.

The second aduersarie is the common Protestant, who carrieth an outward profession of Christ, but in his heart setteth vp many Gods, as the belly, wealth, pleasure, yea the Diuell is the god of many men, as Phil.3.19. 2.Cor.4.4: others set all their hearts and studie for the accomplishment of their sinnes; now sin hauing the hold in their hearts, is become their God. Yea and it is a common practise of many Protestants in their crosses to put off their confidence in God, and betake themselues to cunning men and Southsayers; so leauing the liuing God, and trust for their helpe in the diuell himselfe.

4. Ground. The fourth ground of practise concerneth the worship of God: Exod.20.5. Thou shalt not make to thy selfe any grauen image, &c. The first point. The meaning: This Commandement hath two parts: the former forbidding the making of Images: the latter, the worshipping of them. The former in these words: Thou shalt not make vnto thy selfe &c. In which is not simply forbidden the making of Images, as if they bee for politicall or historicall vse, but the making of them in way of religion or conscience, to put vs in remembrance of God, or to worship God in, by, or at the same. The latter in these words: Thou shalt not bow downe &c. That is, thou shalt not so much as bow downe thy bodie before such an Image made by others, neither to worship it, nor the true God in it: which exposition because it is oppugned by a great part of the world, I will prooue by some reasons: First, that which was the sinne of the Israelites in making Images, is here forbidden: but their common sinne in the vse of Images, was to make them representations of the true God, and to worship the true God in them, as appeareth Exod.32.4.5. The Israelites hauing made a golden Calfe, said: These be thy Gods, O Israel, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: that is, this is a representatiō of that God who brought thee out of Egypt: for they should haue been worse then mad men, if they had called that Calfe which was but one day old, that God which brought them many daies before out of Egypt: besides that, Images true or false are vsually called by the name of Gods, as being so in the reputation of the worshippers. Further, Aaron said, To morrow shall be the holy day of the Lord: signifying that the Calfe was made to represent the true God, whom in the Calfe they were to worship. Againe, Iudg.17.3. Michaes mother sheweth that her intent was to worship God in the Image, when shee saith, that shee had dedicated eleuen hundred shekels of siluer to the Lord, to make a grauen and molten Image; and hauing made the Image, she saith, Now will the Lord blesse me: though his fact was grosse Idolatrie, yet he sheweth that he worshipped the Lord in the Image, whose blessing he boasted of. Esai.40.18 To whom will yee liken God? whence it is plaine, they made Images of the true God to worship him in. Iudg.2.11. The Israelites were sore afflicted for seruing Baal and Ashtaroth, that is, Idols fetched from the Heathen: but herein their intent was to worship the true God in them, as appeareth Hose 2.16. Thou shalt call me no more Baali, but Ishi. Yea the very Heathen themselues worshipped the true God in their Images, Rom.1.23. They turned the glorie of the true God into the similitude of a corruptible creature; much more then the Israelites who took their Idolatrie from them: and therefore in the second Commandement is forbidden the making of Images of the true God, and not of false onely, as the Papists would falsely teach vs. The second reason is in Deut.4.15.16. where Moses making a Commentarie vpō this cōmaneement, and forbidding to make any representation of any figure, addeth this reason: Ye saw no image in the day that the Lord spake out of Horeb: and therefore Moses vnderstood the Commandement as we doe, namely not to make any Image of the true God. The third reason is in the words, Thou shalt not make the image of any thing that is in heauen aboue, &c. Seeing then that God is in heauen aboue, as also the Saints and Angels, wee must make no Image to represent them: for euen Images of the true God are Idols, hated of God, and condemned in the Scriptures: so the golden Calfe is called an Idoll, Act.7.41.

The second point is the weight of this ground standing herein, that whosoeuer ouerthroweth this ground, ouerturneth this religion. For first, whosoeuer resembleth God in any Image, and worshippeth him therein, he denieth the true God, Rom.1.25. The wisest of the Heathē worshipping God in their Images, turned the truth of God into a lie: so whatsoeuer mē may beleeue of worshipping ý true God in an Image, the truth is, it will proue no better than a lie vnto them. The Apostle affirmeth, that whatsoeuer the Gentiles sacrificed to Idols, they sacrificed it vnto Diuels, and not vnto God. Some may aske, how can this be, seeing their intent was to sacrifice vnto God? I answere, that by offering to an Image, they denied God, and so not seruing him, they became sacrificers to the Diuels: for whosoeuer conceiueth of God otherwise than he will be conceiued of, conceiue an Idoll, and not God; and he that wil remember him in things wherein he will not be remembred, forgetteth him, as the Israelites, Psal.106.21. Secondly, professed Idolatrie maketh a separation betweene God and his people, as adulterie doth betweene man and wife. For as a wife that seeketh to strangers, denieth her proper husband; so the Church, which is the spouse of God, going a whoring after Images and strange Gods, denieth God her husband, and procureth the Bill of diuorce: see Hose 2. and Ierem.3.8.

1 Cor.10. 20

Thirdly, the aduersaries of this ground are, the professed Papists: first, in allowing making of Images for Religions sake; as the Image of Christ crucified, which they call the Crucifixe; and of Christ glorified, which they call Agnus Dei: also Images of the Virgin Mary, and other Saints; yea cursing and condemning all those that forbid the making of them, & so curse euen the Lord himselfe: yea and most blasphemously in former times they were wont to make Images of the Trinitie, picturing the Father like an old man, the Sonne like a childe, the holie Ghost like a Doue, and yet much more blasphemously than that, otherwise: but they are now ashamed of such wicked pictures. Secondly, they maintaine, yea and commaund the worship of Christ in an Image, and condemne them who deny the worshipping of Images, whether they be Images of God, or of Saints, Angels, and dead men. Thirdly, they teach that a man is to worship the Crucifixe religiously, yea with the same worship and deuotion with which Christ is worshipped, wherewith also they worship their breaden God.

If the Pope had been with Moses in the mount, he would haue demurred vpon the admittance of the second commandement.

In former times their consciences secretly checking them of their Idolatries, caused them to leaue out the whole second Commandement, and diuide the last into two, to fill vp the number: but of later daies, seeing they are constrained to retaine the Commaundement, they haue found out some shift, which we will examine. First, they say, there is a difference betweene an Idoll and an Image, as the one is a Greeke word, the other a Latin: the former is a representation of the true God, the latter of false Gods. Ans. The difference is but in the word, for indeed they be both one, Acts 7.41. The Calfe was an Image and an Idoll too. Ob. They make difference also of worship, which they say is of two sorts: the first is Latreia, this is a worship and reuerence due to God onely: the second is Dulia, and this is a seruice due vnto Saints, to ý Crucifixe, &c. Ans. But besides that ý Scripture make these both one, they herein bewray their folly, lie, in that if either bé greater, it is Dulia, which is a kind of ſeruice moſt ſubmiſſe, and that properly which vaſſals were wont to yeeld their Lords who had taken them in warre, and yet this muſt be giuen to Saints, and the wooden Croſſe, Anſwere. the Croſſe, but Chriſt in it. Anſ. No intention of man can inſtitute a true worſhip of God, without warrant from God himſelfe, who neuer authorized men to Obiect. 4. worſhip him in Images. Ob. 4. Engliſhmen kneele downe to the Chaire of Eſtate, the King not being in preſence, and therefore wee may much more to Anſwere. Saints and Angels. Anſ. Firſt, this is a ciuill and politique worſhip, teſtifying the ſubiects alleageance: but kneeling to Saints is religious. Secondly, the King appointeth his Chaire of Eſtate to be a ſigne of his preſence, and willeth it; but no Papiſt can proue that euer Chriſt appointed a Crucifixe to bee a ſigne of his preſence: or that God willeth their Images to bee ſignes of his preſence. Thirdly, the Chaire of Eſtate is a ſigne only in the Kings abſence; for himſelfe being preſent, the ciuill worſhip is performed to himſelfe: but Chriſt is neuer abſent from his Church, and yet in his preſence they ſet vp an Image to remember him by. Thus that Church being an open Idolater muſt not bee ioyned with; for ſhe is not ioyned to Chriſt any longer, but is a profeſſed harlot; neither is it ſo indifferēt (as ſome think) to finde ſaluation there as well as by our Religion.

5. Ground. The fifth ground is, Matth. 4. 10. Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerue. That this is a chiefe ground needes no proofe; and therefore wee will conſider firſt the meaning, ſecondly the aduerſaries againſt whom wee muſt contend. To know the meaning, the words going before will affoord vs ſome direction; wherein Satan hauing moued Chriſt to fall downe and worſhip him with bodily worſhip only, and requiring not the maine worſhip due to God, but a little bowing of the bodie; betokening that he was the diſpoſer of the kingdomes of the world: this Chriſt denieth him with this reaſon ratified by Scripture, that it is a worſhip and ſeruice proper to God, and to bee tendred to him onely. Secondly, the words themſelues are to bee weighed: By [worſhip] is properly ſignified bodily worſhip in a bodily geſture: the meaning then is, thou ſhalt with thy bodie adore the Lord, for ſo it is ſutable to Satans demaund. The word [ſerue] ſignifieth all worſhip due to God both inward and outward. [Only] This word appertaineth to both the members, and ſo to the whole ſentence; for elſe there ſhould bee no direct deniall of Satans temptation, requiring onely the former and not the latter. But ſome will ſay, we Obiect. may ſerue men lawfully, how then is ſeruice proper to God only? There be two Anſwere. kindes of worſhip; religious, and ciuill. Religious, is an action or actions of reuerence and ſubiection, whereby a man doth acknowledge the Godhead it ſelf, or the properties thereof, either in God himſelfe truly, or in the creature falſely. Theſe properties of God are, firſt, to bee an abſolute Lord. Secondly, to bee Almightie. Thirdly, to be preſent in al places at all times. Fourthly, to heare all men in all places at all times. Fiftly, to know all things paſt, preſent, and to come, yea and the hearts of men. Sixtly, to be giuer of all good things, and the preuenter of all euill. Now, any action of reuerence in ſignification of any of theſe properties is a religious worſhip; the very intent of the minde in religious worſhip being, to aſcribe either Godhead or diuine properties to the thing worſhipped. Ciuill or politique worſhip is, when men performe actions of reuerence and ſubiection to others, as acknowledging them to bee preferred aboue themſelues in gifts or authoritie. Thus bowing of the bodie is ſometime religious, when it is done to God, in acknowledging his properties; and ſometime ciuil, performed to a man in reſpect of his eminency in gifts or gouernment. But theſe words of Chriſt are meant only of the former, and not of the latter, which belongs vnto man. This ground thus truly conceiued, affoordeth vs theſe two maine points of Religion: firſt, that God is to be worſhipped with religious worſhip. Secondly, that all religious worſhip is proper to God, and due to him alone. Now religious worſhip is two-fold: firſt, inward, ſtanding in two things; faith and inward obedience. Secondly, outward, when this inward worſhip is outwardly teſtified, conſiſting of three principall parts:

parts: first, in preaching, hearing, and reading the word: secondly, in receiuing the two Sacraments: thirdly, in prayer and thanksgiuing publike and priuate.

Aduersaries. Catholiks, the Catholike deprauers of Gods worship.

The Aduersaries hereof are the Papists, who pretend the Catholike Religion, but indeed ouerthrow it, in depraying the outward worshippe of God, wherein the inward is testified. The first part whereof standing in the preaching, hearing, and reading of the word, they deprave: first, by mingling the pure word of God with mans word and writings; and authorising bookes Apocryphall as Canonicall Scripture. Secondly, by making vnwritten Traditions Apostolicall and Ecclesiasticall (as they say) of equall authoritie with the Scripture. Thirdly, in that they teach in their Catechismes, that the worship of God doth stand in obeying the Commandements of the Church, as wel as the Commandements of God themselues, and are necessarily to be practised vnto saluation, & so they worship God in vain, Mat. 15.9. Fourthly, in that they allow no Bible to be authenticall, but onely the Latin translation of Ieronie, renouncing both the Hebrew and Greeke fountaines: and yet learned Papists confesse that their Latin text is corrupted, and that therefore the true sense is to bee fetched from the Popes determination, and from Councels, and no other sense to be admitted. Fifthly, in that they make Images Lay mens bookes and teachers; and debarre the people of the Scriptures publikely and priuately in the vulgar tongue, and suffer it only to be read by them and vnto them in the Latin tongue vnknowne vnto them.

The second part of outward worship standing in administration of Sacraments, they likewise corrupt and abolish: for howsoeuer Baptisme is preserued for the substance of it in the Romish Church, which (as a lanterne carrieth the light) it retaineth not for it owne, but for the hidden Churches sake within it; yet haue they abolished the Lords Supper for the substance of it: first, of a Sacrament they haue made it a reall sacrifice. Secondly, they haue turned the Communion into a priuate Masse, where the Priest alone receiueth all, and the people nothing. Thirdly, although in a Sacrament there must bee a distinction between the signe and the thing signified, yet they make none, but ouerthrow all such signification of the signes by their transubstanciation. Fourthly, they haue turned the bodie of Christ into a breaden God; which they carrie about in boxes and worship; which is as vilde an idolatrie as euer was among the Heathen, nor inferiour to the worshipping of Cats and Buls as gods among the Egyptians. Fifthly, they haue added to Christs Institution fiue Sacraments, viz. Penance, Confirmation, Orders, Matrimonie, and annoynting. But indeede Baptisme is a Sacrament of Penance: the Lords Supper of Confirmation: and further are they deceiued in the other.

The third part of outward worship concerneth Prayer and thanksgiuing: this they ouerthrow likewise: first, they mocke God in praying in an vnknowne tongue, not knowing what they aske, much lesse seriously addressing themselues vnto the dutie; which euen earthly Kings would disdaine. Secondly, in prayer must bee brought sense of want and contrition of heart, this they cannot bring who are taught that they merit by prayer. Thirdly, prayer must be made in particular faith, but this they make presumption. Fourthly, they allow praying to creatures, & the mediation of Saints, and so denie the very substance of prayer, which is to make request to God only in the alone mediation of Christ.

The second maine point of Religion out of this ground is this; That religious worship is due to God alone: for wee may not giue apparance of religious worship to creatures. Cornelius is reproued for giuing to Peter excesse euen of ciuill worship, Acts 10.25. for he knew Peter to bee a man and not God; and so seemed to mingle a kinde of religious worship with ciuill. This is a maine ground also, which whosoeuer denieth he holdeth not the head Christ, Col. 2.18.19.

Aduersaries. Popish prayers, fitter to be preferred to dead men than the liuing God.

The Aduersaries of this ground also are the professed Papists, who worship Saints and Angels, not onely by kneeling before them, but praying also vnto them; which cannot be denied to bee a religious worship, seeing it attributeth vnto them to heare the prayers of all men at all times, in all places, yea and to know the hearts of men vpon earth. Secondly, they maintaine religious worship of Images, they goe on pilgrimage vnto them, offer Incense, creepe vnto them, and kneele before them. Yea, they worship the Crucifixe with the same worshippe whereby they would adore Christ, if hee were liuing vpon earth, as also the reliques of Saints. Out of all which wee see what to thinke of that Church which onely hath the name of a Church, she holdeth not the head Christ, seeing for so many hundred yeeres she hath displaied her fornication, in worshipping Saints, Angels, Images, and the Virgin Mary, so as her Bill of diuorcement is iustly giuen her, 2. Thess. 2. 10. Reuel. 13. 8. from whom we must separate, if we would not partake with her in her plagues.

6. Ground. The sixth ground of practise is Esai. 8. 13. Sanctifie the Lord of hostes: which words contain the substance of the third Commaundement: in which consider first the meaning, secondly the weight, thirdly the Aduersaries. For the meaning: A thing is said to bee sanctified two waies; either when it is made holy; or when it is acknowledged to bee holie. Now this latter must bee heere vnderstood, for Gods name cannot be made holie, which is holinesse it selfe, and the first cause of all holinesse; but it is sanctified of vs when wee acknowledge it holie: and this our sanctification of God either respecteth God himselfe, or the gifts of God. Our sanctification of God himselfe (the thing intended in this ground) is done two waies: first, when in our mind we acknowledge and praise him in his attributes, of wisedome, mercie, louing kindnes, power, prouidence, and such like. 1. Pet. 3. 15. Sanctifie the Lord God in your hearts; that is, acknowledge him in his wisedome, power, and other his attributes: Look as good subiects speaking of, and mentioning their Prince, will put off their hats in reuerent opinion of him; so we religiously should thinke and speake of these. Iob. 1. 5. Iob fearing only and but suspecting, that his sonnes in their feastings had dishonoured this name of God, sanctified them. When Hezekiah heard ỹ blasphemies of Rabshakeh against God, he humbled himself, rent his cloathes and put on sackcloath, 2. King. 19. 1. Yea wicked Ahab hauing heard (though falsely) that Naboth had blasphemed God, he rent his cloathes and proclaimed a fast: which sheweth (whatsoeuer his fact was) the vse and manner of holy men in his time, when Gods name was dishonoured and blasphemed. Secondly, wee sanctifie God himselfe, when wee with reuerence acknowledge his titles, as God, Lord, Iehouah, Father, Christ, Iesus, Holy Ghost; and not without religious and obedient affection speaking or thinking of them. Our sanctification of Gods gifts, which are many, as the Word preached, Prayer, Sacraments, Meate, Drinke, and all things serving for the good of bodie or soule, is not by giuing or adding any holines vnto them, which in themselues are all holie; but when we acknowledge them holie, by preparing our selues to a holie vse of them, and vse them accordingly with good conscience: for euery creature of God hath a double vse: first, a lawfull vse when God permits a general vse of his creatures, thus all may vse meate, drinke, apparell, &c. Secondly, a holy vse, when a creature in his lawfull vse is vsed in a holy manner, for this includeth the former, though that may be without this. For example, all the Iewes kept the Passeouer lawfully, but onely those celebrated it holily, who prepared themselues according to the commandement: which holy vse is obtained by the word and prayer, 1. Tim. 4. The word directeth vs to vse these gifts of God in obedience; and prayer obtaineth grace to vse them according to the word: vnto which holy vse of Gods creatures we are to be mooued by these reasons: first, we must distinguish our selues from the bruite beasts; the swine in the forrest eateth vp the masse, but looketh not vp to heauen, no not to the tree whence it falleth. Secondly, because we haue lost our title to all the creatures in Adam, which onely is in this vse restored. Thirdly, because they are the gifts of God, we must thus acknowledge them to be his, and in him learne to vse them. Fourthly, that wee may auoide the common abuse of them, whereby hee is prouoked to displeasure.

The second point is the weight of this ground: which may appeare in the contarie; seeing the blasphemer doth what hee can to ouerthrow the Godhead it selfe; whence euery such one is called by such a name as signifieth a piercer of God, or one that thrusteth God thorough: and therefore the sanctification of God is a ground of moment. Secondly, the first petition of the Lords Prayer Leuit. 24. 14. 16.

is,

is, sanctified be thy name: wherein wee are taught to preferre and pray for the hallowing of Gods name before our own saluation. Thirdly, the scope of the third Commandement is the same, which whosoeuer obserueth not, reuerseth both the former. And lastly, the Lord is so iealous of his glorie, that he will bee sanctified of all them that come neere him, else hee will sanctifie himselfe in their confusion, Leuit. 10. 3.

Aduersaries.

Thirdly: The Aduersaries of this ground are, first, though (by Gods mercie) the religion of the Church of England is no aduersary vnto it, yet the liues of the most fight against it: for although when we mention earthly Princes wee can vse all reuerence, yet Gods name is most fearfully abused, and tossed in wicked mens mouthes by oathes and cursed speakings; besides that, many abuse the same to Charmes, and Spels in their sorceries, and men thinke all is well, because herein they vse good words: but the truth is, the better the words be, the greater is the sinne; yea it is noted to be a signe of a low and base spirit not to sweare and blaspheme vpon any occasion: many souldiers thinke they cannot be couragious enough, vnlesse they pierce God & rent Christ by detestable oathes, such as would cause wicked Ahab himselfe to rend his cloathes at the hearing.

Secondly, the great aduersarie is the Papist, and that diuers waies: first, in that they teach that the very doing of some worke is a sanctification of God; as the outward worke of Baptisme, yea in it the very action of the Minister is a worship of God, and doth confer grace, ex opere operato; this was their old doctrine, which now they colour with this addition: If the partie be well and rightly disposed: but besides the vse, yea the lawfull and common vse, there is by this ground required an holy vse of any thing to make it acceptable to God, or rightly profitable to the doer himselfe.

Popish hallowing of the creatures, dishonoureth the Creator.

Secondly, their hallowing of Water, Bels, Palmes, Ashes, Spettle, is a meere mockerie of God, seeing they haue neither word nor promise from God, that these creatures should thus be hallowed to preserue from euill, bodie or soule. Thirdly, they erre in the foundation of religion diuers waies; euery which such error is blasphemie. Fourthly, that religion oppugneth the sanctification of Gods name in the vse of a lawfull oath, teaching first that the Pope hath power to dispense with an oath. Secondly, that men may sweare by the Masse, and so doing make it a God. Thirdly, euen the learned among them with one consent hold, that a man may sweare ambiguously, euen when he knoweth the thing to be otherwise.

7. Ground.

The seuenth ground is, Galath. 5. 14. The whole law is fulfilled in this one word, Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. The meaning is not that we should loue our neighbour equally with our selues, and with no lesse affection, or degree of loue; but that with the same cheerefulnes, willingnes, and truth of heart that we perform duties of loue to our selues, ought wee also to reach them out vnto others. The weight of this ground appeareth, in that not onely Christ saith, It is like the great Commandement, but also in that it is the summe of the whole law: for the first table must be practised in the second, and the loue of God testified in loue to men.

Aduersaries. A fit principle for that religion, which wholy seeketh it selfe

The Aduersaries of this ground bee the Popish Church, who thus expound it: First loue thy self, and then thy neighbour; making the loue of our selues the foundation of the loue of others: but sometime wee may loue our neighbour aboue our selues; as Ionathan loued Dauid more than his own soule, and Christ loued his enemies more than his owne life. Secondly, it teacheth that a man must not loue particularly his particular enemie, nor salute him in particular, but generally, as if hee salute a whole companie together, his enemie being there.

8. Ground.

The eighth ground: Exod. 20. 12. Honour thy father and thy mother, &c. In the words two things are to be considered: first, an ordinance of God: secondly, the meanes to preserue it. The ordinance is, that all men must not be equall in degree, but there must bee orders of men, of whom some are to be in higher degree, as superiours; some in lower condition, as inferiours: the former are aboue others in regarde of power to command and to punish: the latter are in subiection vnder others, by whose discretion and will they are to be gouerned. This ordinance is described, Rom. 13. 1. Let euery soule be subiect to the superiour power: that is, be content to be vnder others which are aboue him in power: so here, some must bee as fathers, and mothers, some must bee subiected vnto them. The meanes to preserue this ordinance is, the yeelding of honour vnto whom it belongeth, which standeth in three things: first, in reuerence towards the persons of superiours. Secondly, in obedience to their iust commandements. Thirdly, in thankefulnes for their paines in gouerning: thus is that golden sentence to be expounded, Matth. 22. Giue vnto Cæsar the things that are Cæsars; that is, giue him reuerence, obedience, thankfulnes, according to that, Rom. 13. 7. Giue feare vnto whom feare belongeth, honour to whom honour, tribute to whom tribute.

The weight of this ground is plaine, because without it can be no practise of true religion: for first, by it stand the three things, the Familie, the Church, and Common-wealth; all which are maintained by gouernment, and subiection: wherefore the Lord set this Commandement the first of the second Table, as whereupon he would found all humane societies. Secondly, gouernours in any of these societies, are the keepers of both Tables, without whose helpe and authoritie Gods kingdome could haue no abiding on the earth.

Aduersaries.

Such is the carriage of the Romish Clergie, as they had need keepe the Ciuill Magistrate off them, and bee their owne iudges.

Aduersaries of this Commandement, are the Papists, who weaken the authoritie of the Magistrate, in exempting their Clergie from all Ciuill power of Magistracie in causes both iudiciall (that is, matters controuersall) and criminall, that is, matters of trespasse, although the Apostle saith, Let euery soule be subiect. Secondly, that Church hath set vp a power to bring into order and subiection all the Kings vpon earth, namely the power of the Pope, who challengeth to himselfe to ouerrule, yea and to depose at his pleasure Kings and Queenes, who in their dominions are aboue al and only vnder God. Thirdly, that religion lesseneth the power of parents: for in the Councel of Trent they establish, first, Mariages, and Contracts made by children without consent of parents. Secondly, Vowes also made by children vnder age and without consent of parents, are held lawful, and not to be broken.

9. Ground.

The ninth ground is, Micha. 6. 8. He hath shewed thee O man what is good, and what the Lord requireth of thee, surely to do iustly, to loue mercie, to humble thy selfe, and to walke with thy God. The meaning. Three vertues are here required: first, Iust dealing: secondly, Mercie: thirdly, Humilitie. Touching the first, wee are commanded to doe iustly: and this execution of iustice between man and man hath fiue substantiall parts: First, to giue honor to whom honor is due. Secondly, by thought word and deed to preserue the body and soule of our neighbour, that is, his life spirituall and temporall. Thirdly, his chastitie, which is the honor of bodie and soule in single life and Matrimonie. Fourthly, his worldly estate. Fiftly, his good name. This is the scope of all the Commandements of the second Table.

Now because the due execution of iustice must bee tempered with mercie, therefore is mercie required of man in the second place, which is a readinesse to relieue the miserie of the distressed. And thirdly, because iustice and mercie without godlinesse are but ciuil vertues, we are in the last place commaunded to walke in humilitie with our God, which containeth the summe of the first table, and standeth in three things: first, wee must acknowledge our sinnes: secondly, intreate for pardon: thirdly, purpose not to offend God any more, but endeuour to preuent sinne to come.

Concerning ỳ weight of this ground, it appeareth in Micha. 6. 7. where the Lord testifieth himselfe to be more delighted with the practise of loue and mercie, than with oblations of thousands of Rammes, and tenne thousand riuers of oyle: and elsewhere, I will haue mercie, and not sacrifice. Yea Titus 2. 12. This is made the end of the appearing of the grace of God, that we should liue soberly in regard of our selues, iustly in regard of others, and godly in regard of God. These vertues are so respected of God, that they are said to go immediatly before his face, Psal. 89. 14. and so necessarie among men, that without them no societie can be preserued.

The aduersaries hereof are, first, the liues of most men, who seeke their own things, and not to maintaine the liues, goods, name, chastitie of others: yea too many preferre their priuate gaine before the common good of men in Church and Common-wealth. Secondly, the maine aduerſarie is the Romane Religion, which defendeth the greateſt iniuſtice that can be, by eſtabliſhing a Monarchy among themſelues, not onely controlling the ſoueraigne authoritie of Princes in their owne kingdomes, but alſo exempting their ſubiects from their alleageance at their pleaſure. Of which vſurped power debarre them once, and that counterfeit Religion will fall with it, becauſe it is onely vnderpropped by it. Secondly, that Religion ouerthroweth iuſtice in chaſtitie: for firſt, it giueth power to the Pope to diſpenſe with mariages within degrees of nature; it licenſeth the brother by that diſpenſation to marrie his brothers wife, and ſo is a patrone of horrible inceſt. Secondly, it defendeth the toleration of Stewes. Thirdly, by ſolemne decree it forbiddeth mariages to ſundrie orders of men, which Paul calleth a doctrine of diuels, 1. Timoth. 4. Yea they binde certaine men and women from mariage, and yet call it a Sacrament. Fourthly, the laſt Councell of Trent affirmeth, that all mariages not ſolemnized by a Maſſe-prieſt, and in the faith of the Romiſh Church, are of none effect. Thirdly, that Religion teacheth, that to ſteale a ſmall thing, is a veniall ſinne; whereas the thought of ſtealing deſerueth the curſe of the law. Secondly, it defendeth begging, yea and placeth holines in it; whereas the word teacheth that there ſhould be no begger in Iſrael. Fourthly, it teacheth that a ſporting lie, or a beneficial lie are venial ſins, flat againſt the ninth Commandement. Laſtly, againſt the tenth Commandement it teacheth iniuſtice, namely, that hurtfull motions intended againſt our neighbour (if there bee no conſent of will) are no ſinne. Whence wee may ſee what to thinke of that Religion; yea Chriſt himſelfe ſheweth, Mat. 5. 19. Whoſoeuer breaketh the leaſt of theſe Commandements, and teach men ſo to doe, he is the leaſt in the kingdome of heauen, that is, he hath no part therein. But the Romane Church breaketh them, yea and teacheth men to doe ſo, and therefore it is not of God, and the peremptorie teachers thereof haue no part (without repentance) in the kingdome of heauen.

10. Ground

The tenth ground is, 1. Cor. 7. 20. Let euery man abide in that calling in which hee was called. Firſt the meaning. The ſcope of the words ſheweth, that among the Corinths ſome who were ſlaues and ſeruants, but couerted to the faith (their maſters ſtill remaining Infidels) thought that now they were free from their Maſters, and might relinquiſh their ſeruice, and hence tooke occaſion to liue as they liſted; againſt which conceit of licentiouſneſſe the Apoſtle Paul oppoſeth himſelfe, and wiſheth that this be reformed, and that thoſe who being called to the faith vnder vnbeleeuers, abide in that ſame calling wherein they were called. In which verſe two things are contained: Firſt, that euery man that would liue religiouſly muſt haue a double calling: firſt, the generall calling of a Chriſtian: ſecondly, ſome particular vocation and calling wherein to conuerſe. Secondly, that euery man muſt abide in his particular calling: which that a man may doe, firſt he muſt be contented and well pleaſed with his calling. Secondly, hee muſt walke diligently in the duties thereof; for theſe reaſons: firſt, the commandement of God, Geneſ. 3. 19. In the ſweate of thy face ſhalt thou eate thy bread: which words though they be a threatning, yet they include a commaundement bounded with a promiſe of bleſſing, Pſalm. 128. 2. The man that feareth God ſhall eate the labours of his owne hands, and bleſſed ſhall he be: Exod. 20. Sixe daies ſhalt thou labour, enforced by Gods owne example, for in ſixe daies the Lord made heauen and earth. Queſt. May we not vſe recreation in the ſixe daies? Anſ. Yea, ſo it be moderate, and help to make vs fitter for our callings; for labour it ſelfe being commaunded, euery thing alſo which vpholdeth it, is commanded. Such commandements are vſuall in the New Teſtament alſo: Epheſ. 4. 28. Let him that ſtole ſteale no more, but rather let him labour with his hands the thing that good is. So 2. Theſſ. 3. 12. men are commanded to eate their owne bread. Secondly, Examples in the Scripture: God enioyned Adam in the ſtate of innocencie this double calling: firſt to ſerue him: ſecondly to dreſſe the garden. The ſecond Adam Chriſt himſelfe while he led a priuate life till his baptiſme, which was the ſpace of thirtie yeeres, liued in his father Ioſephs calling. The Angels themſelues are miniſtring ſpirits for the good of the godly, and aſcend and deſcend vpon the ſonne of man, and liue not out of their calling. Thirdly, it is the ordinance of God that men ſhould be his inſtruments for the commō good of the ſocieties wherein they liue; euen as euery member in the bodie endeuoureth it ſelfe not onely for it owne good, but for the benefit of the whole. So ſhould euery member of the bodie politique.

This ground is of great weight for the maintaining of the three maine ſocieties: for neither familie, Church nor Common-wealth can ſtand without diſtinction of particular callings and labour in the ſame; for which cauſe the Apoſtle would not haue him to eate, that will not labour, 2.Theſ.3.3.

Aduerſaries. The aduerſaries hereof are, firſt, many amongſt vs, as thoſe who ſpend their liues in gaming, and they who ſpend their wealth in bezeling and drinking: and they alſo who being ſtrong to labor ſpend their time in begging: all which are vile courſes of life, and enemies to all good ſocieties. Secondly, the Roman religion: firſt, in maintaining a Monkiſh life, whereby a man cutteth himſelfe off from all ſocietie, and liues in prayer and faſting: but wee are taught not onely to practiſe duties of the firſt table, but of the ſecond alſo, and without the ſpeciall calling the generall is nothing. Secondly, In maintaining looſenes of life and idlenes, for God hauing appointed 52. Sabbaths in the yeere, wherein men are to lay aſide their ordinarie callings, and no moe, they haue added (as may appeare in their callender) fiftie two moe, which they call holy daies, and ſo ſpend more than a quarter of a yeere in reſt and idlenes, whereby they become aduerſaries of this ground.

11. Ground The eleuenth ground is 1. Tim. 1. 19. Keepe faith and good conſcience. The meaning: By faith we muſt vnderſtand the wholeſome doctrine and religion deliuered in the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles: further, this faith muſt not goe alone, but muſt haue his companion, which is a good conſcience; the propertie of which is to excuſe and iuſtifie a man in al callings before God and man: and it is knowne by a two-fold teſtimonie: firſt of the life paſt: ſecondly, of the life preſent and to come. The teſtimony of the life paſt is, that a man hath repented him of all his ſinnes paſt, and is turned vnto God. The teſtimonie of the life preſent and to come is, firſt, that a man hath a purpoſe neuer to offend God, but endeuours to pleaſe him in all things. Secondly, that when hee hath ſlipped and ſinned againſt God, it was not wittingly and willingly, but of humane infirmitie. Thirdly, that a man hath his generall teſtimony which is required to a good conſcience. Pſal. 119. 6. I ſhall not be confounded, when I haue reſpect to all thy Commandements: Iam. 2. 5. He that breaketh one Commandement, is guiltie of all: that is, hee that wittingly and willingly againſt the knowledge of his conſcience breake one of the Commandements of God, will, if occaſion be offered, willingly and of knowledge break them all: ſo as a good conſcience muſt teſtifie on a mans ſide concerning all ſinnes and all obedience. Examples whereof we haue in Hezekiah, Eſai. 38. 3. Remember Lord how I haue walked before thee with a perfect heart. And in Paul, 1. Cor. 4. 4. I know nothing by my ſelfe. The weight of the ground appeareth in the wordes following, where the Apoſtle ſaith, that While ſome put away good conſcience, they haue made ſhipwracke concerning the faith: where he compareth our conſcience to a ſhip, our religion and faith to our treaſures laid in it. Now as a hole in the ſhip loſeth the treaſures by ſinking the ſhip: ſo cracke the conſcience, and the treaſures of religion ſuffer ſhipwracke: whence it is that Timothie is willed to keepe the myſterie of faith in pure conſcience, 1. Tim. 3. 9.

Aduerſaries. The aduerſarie of this ground is the Romiſh Religion, who ouerthroweth true teſtimonie of conſcience, which is euer ioyned with true humiliation and repentance for ſinnes paſt; in teaching, that many ſinnes are in themſelues veniall, or no ſinnes, as thoſe luſts againſt the laſt Commaundement, which killed Paul himſelfe; and in extenuating mans corruption, and extolling nature, whereby (they ſay) a man may worke his ſaluation, being holpen by the holy ghoſt: whereas indeede no true peace of conſcience is to bee found till nature bee wholy debaſed, & grace take the whole place. Secondly, they teach that a man cannot bee certaine of his ſaluation in this life, but may coniecture and hope well; which is the very racke and torment of the conſcience. Thirdly, while they teach that a man muſt merit his ſaluation by his workes, they torture the conſcience, conſcience, and leaue it deſtitute of this teſtimonie: for how can the conſcience quiet it ſelfe, when it knowes not how many workes will ſerue the turne, nor when it hath ſufficiently ſatisfied the iuſtice of God? and this is to bee marked, that the chiefeſt of that religion, whatſoeuer they hold in their life time; yet when they lie on their death-bed, they flie from their owne merits to the merit of Chriſt. Notable is that ſpeech of Stephen Gardiner at his death to conuince it, who hauing been a great perſecutor, and being much perplexed on his death-bed, by a friend of his viſiting him, was put in minde of that iuſtification which is by the meere mercy of God in Chriſt: to whom hee anſwered; You may tell me, and thoſe who are in my caſe of this doctrine, but open not this gap to the people: So as they are glad to entertain our doctrine for the true peace of their conſcience, which in their owne doctrine they can neuer finde.

And Sir Chriſtopher Blunt at his execution.

Thus haue wee ſhewed in part that faith is a moſt pretious treaſure, beſet with many enemies, againſt whom wee muſt alwaies contend, which wee ſhall yet more clearely ſee in beholding the vſe of this treaſure, which is two-fold: firſt, to reueile from God vnto man all things needfull vnto ſaluation concerning doctrine or manners: wherein it excelleth all mans learning: for firſt, all the lawes and learning of men reueile the Morall law only in part, and mingle it with ſuperſtitions, and ceremonies: but they reueale no part of the Goſpell: onely this doctrine of faith reuealeth in the full perfection both the Law and Goſpell. Secondly, the lawes and learning of men know nothing (much leſſe reueale) of mans miſerie, neither the cauſe nor the remedie thereof; but this doctrine of faith knoweth and reuealeth both; namely, the firſt cauſe to bee the ſinne of our firſt parents, and the proper and perfect remedie to be the death of Chriſt. Thirdly, mens lawes and learning ſpeake at large of temporall happineſſe; but know nothing of eternall: but this doctrine not onely knoweth the true happines of men, but teacheth and deſcribeth the readie way thereunto. The ſecond vſe of this doctrine of faith is, that it is a moſt perfect inſtrument of the holy Ghoſt for the working of all grace in the hearts of men; I meane not the letters and ſyllables, but the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles taught, and beleeued. Paul calleth it the power of God to ſaluation: and Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, that his word is ſpirit and life, that is, the inſtrument of the Spirit, whereby life eternall is procured: for which two notable vſes it is a moſt pretious treaſure. Whence we learne, firſt, to be ſwift to heare this doctrine taught in the publike Miniſterie, as Iames counſelleth, chap. 1. 19. becauſe in it God openeth his treaſure to diſpence the ſame vnto vs. Secondly, it being a pretious treaſure wee muſt hide the ſame in the coffers of our hearts: Pſal. 119. 11. I haue hid thy word in my heart. It muſt be an ingrafted word in them, Iam. 1. 21. And this dutie we practiſe firſt, when wee haue care to know it: ſecondly, to remember it: thirdly, when wee ſet the affections of our hearts vpon it, as men do vpon their treaſures. Thirdly, if it be the treaſure of the Church, then it bringeth to the poſſeſſors of it, wealth, honour, and pleaſure, as other treaſures doe. For as the houſe of Obed-edom was bleſſed for the Arke; ſo is that heart which holdeth true wiſedome within it: ſee Prou. 3. 13. 14. &c. We in this land haue good experience of this truth, who by Gods bleſſing haue aboue fourtie yeeres enioyed wealth, peace, honour, and aboue all, Gods protection: and whence haue theſe flowed but from the true faith and religion ſet downe in the Prophets and Apoſtles, maintained and defended amongſt vs? which if we would haue continued, we muſt alſo continue to hold and affect this truth as a treaſure vnto the end.

The ſecond point or head of the Exhortation is; that the Saints are the keepers of this treaſure of faith, to whom it was once giuen. Whence we may learne, firſt, that it is an infallible note of the true Church of God, to keep, maintaine, and defend the wholeſome doctrine of Religion, deliuered by the Prophets and Apoſtles. It was noted to bee the chiefe prerogatiue of the Iewes, that to them the Oracles of God were committed, Roman. 3. Hence 1. Tim. 3. 15. the Church is called the ground and piller of truth, becauſe in her publike Miniſtery ſhe maintaineth and preſerueth the ſame, Cant. 3. 7. asketh Chriſt where ſhe ſhall be ſure of him, and not miſſe of finding him in her neceſſitie: he maketh anſwere, ſhe ſhall be ſure of him in the Tents of ſhepheards. Whence may bee truly concluded, that neither are the aſſemblies of Turkes nor Heretikes the Churches of God, becauſe they fight againſt the truth; neither is the Church of Rome a true Church of God, becauſe the truth of doctrine is for ſubſtance reuerſed amongſt them. As alſo we may be confirmed that our Churches are the true Churches of Chriſt by this infallible note: A Regiſter is known by his Records; ſo our Church is known to be Gods Regiſter, becauſe it keepeth faithfully the records of the Prophets and Apoſtles. Secondly, that it ſtands vs in hand to whom this treaſure is now committed, ſo faithfully to keepe it, that it be not taken from vs, and giuen to others who will keepe it better: which we ſhall do by making this vſe of it, that wee bring foorth the fruites of it in amendement of life, elſe our vnthankfulnes ſhall iuſtly bereaue vs of it. Concerning that circumſtance in the text [once giuen] and not often, it may beare a double ſenſe: firſt, it was giuen (as wee ſay) once for all, that is, perfectly, ſufficiently, as neuer after needing any alteration or addition. Whence wee note, firſt, that all reuelations in matter of ſaluation and religion giuen ſince, are friuolous and ſuperſtitious; for there is but one edition of true faith, and no after edition of Reuelation beſides or without the word; ſuch as the Papiſts haue deuiſed, to confirme their Purgatorie, prayer and almes for the dead, Maſſe, &c. ſeeing all neceſſarie doctrine to ſaluation was once giuen perfectly. Secondly, that all Church traditions in matter of religion and doctrine of ſaluation, are meere prophanations of true doctrine, and argue it to bee vnperfect; as thoſe of the Maſſe; of receiuing the Communion in one kind; of the Popes ſupremacie; of workes of ſatisfaction, and many moe. Secondly, it may bee thus vnderſtood, Once giuen to the Saints, that is, not in writing, but in the hearts of the Saints, when they are truly enlightened: and therefore if after enlightening it bee quite loſt, it is not giuen the ſecond time, and conſequently cannot be recouered. Heb. 6. 4. If a man who hath bin once enlightened and taſted of the good word of God, fall away, it is impoſſible that he ſhould be renewed againe by repentance. From which wee muſt learne, to beware of Apoſtaſie, and falling from the faith, yea and of al ſteps and degrees leading thereunto, as of declining from our grounds of religion: for better had it been for vs neuer to haue knowne the way of truth, than after the knowledge of it to forſake the holy Commaundement, 2. Pet. 2. 22. Which is the more to bee remembred, becauſe religion hath been more cheriſhed than now it is, and the declining from it a great deale leſſe. If it be asked, how may wee preuent Apoſtaſie? I anſwer, neuer call any ground into queſtion. Here Cyprians rule is to be learned, that diuine matters admit no deliberation.

The third point of the Exhortation is; the office of the Church of God and euery member of it; and that is to maintaine, yea to * fight for the maintenance of this treaſure; and this is not a bodilie fight by ſtrength of arme or bow, but a ſpirituall fight by ſpiritual duties, which euery member of the Church muſt take vp; and namely by foure duties. Firſt, by doctrine; for euery man in his place and calling muſt be a Prophet; as Ioel 2. 28. and muſt teach all vnder him: the father muſt teach the children, the Maſter his ſeruants, and thus keepe out Satan and al Satanical doctrines. Secondly, by confeſſion; euery man being called muſt ſtand againſt the gates of hell, by conſtant witneſſing of the truth. 1. Pet. 3. 15. Sanctifie God in your hearts, and be ready alwaies to giue an account of the hope that is in you. Thirdly, by example of a good life and vnblameable, ſutable to the doctrine. Philip. 2. 15. This maketh men ſhine as lights in the world. Fourthly, by prayer, that the Lord would ſend forth labourers into his harueſt to withſtand al falſe doctrines and hereſies, that ſo the faith and religion wherewith hee hath honoured vs theſe many yeeres, may bee maintained vnto vs, and continued vnto ours for euer.

* The word is not ἀγωνίζεσθαι, but ἐπαγωνίζεσθαι, ſignifying an inſtant contention.

The weapons of our warfare are not carnall. 2. Cor. 10. 4

Verſ. 4. For there are certain men crept in, which were of old before ordained to this condemnation; vngodly men they are which turne the grace of our God into wantonnes, and denie God the onely Lord and our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

HEre the Apoſtle proceedeth to confirme his exhortation, by a reaſon drawne from the ſtate of the Church in his time, and it is thus briefly framed. There bee certaine men which ſecretly ſeeke to vndermine and ouerthrow the faith, therefore you ought the more earneſtly to contend for it. And that theſe aduerſaries lurking amõgſt them might the better bee deſcried, hee deſcribeth them by fiue ſeuerall adiuncts: firſt, by their hypocriſie, in creeping in. Secondly, by their eſtate before God, they are of old ordained to this condemnatiõ. Thirdly, by their religion; vngodly men they are. Fourthly, by their doctrine; they turne the grace of our God into wantonnes. Fiftly, by their liues; they denie the onely Lord. For the firſt, There are certaine men crept in] That is, there be men who ſecretly haue inſinuated themſelues into your ſocieties, profeſſing themſelues to be teachers of the true faith, but are indeede the deſtroyers and diſturbers of it. In which words two ſins are laid to their charge: firſt, that they cunningly ioyned themſelues vnto the Church, pretending themſelues to be the ſeruants of Chriſt and of the Church, and yet were enemies to both. Here marke the ſubtiltie of Satan, who cauſeth prophane men to ioyne themſelues to the ſocieties of the Saints, that by this meanes mingling his inſtruments with the members of the Church, he may by degrees corrupt the faith and ouerthrow the Church. The Parable, Matth. 13. ſheweth, that whereſoeuer the good husbandman ſoweth his good ſeede, this malicious man ſcattereth his tares. In Abrahams houſe ſhal be an Iſmael; in Iſaaks, an Eſau; in the Arke, a curſed Cham; in Chriſts familie a Iudas. In the Primitiue Church the diuell raiſed vp all ſorts of Heretikes great numbers. In our owne Church the Diuell ſtirreth vp daily troopes of Atheiſts and Papiſts, to the corrupting and deprauing of true faith and Religion.

Vſe. Firſt, wee muſt not take offence when we ſee vngodly men in ỹ Church, much leſſe cut our ſelues from it by ſeparation: but rather conceiue of the policie of Satan, who for the hindrance of the faith thruſteth them in. When the Iſraelites entred into the land of Canaan they muſt not dwell alone, but be mingled with the Cananites the enemies of the Church, leaſt ỹ land being too much diſpeopled, wild beaſts ſhould preuaile and deuoure the people of God: So the Lord (ordering the malice of Satan to the good of the Church) ſuffereth ſeducers in the Church both to exerciſe the faith and patience of his, as alſo to preuent greater dangers, which they might in their ſecure condition fall into. Secondly, hence wee ſee that ſuch hypocrites as theſe be, though they be in the Church, yet are they not of it; they are no members of that bodie (as the Romiſh Church teacheth) for they onely creepe into it.

The ſecond fault that is laid to their charge is, that they are intruders, thruſting themſelues into the office of teaching, not being called thereto, but creepe into the calling. Whence wee note, that it is moſt neceſſarie that thoſe who are to teach publikely in the church ſhould bee firſt called thereunto. Reaſons. Firſt, beſides the auoiding of this ſinne of creeping into the Church, it is the order that God hath ſet in the ſame; that he that is to teach ſhould firſt be ſent, Rom. 10. 14. And, No man taketh this honour (that is lawfully) to himſelfe, except he be called as Aaron was. Secondly, the Miniſterie is Gods, and not mans, becauſe the Miniſter ſtandeth in Gods roome, and ſpeaketh in his name; which he can neuer doe truly, vnleſſe God ſend him and depute him in his ſtead. Thirdly, the Miniſter muſt maintaine that which he teacheth; vnto which he had neede (as in all the parts of his calling) of Gods ſpeciall protection; for the which hee muſt bee alwaies inſtant in prayer, which hee can neuer be aſſured of, if he be not perſwaded of the truth of his calling. Fourthly, the people cannot heare with comfort and profit, if they bee not perſwaded that God hath called the teacher to inſtruct them: Rom. 10. 14. How can they heare &c. This truth extendeth it ſelfe alſo to all other offices as well Ciuill as Eccleſiaſticall; all which are to bee welded and executed by men lawfully called vnto the ſame. All entrance then into any office in Church or Common-wealth by money, fauour of men, or any vnlawful meanes, is intruſion; and ſuch are not called of God, but are to be ranged among theſe ſeducers, who creepe into places, and come not in by Gods call or approbation.

The ſecond adiunct whereby the ſeducers are deſcribed, is their eſtate before προγεγραμμένοι. fore God; being men of old * ordained to this condemnation.] That is, they were before all times, locked, enrolled, or billed vnto condemnation, euen as though their names had been set downe in a booke. By condemnation is meant iudgement, as the particle This doth plainly shew: which maketh this the plaine meaning: They were of old ordained to this iudgement in this life, to trie, to exercise and molest the Church of God, and so consequently to procure vnto themselues at length their own iust condemnation.

In which words we are taught: first, that God keepeth his bookes of Registrie and records, in which all things are set downe, the persons, behauiours and eternall estate of all men: which bookes are of three sorts: first, the booke of his Prouidence, containing all particulars of things past, present and to come, in which the Lord saw the members of Dauid when he was yet vnformed, Psal. 139.16. In the same booke, the number of the haires of our heads, and the falling of sparrowes to the ground, are recorded. The second booke, is of the last iudgement; in which the persons and sinnes of all men al enrolled. Dan. 7.9.10. The thrones were set vp, the ancient of daies did sit: thousand thousands ministred vnto him, and tenne thousand thousands stood before him: the iudgement was set, and the bookes opened. Reu. 20.12. I saw all great and small stand before God; and the bookes were opened, and another booke was opened. The third is the booke of life, in which are written the names of those who are to be saued. Phil. 4.3. Paul saith of Clement and other his fellowe labourers, that their names were written in the booke of life. Now by these books we may not grossely conceiue materiall bookes, such as men note what they would remember in: but the counsell, election, prouidence, pleasure, and knowledge of God, wherein all these things are so certainly set downe, as if any man should write them in a booke.

Out of which wee note two things: first, that in regard of God there is no chance, neither any euent by it; in regard of men indeed who know not the causes of things, many chances may be: but Gods prouidence, and chance are contrarie; he hauing all things written before him with their causes. Secondly, that nothing comes to passe without the decree of God, no not the wicked actions of men. Which God not onely foreseeth, but decreeth: for this Iude insinuateth, saying, they were ordained to this iudgement; and euen that which is against the will of God, commeth not to passe without his will, God willing the being of that which he willeth not to effect; and though hee esteeme not euill to be good, yet hee accounteth it good that euill should be.

Further, where hee saith [ordained of old to this condemnation] we learne, that as God hath before all worlds decreed the electing of some to saluation: so he hath decreed the refusall and reiecting of others to condemnation. 1.Pet.2.8. Many were disobedient; vnto the which they were euen ordained. 1.Thess.5.9. God hath not ordained you to wrath, but to obtaine saluation through Christ: shewing that some are ordained to wrath, who are not to obtaine saluation through Christ. Rom.9.22. God is compared to a potter, framing vessels of honour and dishonour, vessels of mercie, and vessels of wrath. In the same place, I haue loued Iacob, and hated Esau; that is, I haue decreed so to doe. For the whole chapter speaketh of Gods counsel & vnchangeable decree. Ob. If this be so (will some say) then God dealeth iniustly, that absolutely ordaineth some men to condemnation and perdition. Ans. We must know, that wee are creatures, and may not presume to prescribe a law of iustice to the Creator; whose will is iustice it selfe (whatsoeuer we may conceiue) and maketh the things willed good, because it is willed, and not willed because it is good. Secondly, though God refuse and reiect men, yet hee doth it in most wise order and iust proceeding, in these two degrees: first, hee vouchsafeth to some men the riches of his grace tending to life euerlasting; which speciall abundant grace hee denieth to some other passing by them, who being left of him vnto themselues fall into sinne. Secondly, for sin God decreeth iudgement and condemnation, so as he doth not simply and absolutely ordaine his creature to hell, but in regard of sinne: not that sinne is a cause of the decree mouing him vnto it, but that hee decreeth not condemnation without respect of sinne and relation vnto it: which speech wee neede Predestination then is not only to be referred to the elect.

Obiect.

Answere.

Homo non damnatur propter decretum, sed propter peccatum.

neede not feare to speake, because the holie Ghost so speaketh.

Vse. First, if some men be passed by of God, we must humble our selues vnder his mightie hand: and with feare and trembling worke our saluation. Roman. 11. 20. Some are cut off, thou standest by faith, be not high minded but feare. Secondly, wee may not be offended when we see the Gospell not receiued, yea hated of men, and the professors of it persecuted: for many are of old ordained to be vnderminers of the truth euen to this condemnation, which by disobedience they hasten vpon themselues. If the Gospell be hid to any, it is to them that perish. Thirdly, many Diuines ouershoot themselues, that seeke to obscure or ouerthrow this doctrine of reprobation, teaching that God for his part electeth all, and that man himselfe is the cause of reprobation; so as man is either the sauiour or damner of himselfe, by receiuing or refusing grace offered; whereas the Scripture speaketh otherwise: and here teacheth vs, that some men were enrolled to certen iudgement by God before all worlds. The darkning of this doctrine breedeth securitie of spirit, wherein grace is made so large, and saluation so easie, that if men will they may be saued: whereas our doctrine leadeth to the feare of God, and a care to walke as in his presence continually.

Lastly, in that it is added, they were preordained of old, note first the time of the reiection of some men: namely, before all worlds. Secondly, the proper cause of the decree of God, which must needes be in himselfe, because it was before the creature was. Rom. 9. 11. Before they had done good or euill. That is, before he considered of their good or euill in his decree, he decreed to loue the one, and hate the other. So Ephes. 1. 9. whom hee chuseth, he chuseth in himselfe. Not informing his iudgement, nor framing his counsels as man doth from outward respects, he goeth not out of himselfe for any motiue to chuse or refuse, but as Matth. 11. 25. because his good pleasure was such. This confuteth the Popish error, which affirmeth that God did decree according to his foresight of faith or infidelitie, the sauing of some, and refusing of other: but this cannot stand, seeing Gods decree is in order and time before the creature; which being the latter, cannot bee the cause of the former.

The third adiunct or property of these seducers is: their want of religion. [Vngodly men they are] Vngodlines is a sinne much spoken of, but not so wel known, and therefore it is requisite to shew the nature of it, that wee may know who an vngodly man is; the rather because it is a grieuous sinne, much greater than any of the seauen deadly sins of the Papists, being the ground of them all. Secondly, because it is rooted in the bottome of the heart, and cannot be so easily discerned as others, though as dangerous as any. Thirdly, because it is a sinne more spirituall against the first Commandement of the first table, directed against God himselfe, robbing him of his due honour. For the cleere knowledge of which, consider three maine parts or properties of vngodlinesse: first, that it denieth God the honour due vnto him, and that three waies: first, by ignorance it causeth the vngodly man to rob him of his honour, in that he acknowledgeth not the Godhead, but in his heart he inwardly denieth the prouidence, the presence, the iustice, mercie, power, and the other attributes of God. Psal. 14. 1. The thought of the heart of the foole, that is, of euery vngodly man, is, that there is no God: not that in conscience he is not conuinced of the contrarie, but by reason of his wicked heart, vpon occasion offered he is willing to acknowledge none. Secondly, by not subiecting the conscience and life to the written will and word of God, but reiecting and renouncing subiection thereunto. Thus Iob bringeth in the vngodly man, saying to the Almightie, Depart from vs, wee will haue none of thy waies: which is too outragious to bee the speech of the tongue, but of the heart casting off the Lords yoke. To whom the King shall say: Those mine enemies that would not haue mee to raigne ouer them, bring them hither and slay them before me, Luk. 19. 27. Thirdly, by not lifting vp the heart by inuocation of God for blessings needfull, and in thanksgiuing for benefits receiued; the property of the vngodly man is, that he calleth not vpon God, Psalm. 14. 4. This point of Atheisme maketh a man like a beast, which looketh not vp from whence his food falleth.

The second propertie of vngodlines is, to attribute and giue this honour, which it denieth God, vnto ſome thing elſe than God: as when the vngodlie man ſetteth his loue, ioy, feare, or any other affection vpon any thing beſides God. Thus the couetous man becommeth an Idolater. And 2.Tim. 3. in the laſt times men ſhall be louers of pleaſures more than of God.

The third propertie of it is, when it giueth God his due honour, to denie him the true manner; which cauſeth the vngodly man to content himſelfe with a forme and ſhew of godlines, outwardly bearing himſelfe as godly, but in-
2.Tim.3.5. wardly wanteth the power of it; the heart is not ſingle, but full of fraud, of doubling and deceit before God, who looketh into it, and delighteth not with the approching of the lippes, when the heart is remoued. By which wee ſee the practiſe of the vngodly man, ſundrie waies robbing God of his due honour, which one ſinne entertained, breedeth and nouriſheth ſinnes of all ſorts: and ſo much wee are giuen to vnderſtand in the placing of it here, as the firſt ſinne of the ſeducers producing a great number of ſins more, noted in them through the Epiſtle; neither can any other be looked for but that the life ſhould be plentifull in all ſinnes, where the heart is poſſeſſed of this vngodlines. Rom. 1.26. The Gentiles acknowledged not God, and therfore he gaue them vp to vile affections, and this was the ground of all thoſe ſins reckoned there, aboue twentie in number. Abraham thought not amiſſe that he might eaſily bee ſlaine for Sarah his wife (whom therefore he durſt not confeſſe) if the feare of God were not in Abimilechs Court, Geneſ. 20. giuing vs to know, that where the feare of God is not in the heart, there is no bones made of any ſinne in the life, no not of murther it ſelfe.

Vſe 1. Wee are hence taught to ſpie out in our ſelues this hidden and ſecret ſinne, and heartily to bewaile it aboue all other ſinnes, as the mother ſinne of the reſt. But ſome may ſay: We are not tainted with this ſinne, we abhorre to be counted vngodly. Anſ. It is too common a ſinne among all ſorts: wee haue indeede an outward forme of godlines; we come to heare the word, to pray, to receiue the Sacraments, but the moſt want the power of it in their hearts: for firſt, the lawes binde our outward man to this outward forme: but the hearts of men remaine ſecure, ſeldome thinking of their ſinne and damnable eſtate by it, and ſeldome ſorrowing for the ſame, and ſaying, What haue we done? Secondly, many haue the forme of godlineſſe, whoſe hearts are filled with the cares of this life, which choke vp the power of godlineſſe, and will not ſuffer it to ſeate it ſelf there, ſeeing the loue of the world and the loue of God cannot ſtand together. Thirdly, many hauing this forme cannot abide to ſubiect their hearts and liues vnto the lawes of God: yea they would exempt their ſpeeches and affections from ſuch ſtrictnes, and count it too much preciſenes: theſe are al fruites of the vngodly heart, of which the fewer wee can ſee in our ſelues the more they be, and the more to be bewailed.

2. Vſe. Further, hence wee are to take out that leſſon which the Apoſtle teacheth, 1.Tim.4.7. To exerciſe our ſelues vnto godlineſſe: for if vngodlineſſe bee ſuch a mother ſinne, we muſt endeuour our ſelues to the contrarie. For which purpoſe, we muſt firſt prepare our ſelues thereunto (elſe wee ſhall faile in the whole exerciſe) by learning to acknowledge Gods prouidence, preſence, mercie and iuſtice in euery thing. Gal.4.8. When the Galathians knew not God, they worſhipped them which by nature were no gods: no godlineſſe can ſtand with the ignorance of God, neither can it be exerciſed in particular actions, vnleſſe we behold him thus in the particulars. Secondly, to this exerciſe of godlineſſe wee muſt firſt inwardly worſhip God in our ſpirits, ſoules, hearts, & affections, not in lips only, ſpeeches, & outward actions: For the [a] right worſhippers, worſhip him in ſpirit and truth: Paul [b] ſerued God in his ſpirit. Qu. How ſhall a man doe this? Anſ. True inward worſhippe ſtandeth in two things: firſt in faith, ſecondly in the actions of faith. Faith is that whereby a man generally beleeueth the whole word of God, containing the Law and the Goſpell, to be the truth of God it ſelfe; and particularly concerning himſelfe three things: firſt, Gods mercie in the forgiuing of his owne ſinnes. Secondly, his preſence in all his actions. Thirdly, his prouidence ouer all euents good or bad that befall him. The actions of faith are two: firſt,

[a] Ioh.4.23
[b] Rom.1.9.

ſubiection

subiection of the heart vnto God, in three respects: first, to Gods iudgement, that seeing hee passeth sentence against our sinnes, we also should call our selues to account for them, confesse them, condemne our selues for them, and intreate for mercie. Secondly, to his word and lawes of both Tables, by heartie and conscionable obedience; willingly taking vp his yoke, & suffering our selues to be directed by all his lawes. Thirdly, to the good pleasure of God knowne by the euent, whether sicknes or health, want or abundance, in departing from our owne wils, and patiently yea thankfully submitting them vnto his blessed will. The second action of faith is, the eleuation or lifting vp of the heart vnto God incessantly, both in suing for his grace and aide in the seasonable supplie of our necessities: as also in blessing him for blessings receiued. In these stand the practise of the true worship of God in the spirit, which is true godlinesse: vnto which wee may be incited by these reasons: first, because this godlinesse hath the promise of this life and the life to come, 1. Tim. 4. that is, the godly man hath title to all blessings of all kindes. Secondly, Godlines is great gaine, 1. Timoth. 6. Euery man affecteth gaine; but if any man would attaine it, let him bee godlie. Men are often crossed in the world, and things succeede not with them, they are not prospered in their callings and duties of it, and seeing no reason of it, marueile why they should not thriue as well as others: whereas indeede being vngodly men they want that which should bring in their gaine. Thirdly, let the consideration of the last iudgement ioyned with the dissolution of heauen and earth moue vs hereunto? 2. Pet. 3. 11. Seeing all these things shall be dissolued, what maner of persons ought we to be in holy conuersation and godlines? As though he had said, seeing nothing else shall stand vs in stead but godlines, how are we to frame our selues to the practise of it. Fourthly, the appearing of grace teacheth vs to denie all vngodlines, and to liue godlily in this present world, Tit. 2. 12. If this be the end of the Gospels appearing, and we haue been they to whom it hath appeared with peace and prosperitie aboue fourtie yeeres, how can wee bee but vnexcuseable and speechlesse before God, if wee remaine vntaught in this dutie, but continue still in the waies of vngodlinesse?

We must condemne our owne sinnes, least God condemne vs for them.

The fourth adiunct whereby the seducers are described, is their doctrine, in these words; They turne the grace of God to wantonnes. In which consider two points: first, the sinne or vice here condemned. Secondly, the dutie or contrarie vertue commanded. Before wee can know the former, we must search out the meaning of the words. And first by [grace] is meant the doctrine of the Gospel, called in the former verse by the name of faith; so it is called, Titus 2. 11. The grace of God hath appeared, teaching vs &c. because it teacheth vs that remission of sinnes, and life euerlasting, are obtained onely by the meere grace of God in Christ. By [wantonnes] is properly vnderstood that sinne whereby men addict themselues wholie to intemperance, incontinencie, and vnlawful pleasures; but here it must be taken generally for a licentious prophane kinde of liuing and libertie of sinning. [Turne] that is, they displace the grace of God, applying it from a right to a wrong end, and that not onely in practise of life, but in propounding of doctrine tending thereunto. As though hee had more plainly said, that whereas the doctrine of grace in the Gospell, teacheth men free iustification by faith in Christ without the workes of the law, these men peruert this gratious doctrine, and teach that therefore men may liue as they list, and so themselues doe also: by which same sinne such seducers are elsewhere noted in the Scripture. Rom. 3. 8. Some gathered from Pauls doctrine the same libertie, saying, Why doe wee not then euill that good may come of it? And 2. Pet. 2. 19. some such are mentioned, who beguiled diuers with wantonnes through the lusts of the flesh, promising vnto them libertie. Ecclesiasticall histories mention many such who sprung vp after the Apostles daies; as the Libertines, Simon Magus and his disciples, who taught that men might lawfully commit fornication. So also the disciples of Basilides, Eunomius: and the Gnosticks, Heretikes who taught that men might liue as they list, seeing now such libertie was procured them, being freed from being vnder the Law any longer: which sinne died not with those cursed heretikes, but the Diuell hath in these last daies reuiued it, especially cially in foure ſorts of men: firſt, the Libertines of this age, who hold with the former, that being vnder grace wee are free from the obedience of the Law. Secondly, the Anabaptiſts, who (vpon the conſideratiõ of abundant grace & peace in the new Teſtament, and of the libertie obtained by Chriſt) teach, that Ciuill iuriſdiction and Magiſtracie is vnlawfull: as alſo to make warre, and to take an oth before a Magiſtrate; which ſort of men are not ſo well knowne here as in other Churches, but are daungerous enemies (whereſoeuer) both to the grace of God and good of man: for where the Ciuill ſword doth ceaſe, there can no ſocietie ſtand in ſafetie. Thirdly, another kind of Libertines are the Papiſts, and the Popiſh Church, with the whole Romane Religion, themſelues being open enemies vnto the grace of God, and their whole religion turning it into wantonnes and libertie of ſinning, and that diuers waies. Firſt, God hauing of his grace giuen vnto the Church a power of the keyes to open and ſhut heauen, that religion hath turned it into an inſtrument: firſt, of prophaneneſſe, in ſetting vp an new Prieſthood to abſolue and loſe men ſins properly, in offering a ſacrifice for the quicke and the dead, ſo aboliſhing the ſacrifice of Chriſt. Secondly, of iniuſtice: for by it they depoſe Kings and Princes, they free ſubiects from their alleageance, they ſtirre them vp and encourage them to conſpiracies, rebellions; and maintaine in other ſtates, factions, ciuill warres, and ſeditions, and al by vertue of their power. Thirdly, of horrible couetouſnes: for by it they ſell pardons for thouſands of yeeres, the which ſales haue brought to the Church of Rome the third part of the reuenewes of al Europe: which one practiſe, if there were no moe, prooueth plainly, that that Church turneth the grace of God to the libertie of ſinne.

The Romiſh mart maketh ſale of all ſorts of ſins for readie mony.

Secondly, their whole Religion is a corrupted Religion, and maketh the receiuers of it the children of Satan more than before: for firſt it maketh men hypocrites, requiring nothing but an externall, bodily and ceremoniall worſhip, without any inward power of it; as in faſting, it requireth onely a ſhew of it, as to abſtaine from fleſh and white meates, but they may vſe moſt delicate fiſhes, the ſtrongeſt wines, and ſweeteſt ſpices: and in other parts of their religion is no leſſe hypocriticall. Secondly, it maketh men proud and arrogant, teaching the freedome of will vnto good, if the holie Ghoſt doe but a little help it; that a man can merit by his workes; that hee can ſatisfie Gods iuſtice by ſuffering for ſin; yea that hee can performe ſome workes of ſupererrogation: who can hold theſe points and be humble? Thirdly, it maketh men ſecure, teaching that they may haue full pardon of all their ſins by the power of their keyes for mony; and that though they haue no merits of their owne, they may buy the merits of other men; yea although in their death they faile of repentance, yet for ſome mony they may be eaſed in Purgatorie. What ſhall any rich man now care how he liue or die, ſeeing all ſhall be well with him for a little mony? Fourthly, it maketh men in their diſtreſſe deſperate, teaching that no man can be aſſured of his ſaluation without ſome reuelation. Fiftly, it reuiueth the old ſinne of theſe ſeducers, teaching that diuers men and women may not marrie, that were adulterie; and yet openly tolerating ſtues and vncleannes. Which what is it elſe but to maintaine wantonnes? whereby the chiefe teachers of that Church witneſſe themſelues the right ſucceſſors; not of the Apoſtles (as they pretend) but of theſe ſeducers and other wicked heretikes old and new.

The fourth ſort of Libertines are carnall and formall Proteſtants; who firſt turne the counſell of Gods election into wantonnes, by reaſoning thus: If I be elected to ſaluation, I ſhall be ſaued let me liue as I will; or if not I cannot be ſaued, doe what I will or can; becauſe Gods counſels are vnchangeable: and thus conclude to ſpend their daies in all wantonnes. Secondly, they turne the mercie of God into wantonnes, thus reaſoning in their hearts; Becauſe God is mercifull, therefore I will deferre my repentance as yet; for at what time ſoeuer a ſinner repenteth, God will put away all his ſins out of his remembrance: what? yong Saints, old Diuels. Thus the timely acceptance of Gods mercie offered, is become a reproch: beſides many moe, who, becauſe the Lord deferreth puniſhment, ſet their hearts to doe euill. Thirdly, others vnder pretence of brotherly loue, miſpend all that they haue

In wantonnes, riot, exceſſe, companie keeping, gaming, to the beggering of themſelues, and vndoing of their owne families, vnto which they ought to ſhew their loue in the firſt place. Fourthly, others vnder pretext that the Iewiſh Sabbath is abrogated, and that Chriſt hath brought ſuch libertie as hath aboliſhed diſtinctions of times, take libertie to keepe no Sabbath at all: whence many tradeſmen will do what they liſt on this day, and diſpatch thoſe buſineſſes, which they can finde no time for in the weeke daies. Fiftly, ſome becauſe they would humble themſelues, commit diuers ſins and continue in others; theſe ſay in themſelues, Let vs continue in ſinne that grace may abound: all theſe ſortes of men turne the grace of God into wantonnes, and practiſe the vice here condemned.

The 2. thing to be conſidered is, the contrary vertue; and ẏ is to make a godly & holy vſe of the grace of God, and to applie it to the right end for which God vouchſafeth it vnto vs, to wit, that wee might be thankful vnto him, and teſtifie the ſame in obedience to all his lawes. Which appeareth, firſt, by teſtimonie of Scripture, Luk. 1. 74. 75. We are deliuered out of the hands of our ſpirituall enemies, to ſerue him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. Rom. 6. 16. We are vnder grace, therefore let vs giue vp the members of our bodies, weapons of righteouſneſſe. Tit. 2. 11. The grace of God hath appeared, teaching vs to denie vngodlines. Secondly, the end of all Gods graces is, that wee ſhould be furthered in holineſſe of life; we are elected that wee might be holy: the end of our calling is, that we may be Saints; Iuſtification freeth from puniſhment of ſinne; Sanctification from corruption and ſinne it ſelfe; Faith purifieth the heart; Loue containeth vs in obedience; he that hath hope purgeth himſelfe: and ſo of all other graces. Thirdly, Chriſt is a Mediatour two waies: firſt by merit, to procure life and worke our ſaluation: ſecondly, by efficacie, that is, whereby his death is powerfull to cauſe vs to die to ſinne, and his reſurrection to raiſe vs from the graue of ſinne to a new life, and he is no Mediatour by his merit to thoſe who are deſtitute of this efficacie.

Chriſt hath not merited the life of glory for any who firſt liueth not the life of grace.

Vſe. We haue in this land been many yeeres partakers of this grace of God, our dutie then is to make a holie vſe of it, and walke thankfully before God. Rom. 12. 1. I beſeech you by the mercies of God (which he had in the former chapter mentioned) that ye giue vp your ſelues a holie ſacrifice to God: no more forcible argument can be vrged to ſtirre vp men to thankfull obedience than this, for if Gods mercie in Chriſt cannot moue, what will? Let this then perſwade vs likewiſe; If we beleeue God to bee our Father, that is a great grace. Let this grace moue vs to walke as children before him: let the grace of our redemption moue vs to walke as redeemed ones, reſcued out of ſuch captiuitie wherein wee were inthralled to ſin and Satan, ſeeing it were a madnes to returne to ſuch bondage againe. If Chriſt be dead for vs, let that grace moue vs to die to ſinne; if hee being riſen againe ſit at Gods right hand, that wee might ſit there with him, let that grace mooue vs to walk as thoſe that are riſen with him, and haue our conuerſation in heauen, ſeeking (euen while wee are below) the things that are aboue; and ſo of the reſt.

Further, the Apoſtle to make thoſe ſeducers more odious, ſaith not ſimplie they turne the grace of God: but [of our God] into wantonnes, which noteth the indignitie of their fact, in which conſider three things: firſt, by what meanes God becomes our God: and that is not by any merit of ours, but by meanes of the gratious couenant propounded in the Goſpell, promiſing pardon and remiſſion of ſin in and by Chriſt. Iere. 31. 31. This is called the new couenant which the Lord contracteth with his people, where writing his law in their inward parts, he becommeth their God, and they his people. Secondly, what muſt wee doe to ſay truly and in aſſurance that God is our God? Anſ. Wee muſt for our parts make a couenant with him, vnto which is required a conſent on either partie: firſt, on Gods part, that he will be our God; which we ſhall finde, not in any reuelation beſides the Scriptures; but generally in the word, and more ſpecially in the miniſterie of the Goſpell and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, annexed as ſeales vnto the Couenant: in which God doth as ſurely couenant with vs, as if hee ſhould from heauen ſpeake vnto vs. Secondly, on our part is required conſent, of which there be two degrees: firſt, when we make an outward profeſſion of faith, heare the word, receiue the Sacraments, Baptiſme and the Lords Supper, which ſerue to diſtinguiſh vs from Iewes, Turkes, &c. this is ſomewhat, but not ſufficient to make God our God, ſeeing it is common to the very hypocrites themſelues. Secondly, ſeeing hee is not a Iew which is one outwardly, but which is a Iew within, there is required in our conſent a further degree, which ſtandeth in an inward conſent of the heart, whereby a man taketh God for his God; which is then begun when firſt a man acknowledgeth and bewaileth his ſinnes. Secondly, when he endeuoureth to bee reconciled to God. Thirdly, when he purpoſeth neuer to ſin againe: when this couenant is thus concluded by conſent of both parties, a man may ſafely and truly ſay that God is his God.

Now ſeeing wee know theſe things, our dutie is to labour to be ſetled and aſſured in our conſcience that God is our God: for firſt, in this aſſurance is the foundation of all true comfort; all the promiſes of God are hereupon grounded, and herein accompliſhed, that God is our God: ſee Iſai.41.10. Be not afraid, I am thy God: yea Chriſt being vpon the Croſſe, hauing the pangs of hel vpon him, herein ſtaied himſelfe, My God, my God: ſo Dauid, Pſalm.22.1. and being readie to be ſtoned to death, comforted himſelfe in the Lord his God, 1.Sam. 30.6. And not onely is it the foundation of all our comfort in this life, but of our happines after death it ſelfe, being the ground of thoſe two maine Articles of our faith, the reſurrection of the bodie, and the immortalitie of the ſoule: for by vertue of this Couenant alone ſhall wee riſe againe after death to life, glorie, and immortalitie; as Chriſt himſelfe diſputing againſt the Sadduces, from hence prooueth the reſurrection, in that God is the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob. Secondly, it is the ground of al obedience; Pſal.95.7. the Prophet exhorting men thereunto, vſeth this as a reaſon: For he is the Lord our God, and wee are the people of his hands: the preface of the Morall law enforcing obedience laieth the ſame ground; For I am the Lord thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: ſee alſo Pſal.50.7. and whoſoeuer is truly perſwaded that God is his God, cannot but obey him.

The fift propertie of theſe ſeducers is, That they deny God the onely Lord, and our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.] Thus are they deſcribed by their manners. The Tranſlators of this Epiſtle were (as it ſeemeth) of opinion, that theſe words are properly ſpoken of God the Father, and of God the Sonne alſo: but by the tenour of the words in the originall, it ſeemeth that they are all to bee vnderſtood of Chriſt, and not of the Father; and are thus to be read: Which denie that onely Ruler who is God and our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Again, the tenour of the words being borrowed from the Epiſtle of Peter, may thence be rightly expounded: now Peter ſpeaking of the ſame ſinne of theſe ſeducers, applieth it only to be a denial of Chriſt, 2.Pet.2.1. They denie the Lord that bought them. In the words then conſider two things: firſt, the ſinne here condemned, namely, to denie Ieſus Chriſt. Secondly, a deſcription of Chriſt. For the firſt, To denie Ieſus Chriſt is, to renounce and forſake Chriſt, and ſo much as in a man lieth to make his death voyd, and of none effect. Now becauſe this deniall preſuppoſeth a redemption (as Peter mentioneth) they denying the Lord that bought them; this queſtion is to be cleered, how theſe men being reprobates, can be ſaid to bee redeemed by Chriſt? Anſw. Wee muſt not thinke that they were in Gods decree euer redeemed, for then had they been ſaued: (he doing whatſoeuer he willeth, Pſal.115.3.) but it is to be meant in regard of themſelues and other men: for both in their owne conceit & iudgement they were redeemed, as alſo in the iudgement of others, who are to bee led by the rule of charitie in paſſing their iudgement vpon men, and to account of them as redeemed, leauing all ſecret iudgements to God. Secondly, the deſcription of Chriſt, by three things: firſt, that he is a Ruler, yea an only ruler, a Lord and ruler ouer all things in generall, in heauen, earth, and hell: and more ſpecially a Lord ouer his elect onely: and in that he is ſaid to be an onely ruler, it muſt not bee meant as excluding the Father and holie Ghoſt, but all falſe gods, and falſe Chriſts; as Ioh.17.3. the Father is called the onely God: for all outward actions of the Trinitie are common to all the perſons. Secondly, that hee is God: which which is a notable place againſt all Arrians to prooue the Godhead of Chriſt. Thirdly, he is ſaid to be our Lord: Ours in two reſpects eſpecially: firſt, of the free donation of his Father, who gaue to him a people to be Lord and King ouer before all worlds. Secondly, in regard of his worke of redemption which hee wrought for them, who were of the Father giuen vnto him.

Out of that which hath bin here ſaid, we may note theſe two points: firſt, how theſe ſeducers denie Chriſt: namely, not openly and plainly, for then the Church ſhould haue eſpied them; neither in word nor ſpeech, for in word they profeſſed him: but in their deedes denied him, liuing after their owne luſts, and encouraging others in the ſame courſe, Titus 1.16. And this ſinne is reuiued and renewed in this our age, wherein too many outwardly and in word profeſſe Chriſt, come to the Word and Sacraments; but couertly and in their deedes denie him, whoſe liues are very full of epicuriſme, and earthlines, and mouthes filled with blaſphemies and reproches againſt true obedience, which of them is counted too much nicenes, and preciſenes. Theſe are the diſciples of the old Heretiques, whom (without repentance) the like feareſull iudgements awaite, which befell them. Secondly, we may obſerue in what regards they deny Chriſt; namely, firſt in regard of his Godhead, by withſtanding the meanes of that power of Chriſt, whereby (hauing redeemed them) he would ſanctifie their hearts to obedience. The merit of his redemption is welcome to them, but they will none of the efficacie of it, which ſanctifieth and reneweth the inner man, ſubdueth ſinne, and quickneth the life of God in them. Secondly, in regard of his Lordſhip, by denying him obedience, which as to a Lord is due vnto him: A Redeemer they would haue him, but not a Lord; ſo euery man would haue portion in Chriſts redemption, but their luſts muſt be their Lords, and they ſeruants to ſinne and Satan: but theſe bee thoſe enemies that will not that he ſhould raigne ouer them, who ſhall be brought and ſlaine before him. Our part then is (if euer wee would finde comfort in Chriſt) to make him our Lord: his counſell is, that thoſe that are laden ſhould come vnto him for eaſe; but the next words are take my yoke vpon thee; and if wee would haue him our iuſtification, let him become alſo our ſanctification.

We eaſily acknowledge Chriſt a Ieſus, but hardly a Lord.

Luk.19.27.

Mat.11.29.

Verſ.5. I will therefore put you in remembrance, for as much as ye once knew this, how that the Lord after that he had deliuered the people out of Egypt, deſtroyed them afterward which beleeued not.]

THe Apoſtle hauing propounded his principall exhortation to contend and fight for the faith, verſ.3. with the reaſon thereof, verſ.4. doth here begin to anſwere a ſecret obiection which might bee made againſt that reaſon, thus: Theſe ſeducers profeſſe Chriſt, and looke for ſaluation by him; what danger then can redound if we ſhould ioyne our ſelues vnto them? This obiection is anſwered from this fifth verſe vnto the twentith; in all which verſes hee diſputeth at large that there is great daunger herein, ſeeing their end ſhall be deſtruction: the ſumme of which diſputation is contained in this reaſon: All ſuch perſons as giue themſelues libertie to ſinne ſhal be deſtroyed: But theſe ſeducers giue themſelues libertie to ſinne; and therefore ſhall be deſtroyed. The former part of which reaſon is contained in the 5.6.7. verſes; and the latter from the 8. vnto the 20. The former propoſition is not plainly ſet downe in ſo many words, but the proofe of it onely by an induction and enumeration of examples of ſinners, which haue bin deſtroyed; and they be three in number: firſt of the Iſraelites, in the 5. verſe: ſecondly of the Angels, in the 6. verſe: thirdly, of Sodom and Gomorrha, in the 7. verſe.

In this 5. verſe are two things to bee conſidered: firſt the preface, in theſe words: I will therefore put you in remembrance, for as much as you once knew this. Secondly, the firſt example whereby the point in hand is prooued in the words following. The preface ſerueth to preuent an obiection which might be made by the Church reading theſe examples; that Iude teacheth them nothing but things which they knew well enough before: to which he anſwereth, that his intent is not to teach them any new thing, or any vnknowne thing, but to bring knowne things to their remembrance: and in it three things are to bee obſerued: Firſt, the Apoſtles practiſe: I will therefore put you in remembrance.] Where note the office of all Paſtors and Teachers, which is not onely to teach things vnknowne, but to repeate and to bring into remembrance things known before. This was Peters care, 2. Pet. 1. 12. though they had knowledge to put them in remembrance: and chap. 3. 1. to ſtirre vp and warue their pure mindes; giuing vs to vnderſtand, that knowledge in the minde lieth as embers vnder aſhes, and needes daily ſtirring vp. Which admoniſheth all hearers not to be offended if they heare the ſame thing often, ſeeing it is the dutie of Miniſters to teach the ſame thing often. Yea hearers which haue vnderſtanding in the Scriptures, muſt be content if they heare nothing but that which they haue bin out of the Scriptures acquainted with before, ſeeing the Apoſtle thinketh it meet to teach nothing elſe.

Secondly, in this preface obſerue the propertie of the Church, which is to know the hiſtories and examples of Scripture. Chriſt commanded his hearers to ſearch the Scriptures: the Apoſtle wiſheth that the Scriptures dwell plentiouſly in men: which exhortations (no doubt) ſtirred them vp to haue the ſcriptures familiar vnto them, euen as Timothie knew the Scriptures of a childe. The ſtate of our times is farre otherwiſe; for Miniſters cannot ſay as Iude ſpeaketh, for as much as you know theſe things, I will put you in remembrance: but our people pleade and profeſſe ignorance, yea that the knowledge of the ſcriptures belongeth not vnto them (they being not booke learned) but to ſchollers and Miniſters that liue by it. But wee ought to account it a propertie of euery Saint of God, who is iuſtified and ſanctified, to know the Scriptures, which onely are able to make them wiſe vnto ſaluation.

The third point in the preface is a ſecond propertie of the Saints, namely that they once know] that is, they know certainly, vnchangeably, and once for all, neuer to reuoke or alter this knowledge: which firſt informeth vs what to thinke and iudge of thoſe men, who becauſe of diuerſitie of opinions, will be of no religion, nor beleeue any thing vntill it be determined by ſome generall Councell; theſe want this propertie of the Saints, and are plaine Atheiſts. Secondly, it teacheth vs to hold our religion certainly, receiuing it once for all vnchangeably. In humane things wee may often without danger chaunge our mindes and deliberate; but grounds of Religion muſt be out of al queſtion, and admit no deliberation.

Now followeth the firſt example, whereby the firſt part of the former reaſon is prooued, and that is of the Iſraelites, who wittingly and willingly ſinning againſt God were deſtroyed, as appeareth Numb. 14. In which example conſider foure things: firſt, who were deſtroyed, [the people]. Secondly, the time when [after that hee had deliuered them out of Egypt]. Thirdly, for what cauſe, [which beleeued not]. Fourthly, the manner of the ſpeech. For the firſt, the perſons who were deſtroyed were the people; by which word is meant a ſpeciall people, a peculiar and choſen people, the ſeede of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, a people priuiledged aboue all people of the earth; to whom belonged the couenant, ſacrifices, worſhippe, of whom Chriſt came according to the fleſh, Rom. 3. 2. and 9. 4. notwithſtanding all which prerogatiues the Lord deſtroyed them. If it had been a Heathen people againſt whom this deſtruction had preuailed, it had been worthie obſeruation, but much more when it is againſt Gods owne people.

Here then we learne, that no outward priuiledge can auaile vs; nor any outward meanes of ſaluation bee effectuall or fruitful to our good, out of their right vſe in faith and repentance. Rom. 2. 25. Circumciſion is nothing, vnleſſe thou keepe the law. Gal. 6. Neither Circumciſion auaileth, nor vncircumciſion, but a new creature. Iudas had many great priuiledges, and yet periſhed. This made Paul, though he had many priuiledges, to account them all as dung, in regard of the knowledge of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 8. We muſt not then content our ſelues with the meanes of ſaluation in the Word and Sacraments, but vſe them aright in faith and repentance; otherwiſe they (being out of their holy vſe enioyed) ſhall turne to our deſtruction and greater condemnation, as they did to this people who (notwithſtanding them) were deſtroied.

He is a Iew that is one within.

The ſecond thing in the example is, the time when the Iſraelites were deſtroyed, that is, after their deliuerance out of

of Egypt. God had diuerſly teſtified his loue to this people, hauing choſen them out of all the people of the earth, he called himſelfe their God, and hee gaue them many pledges of his loue, but eſpecially in that their great deliuerance out of the bondage of Egypt by ſuch an outſtretched arme: yet for all this not long after they ſinning againſt him, hee deſtroyed them. Whence learne, that after many great bleſſings, men not walking worthie of them, but prouoking the Lord by their ſins, commeth a great vengeance. The whole booke of the Iudges is a worthie proofe of this truth, where wee ſhall ſee the people ſtill forgetting their deliuerance, and are forthwith left to Tyrants to bee afflicted for tenne, twentie, fourtie yeeres together. The ſame appeareth in the Commonwealth of Iſrael vnder the Kings: In the daies of Salomon the ſtate was moſt floriſhing and glorious, enioying a moſt happie peace: but Salomon once forgetting the Lord and his Commandements, and falling to the Idolatrie of his outlandiſh wiues, there followed moſt fearefull accidents; as the diuiſion and rent of the tenne Tribes from Iudah, a long diſſention and hot warre between Reboboam and Ieroboam, whoſe Idolatries brought much euill vpon their ſeuerall lands, and at laſt vtter deſolation; the tenne Tribes being carried into Syria captiues, and there ended their daies, the other two Tribes into Babylon, and there remained 70. yeeres, which iudgements ouertook them about 400. yeeres after. Iacob when hee went ouer Iordan made a vow to the Lord, that if God would bleſſe him, and giue him but food and raiment, he would in way of thankfulnes returne to the Lord the tenth part of his goods, Gen. 28. 22. God bleſſeth him ſo farre as hee became a mightie man, hauing the ſubſtance of a Prince; in this abundance he forgat his vow, or neglected it: but what followed of it? was there not horrible confuſion in his familie? Dinah was deflowred; Ruben aſcended to his fathers bed, Hamor was ſlaine, and the Lord is glad to call to minde his vow, Gen. 35. 1.

Great vengeance followeth the vnthankful receit of great bleſſings.

Vſe. This doctrine concerneth vs neerely in this land, who by Gods mercie haue enioyed many of his beſt bleſſings in this our long peace, hauing bin deliuered from the Egypt of Rome, and haue ſat vnder the Lords protection all the day long: but as our bleſſings haue been and are many and great, ſo haue been and are our rebellions raging amongſt vs, eſpecially that ſinne of falling from our firſt loue, ſo as leſſe loue of God and religion is to bee found amongſt vs than heretofore; beſides that our peace cauſeth men to make their heauen here vpon earth, and to embrace and affect things below: theſe ſins vnrepented of, will bring vpon vs daies of affliction, wee hauing no more priuiledge than this people had, who after their deliuerance were deſtroyed. Englands ſinne.

The third point in this deſtruction is the cauſe of it: namely, becauſe they beleeued not: here firſt obſerue what kind of vnbeleefe this was. To the anſwere of which, we muſt know, that firſt God had promiſed to Abraham, that after 430. yeeres hee would giue to his poſteritie the land of Canaan for their inheritance: this promiſe they all knew well inough. Secondly, it was often repeated, & renued, and namely to Moſes; vnto whom the Lord promiſed that he ſhould be their guide, yea and that himſelfe would protect them in their iournie, and ſafely conduct them thither. Thirdly, God ſealed this promiſe by many and ſundrie ſignes and miracles, both in Egypt, at the red ſea, and in the wilderneſſe: yet for all this they beleeued not, that God would accompliſh theſe promiſes vnto them, to bring them to that good land: and further, ſeeing the land of Canaan was a type of that heauenlie Canaan, they beleeued not that God would bring them to heauen, and giue them inheritance in that eternall reſt by meanes of the Meſſias. This vnbeleefe then of the promiſes of God was the cauſe of their deſtruction.

Secondly, why are they deſtroyed for vnbeleefe, rather then for their murmuring, fornication, and diuerſe other ſinnes which wee reade of to haue been rife among them? Anſ. Although they murmured, blaſphemed, tempted God, reuiled their guides, &c. yet this ſinne of vnbeleefe was the foundation and ground of them all; the which doth the more diſpleaſe God, in that it was the firſt ſinne that euer was in the world, and the mother of all tranſgreſſion. Secondly, this ſinne in a more ſpeciall

τα ἁμαρτία.

manner

manner dishonoreth God in making him a lyer; and so toucheth his honour more neerely.

Thirdly, what was this destruction? An. It was the destruction of their soules and bodies, for their carcasses were left in the wildernesse where they fell; and their soules haue their portion in the lake prepared for vnbeleeuers, Reuel. 21. For the further hatred of this sinne, see 2. Kings 7. 19. the Prince who would not beleeue the word of the Lord was troden to death: and Moses not waiting, but failing in his faith, was barred the land of Canaan, and onely saw it a farre off.

Vse. Seeing destruction followeth vnbeleefe, we must labour to see our vnbeleefe, and take out that exhortation, Heb. 3. 12. Take heede least there be in any of vs an euill heart of vnbeleefe, to depart away from the liuing God: which place well considered, sheweth what are the degrees of falling away which are studiously to bee declined: as first, when a man is deceiued by sin, and giueth himselfe libertie thereunto. Secondly, when the heart is hardened and made an euill heart. Thirdly, when infidelitie taketh possession of the hart to rule it, and cause it to call in question Gods promises, and prouidence. Fourthly, then followeth apostasie and departure from God: now wee must beware of the least and lowest of these degrees of this defection and departure from God. Secondly, if they were destroyed for vnbeleefe, wee must on the contrarie exercise our faith daily, and inure it in the daily apprehension of Gods prouidence, power, protection, iustice, and mercie: and thus walking vndismaid, we which haue thus beleeued shall enter into the rest prepared for the people of God, when as many shall not enter for vnbeleefes sake, Heb. 4. 3. and 6. Euen as Caleb and Iosua only entred into that good land, because they beleeued that God could and would bring his people thither. Thirdly, this must teach vs obedience: for vpon this ground that they were destroyed for vnbeleefe, Dauid inferreth this cõsequent, Psal. 95. To day therefore if ye heare his voyce, harden not your hearts: which Moses also maketh the ground of his exhortation to the people to feare the Lord, because these men were destroyed for vnbeleefe, Deut. 11. 2. &c. Fourthly, in that destruction of bodie and soule followes of vnbeleefe, let such persons as (when iudgements are vpon themselues, wiues, or children) runne to Witches, and Wizards for ease, as though they were bewitched, and make that the ground of their harmes, bee enformed that their owne wretched hearts haue bewitched them; which being full of vnbeleefe, bring plagues of al kinds not onely vpon their bodies, but their soules also. Art thou strangely diseased? the witch that hath brought it vpon thee, is thy owne wicked heart, which knoweth not to relie it selfe on Gods promises and protection. Fiftly, were they destroyed because of their vnbeleefe? let not vs iudge of our sinnes by the crooked rule of our owne reason, but by the law of God: wee can iudge murther, theft, and adulterie, great sins; but wee neuer espie the mother sin of all, which is our infidelitie, the maine sinne of the first Table, and the nurcerie of other sins, we neuer bewaile it, we account lightly of it, and therefore the Lord taketh the reuenge of this sin into his owne hands, and punisheth it with destruction both of soule and bodie; so odious it is in his eyes, and ought therefore to bee as hainous in ours also.

The wretched heart of vnbeleeuers is the witch which afflicteth thē.

The fourth thing in the example is the manner of the speech, which at the first seemeth to bee generall, as though all they had been destroyed which beleeued not; whereas indeed it is special, for all that beleeued not were not destroyed, seeing that all vnder twentie yeeres were exempted and saued, Num. 14. 29. who were reserued that God might still haue his Church among the, and that there might be of them a people left to possesse the good land, according to the promise: where note that to bee true which Habacucke ascribeth to God, that in his iustice he remembreth mercie; by which mercie the younger sort are here spared; which warranteth vs to pray in common iudgements, that the Lord powre not out his whole wrath vpon vs; neither in our temptations vtterly forsake vs, and giue vs ouer to Satans malice, seeing hee hath manifested such goodnes towards his Church, that in iudgements he hath remembred his mercie. But here it may bee asked, how this can stand with equitie that euen these men should bee destroyed, for it Habac. 3. 2.

ſeemeth that they repented of this ſin? Numb. 14. 40. yea they confeſſed it and mourned for it, and offered to paſſe into Canaan, yea and were very readie to haſten into the land? Anſ. They repented indeed, but fainedly, it was farre from true and ſincere repentance and ſorrow; for euen in the very ſame place it appeareth that they diſobeyed God; for when he had paſſed ſentence againſt their ſin, commanding that they ſhould returne into the wildernes of Arabia, verſ. 25. and there abide fourtie yeeres and die there; they would not ſubmit themſelues to that ſentence, but in all haſte they would goe forward to Canaan, according to the promiſe; although againſt a particular commandement: yea Moſes himſelfe could not ſtay them: but that brought on their neckes a more ſpeedie deſtruction, as appeareth in the end of the Chapter. Whence note the wicked nature of the deceitfull heart of man, which in diſtreſſe when Gods hand is ſtretched out againſt it, can faine a falſe repentance, and counterfeite humiliation: which cauſeth many a man in ſickneſs to vow amendement of life, if euer God raiſe him againe; and yet as ſoone as the ſcourge is ouerpaſſed, he forgetteth the hand of God, his owne vowes and promiſes, and falleth backe into the ſame bad courſes againe: which conſideration may mooue vs to watch ouer our hearts, and ſuſpect them of this deceit, whereby they can frame and faine a falſe repentance, when indeede there is nothing leſſe then ſoundnes in it.

The fifth point in this iudgement is the generall vſe of it; namely, that wee ſhould frame our ſelues to repentance for this particular ſin of vnbeliefe, vpon which we behold ſuch a fearefull deſtruction in Gods owne people. To the practiſe and performance of which we muſt doe foure things: firſt, laying aſide the common perſwaſion of the fulnes of perfection of our faith, we muſt come to the diſcerning of this ſin in our ſelues, which is the firſt ſtep to repent of it, and the rather becauſe it is our mother ſin. Now becauſe this ſinne is ſo inward and ſecret, and ſo hardly to be diſcerned, for our helpe herein ſome directions may be giuen for the eſpeciall of it in ſome ſignes and fruites thereof; which euery man ſhall find in himſelfe leſſe or more. For firſt, we beleeue not as we ought the particular preſence of God in all places and times towards vs: for we are aſhamed to doe and ſpeake many things in the preſence of men, which in the preſence of God (men not being by) wee make no bones of, either to ſpeake or doe; ſo as mans preſence keepeth vs in ſome awe, which Gods preſence cannot doe.

Vnbeleefe vnmasked in many particulars.

Secondly, wee beleeue not the particular prouidence of God, watching ouer vs; but either not regard it at all, or not as wee ought; which appeareth by theſe three things: firſt, if wee haue health, wealth, friends, fauour & means, we are well contented, we can think our ſelues very well, and can then relie our ſelues on God: but if God take theſe away; oh then wee are troubled, much diſquieted and diſcontented; the reaſon whereof is, becauſe the heart is not ſetled in the perſwaſion of Gods ſpecial prouidence: which if it haue a pledge of God, can truſt him; otherwiſe not at all: but as the Vſurer truſteth not the man, but his pawne; ſo men relying themſelues on theſe pledges, truſt neither God himſelfe, nor for himſelfe. Secondly, in any diſtreſſe let our friend promiſe vs helpe, wee are well cheered; but let God in his word promiſe ſupply of all good, and eaſe in our troubles, we reape little or no comfort from thence; this is a manifeſt fruite of inbred vnbeleefe. Thirdly, in ſickneſs or any iudgement, any meanes is vſed for eaſe and freedome; yea there is too common running and riding to Witches, Charmers, Cunning men, and women; for men waite not on God, nor expect the ſame hand in healing them which hath ſmitten them. He that beleeueth maketh not haſte (ſaith the Prophet) which if it be true, then this haſtines to be diſburdened of the hand of God, is a token of diſtruſtfulnes of God, and want of faith. Nay, this practiſe argueth not only want of a true faith, but a preſence of a falſe and Satanicall faith: for if there bee no faith in the Charme, it will not worke.

Thirdly, wee beleeue not the Lord to be the Lord of bodie and ſoule, as one hauing ſoueraigne Lordſhip and power, to ſaue and deſtroy: for let any ciuill man be preſſed by temptation vnto ſin, he will bee eaſily brought to make no bones of very dangerous ſinnes: what other is the reaſon hereof, but that hee eſteemeth eſteemeth not the Lord to be his Lord? and accounteth of his commandements but as dreames, not ſerious or giuen in earneſt? whereas if Gods Lordſhip were rightly acknowledged, ſinne would not be ſo ripe and rife as it is.

Fourthly, wee beleeue not the mercie of God in the pardon of our ſinne as we ought: for howſoeuer in our peace wee thinke our faith ſtrong enough for any encounter, yet let a temptatiō aſſaile vs, then we begin to doubt whether we be the children of God or no, and are full of impatiencie. Example hereof we haue euen in Iob himſelf, who before his triall thought himſelfe ſafe in his neſt; but when Gods hand was heauy vpon him, then he brake foorth in ſpeeches full of impatiencie; as that God was his enemie; and did write bitter things againſt him: wherein he bewraied his want of faith, and his crooked and cankered incredulitie: and the ſame weakenes may the deareſt & ſtrongeſt of Gods childrē one time or other eſpie in themſelues.

Fiftly, wee know not as we ſhould the agonie and paſſion of Chriſt; he ſuffered the firſt death and the paines of the ſecond death for our ſinnes, they were the ſpeares that pearced his heart; but we carrie vp our heads, and can take delight in them, as though there were no danger in them: whereas the remembrance of them ſhould make our hearts to bleede, and faith in the heart ſhould cauſe vs die to ſinne, ſeeing thoſe who are Chriſts are crucified with him: but becauſe men wil not depart from their ſins which are not killed, but liue and are ſtrong in them, and no man ſaith what haue I done? it is a plaine euidence that the life of faith is not to be found in the liues of moſt men.

Sixthly, wee beleeue not that wee did riſe with Chriſt, and aſcended with him into heauen: becauſe in this our long peace, our thoughts are ſet vpon the world, and we mind earthly things ſtill; whereas if we were riſen with Chriſt, we would ſeeke the things that be aboue, Coloſſ. 3. 1.

Seuenthly, we doe not beleeue as we ought the laſt iudgement: becauſe wee are not ſmitten with feare and reuerence in ſpeaking and meditating of it. Paul ſpeaking of it, calleth it, the terrors of the Lord, 2. Cor. 5. 11. and this made him ſo forward in al good duties; yea this ſame conſideration of the laſt iudgemēt made him endeuour to keepe a good conſcience before God and all men: but men make no conſcience of their waies.

Eightly, wee beleeue not aright our owne death and reſurrection in the laſt day: for men commonly deferre their repentance and amendement of life, till the laſt day of their daies, and then they crie and call on the bed of their ſorrowes; which argues a counterfeit faith: for if a man did beleeue his death, it would driue him to the daily amendement of his life. By theſe notes we may eaſily diſcerne this ſecret ſinne of vnbeleeſe within our ſelues.

Secondly, when wee haue thus found out this ſinne wee muſt bewaile it, and mourne for our vnbeleefe, as being the mother of all our ſinnes, confeſſe it before God, and craue increaſe of faith, as the man in the Goſpell, Lord I beleeue, helpe my vnbeleefe: and with the Diſciples, Lord increaſe our faith.

Thirdly, we muſt ſet before our eyes and acquaint our ſelues with the promiſes of the pardon of ſinne and life euerlaſting by Chriſt: as alſo all other dependant promiſes, whereof ſome concerne our proſperous ſucceſſe in our waies, and Gods protection in our labours and callings: and others concerne afflictions, promiſing happie iſſue and deliuerance therefrom, with ſtrength in temptation, to the which all promiſes may be referred: which we muſt alwaies haue in our eye, that our faith may ground it ſelfe vpon them.

Fourthly, we muſt truly relie and reſt our ſelues in theſe promiſes, ſettle and content our hearts in them: that looke as the earth hangeth without proppe or pillar in the middeſt of the world, onely by the word of God; ſo muſt our hearts be ſtaied in the ſame word and promiſe of God: yea if wee ſhould ſee nothing but deſtruction before our eies, our faith muſt then be our ſubſiſtence: and when our vnbeleeſe would vnlooſen our hold, and make vs giue backe, let our faith in theſe promiſes make reſiſtance: as Dauid, Pſal. 42. 5. My ſoule why art thou ſo diſquieted within me? truſt ſtill in God: eſpecially ſeeing wee haue promiſes which aſſure vs in our troubles, either of their mitigation or remouall: after all theſe followeth the ſubiection of faith, when the heart and life are conformed to the obedience of all the Commandements of God. And thus we purging our harts of vnbeleefe, shall escape such fearefull iudgements, as this first example hath put vs in minde of.

Vers. 6. The Angels also which kept not their first estate, but left their owne habitation, hee hath reserued in euerlasting chaines vnder darknes, vnto the iudgement of the great day.

THese words comprehend the second example, whereby the first part of the former reason is confirmed: namely, that whosoeuer giue themselues libertie to sinne, shall be destroyed; here proued by this example of the Angels themselues. In which consider three points: first, the persons that sinned; The Angels.] Secondly, the sinne or fall of the Angels; which kept not their first estate, but left their owne habitation.] Thirdly, their punishment; he hath reserued in euerlasting chaines.] In the persons sinning wee haue sundrie considerations; as first, that it pleaseth the spirit of God to chuse this example of the Angels to proue his purpose, and that most fitly: because they are the excellencie of all creatures, for so the Scriptures euery where speake of them: as when the highest praise that belongeth to inferiour creatures is attributed vnto them in Scripture; the speech is drawne from the glorie of Angels. Gen. 33. Iacob commending the fauourable countenance of Esau, being reconciled vnto him, saith he saw his face Psal. 78. 25. as the face of an Angell. So Manna is called Angels foode: that is, a most excellent foode, that if those excellent creatures should neede foode, they could wish no better. 1. Cor. 13. 1. Though I should speake with the tongue of men and Angels. Signifying that if Angels had tongues, they must needs bee most admirable, diuine, and excellent. Dauid speaking of the glorie that man once had, and in admiration of it, being not able to containe himselfe, breaketh Psal. 8. 5. out into a speech full of passion: O Lord what is man that thou art so mindfull of him! thou hast made him little inferiour to the Angels. Shewing that the chiefe glorie of men in their best estate is inferiour to the excellent condition of Angels. Yea further, it is a part of the glorie of God to be attended of them, and a part of our glorie after the resurrection to be like them. Whence note the scope of the Apostle, which is hence to teach vs, that no glorie, beautie, or excellencie of the creature can exempt it from the punishment of sin, when it falleth thereinto: nay, the more glorious the sinfull creature is, the more grieuous punishment may it expect, if sinne be found therein; as the Angels here: which may instruct those who are in these schooles of the Prophets, in which many men excell in rare gifts, of whom in regard of their wisedome and knowledge may bee said, as the woman of Tekoah said of Dauid, 2. Sam. 14. 17. My Lord is as an Angell of God to heare good and bad. And they are the Angels of the Lord of hostes, Malac. 2. 7. Yet for all this let them not be puffed vp hereby, but walke in feare and trembling, not emboldening themselues to sinne: for bee it they were as the Angels in gifts; yet if they sinne, they shall be as Angels in punishment also.

Secondly, hence note that Angels are substances, though inuisible, hauing being, life, sense, and vnderstanding, and are not onely qualities; for pure qualities neither can sin, nor be capable of punishment, as the Angels are here said to be. Ob. It will be said, seeing they are capable of punishment, they must be bodily substances. Ans. No: it is sufficient they be substances to be capable of punishment, though spirituall; for the punishment of hell is spirituall. Where wee see the Sadduces and others euen of our daies are deceiued, who thinke Angels to be nothing but Motions, and melancholy passions: and the Libertines also who thinke they are nothing but good and bad successe.

Thirdly, the name Angell is not a name of nature, but of office: which signifieth that their office was to be the messengers of God, who were to stand round about him as attendants, readie to be sent foorth at his pleasure, for the execution of his will, in all the parts of the world. In which function of theirs they are propounded patternes to vs, and examples for our imitation: who ought accordingly to set our selues euer in the presence of God, as prest, and readie to performe his will: for so wee pray daily, Let thy will be done in earth, λειτουργικὰ πνεύματα εἰς διακονίαν &c. Heb. 1. 10.

as it is in heauen; that is, Giue vs grace with cheerefulnes and readines to performe thy will here on earth, as the Angels in heauen do: for whoſoeuer would be like the Angels in heauen, muſt be herein like them firſt in earth. Now in that this name is here giuen to the Diuels and wicked ſpirits, it ſheweth two things: firſt, what their office was in the creation, vnto which they were fitted and deputed. Secondly, the iuſtice of their puniſhment for the neglect of the execution of the ſame.

Fourthly, obſerue the diſtinction of Angels; of which ſome kept their firſt eſtate, others (of which hee here ſpeaketh) left their firſt condition: ſome ſtoode, and ſome fell: the ground of which diſtinction Paul mentioneth 1.Tim.5.21. I charge thee before God and his elect Angels. Some therefore are elected, and (becauſe election preſuppoſeth a refuſall) others are reiected; no other cauſe of this diſtinction is known to man, but the will of God, and his good pleaſure. Ob. If any man ſay, it was becauſe God foreſaw that ſome would fall, and others would ſtand. I anſwere, that is no cauſe: for God did not onely foreſee the fall of ſome, but decreed alſo before all worlds to confirme ſome in their ſtate, and to paſſe by others in his iuſtice: ſo as the cauſe ſhall euer reſt in his good will, which willing the ſame maketh it moſt iuſt, not giuing vs any leaue otherwiſe to diſpute of this doctrine, or curiouſly to ſearch out the ſecrets of it, but rather to ſtand in admiration, and ſay with Paul: Rom.11.33 O the depth of the riches both of the wiſedome and knowledge of God! how vnſearchable are his iudgements, and his waies paſt finding out!

Now followeth the ſecond point, namely, the fall of the Angels: in which obſerue three points: firſt, the cauſe: ſecondly, the parts: thirdly, the meaſure of the fall. The cauſe of their fal in theſe words; which kept not their firſt eſtate, but left their habitation; themſelues were the cauſe of their own fall; which is thus prooued: Either God muſt be the cauſe of their ſin, or man, or themſelues; but neither God nor man: and therefore themſelues. Firſt, God cannot be the cauſe: for that were iniuſtice to condemne them for that which himſelfe cauſed; how vnrighteous were it, firſt to cauſe them to fall, and then to puniſh them for falling? Obiect. But it will be ſaid, that God did foreſee their fall, and might haue preuented it, and ſo not hindring it hee ſeemeth to bee a cauſe of it. Anſ. Whoſoeuer foreſeeth an euill, and hindreth it not when hee may, is acceſſarie vnto it, ſo be he be bound to hinder it: but God was not bound to hinder it, being a moſt abſolute Lord, not bound to any of his creatures further than he bindeth himſelfe. Ob. But God did not confirme them in that grace which he gaue them; whereupon they fell: whereas if he had confirmed them they had ſtood; whence carnall reaſon concludeth God to bee the cauſe of the fall. Anſw. God gaue them grace in creating them righteous, but confirmed them not therein; he gaue them a power to will to perſeuere, but gaue them not the will nor perſeuerance it ſelfe, and yet he is not to bee blamed, becauſe he would not doe it. Queſt. Why would hee not? Anſ. I anſwere with the Apoſtle, What art thou O man that diſputeſt with God? Rom.9.20. Let vs without further reaſoning ſtay our ſelues in theſe two concluſions: firſt, that God is an abſolute Lord; neither bound to any action, neither to giue reaſon of any: ſecondly, that hee doth all to the glorie of his name, in the manifeſtation of his mercie and iuſtice. Secondly, as God is no cauſe or author of this fall of Angels, no more is man; for the Angels fell firſt, and were the cauſe of mans fall, and therefore themſelues were the proper cauſe of their owne fall. Qu. How can this be? Anſ. The Angels had in themſelues the proper cauſe, and beginning of their own fall; and that was a free & flexible will, whereby for the preſent they willed that which was good, and might will to perſeuere in it: but that will being mutable, they might alſo will euill and ſo fall from God, this being the ſame will that Adam had in the ſtate of innocencie.

Obiect. Good trees cannot bring foorth euill fruite: therefore the Angels being good, could not ſinne of themſelues. Anſw. A good tree remaining good bringeth foorth good fruite; but being changeable may bring forth euill. So much of the cauſe of the fall of Angels.

The

The second thing in their fall is the parts of it, which here are two: first, They kept not their first beginning. Secondly, They left their owne habitation. First they fell from their first estate: which words are expounded Ioh.8.44. they stood not in the truth. By this truth is meant the image of God in righteousnes and true holines, Eph.4.24. and this image is truly called [truth] because it neuer deceiueth men, as vnrighteousnes doth; which maketh a glorious shew of pleasure, or profit, but indeede it deceiueth men, who finde nothing lesse therein. Secondly, because herein is no hypocrisie, it maketh no shew or appearance of other, than indeed it is, as the manner of falsehood is. The sense then is, that the Angels voluntarily departed from their originall condition, and stood not in that image of God wherein they were created. The second part of this one sinne is, that they left their habitation; which a man might esteeme but a small matter, but yet the sinne is not small: for God in the beginning appointed most excellent places for his seuerall creatures; wherein they were to performe their seruice and homage vnto God; as Heauen was the proper place assigned to Angels: to man Paradise in his innocencie; as after his fall the families of the Patriarches; before and in Christs time the Temple: since that time, the societies and congregations of the faithfull are these places appointed for man to set out the speciall praises of the Creator in. Now the Angels leauing their place incurred two grieuous sinnes: first, they left the presence of God: secondly, their office and calling, in which they ought for euer to haue been employed in the glorifying of God. Ob. But doe not the Diuels keepe in the ayre? Ans. Some of them doe by Gods permission, but not as in their proper place, or first habitation, for that was in the comfortable presence of God in heauen. The third point in this sinne is the measure of it: They left: that is, wholly and totally [their condition], they quite forsooke God, his image, heauen it selfe, and that office which therein they were assigned vnto. Obiect. Here it may bee obiected: If the Angels in their innocencie and excellencie fell wholy and vtterly from God, much more may sinfull men, although beleeuers, wholy fall from God, and vtterly cut themselues by sinne from Christ. Ans. But I answere, that there is not the same reason of the grace of creation, as is of the grace of regeneration: for that commeth farre short of this: by the former the creature hath a power either to stand or fall, to abide with God, or depart from him, and this power is in it selfe: but by this latter grace of regeneration, such feare of God is put into the hearts of the regenerate, that they shall not depart from God, Iere.32.40. and this power of not falling is in them indeed, but not from themselues: neither is it strange that there should bee such difference betweene the state of nature and that which is aboue nature. Againe, as the grace of creation and regeneration is different; so there is a difference of the will created, and regenerate. Created will hath a freedome to will that which is good: so hath the will regenerate also. Secondly, created will hath a power to will to perseuere in that which is good: so also hath the will regenerate. The created will hath not the will it selfe, neither the act of perseuerance: wherein it differeth from the will regenerate, which hath both these. Heere the Schoolemen deceiued themselues and others, in that they taught that in the conuersion of a sinner the will hath a freedome to receiue grace, or not to receiue it; so placing it in the will of man, and putting it in his own hand and power to beleeue, or not beleeue. But the truth is, that in the first conuersion of a sinner the will rebelleth and resisteth: For none commeth to the Sonne, vnlesse the Father draw him: it is not the will it selfe, but the conuersion of it that frameth it to willingnes, making it of vnwilling, willing to entertaine that which is truly good. It is vntrue that the will of man is now as the will of Angels was before their fall, hauing a power to fall, or not fall.

So called, not because the other is not also created, but because this is in the subiect by creation, as the other is not.

Vse. First, in that the Angels were condemned for forsaking their first beginning, we must bewaile this same sin in our selues, for we also had the same first beginning with them: the same image of God was ingrauen vpon vs, which we haue willingly departed from, and that remaineth for vs to doe, which belongeth not to them, to vse all meanes to obtaine our first beginnings againe, that this image may be restored vnto vs, and renued vpon vs; vnto which three things are required: first, that our spirituall vnderstanding be cleered, and enlightened: secondly, that a good heart and conscience bee gotten and preserued: thirdly, a subiection in our whole conuersation vnto all the lawes and commandements of God.

Secondly, though we haue the same beginning by creation, which is lost by our fall; yet wee haue another beginning, by a new birth and regeneration, which they want; we haue been borne, baptized, and brought vp many yeeres in the true faith, and profession of Christ; now our dutie is to bee more wise than before, to be warie lest wee fall from this beginning, as wee haue done from the former; but cleaue to our faith, and stand to our vow made in our Baptisme: for otherwise our estate becommeth as remediless as the condition of the Angels themselues, who are shut vp in the chaines of condemnation for euer.

Thirdly, we see how farre the Scriptures may bee said to bee sufficient to cleere all doubtes and determine all controuersies, seeing here it onely propoundeth a generall sinne of Angels, and nameth no particular, as Peter also saith, they sinned; and Iohn, that they stood not in the truth. Thus contenting it selfe with generall teames, without particularizing the proper sinne deseruing this iudgement; and determineth not that great question controuerted among Diuines, of whome some say it was a sinne in thought: others, that it was actuall: others, that it was enuie: some, Pride, &c. which maketh the Papists saye, that the Scriptures are not sufficient to determine all hard questions. But we must not imagine the Scriptures to be such a iudge as decideth all doubts, which the curiositie of mans braine may cast within it selfe; whereof there are innumerable among the ancient Schoolemen, such as this is by scripture indeterminable: nay of purpose the holy Ghost cutteth off all cause of such curiositie by silence in such vnnecessarie matters, that wee might the rather attend to more necessarie: yet is the Scripture a iudge sufficiently able to resolue any spirituall minded man in any case concerning conscience: or in any matter concerning saluation; all which it is the sole and proper determiner of: now as for the particular sin of Angels it is not necessarie to saluation to know it; but seeing the Scripture concealeth it, it is a safe and learned ignorance to be rested in, without further desire to know that which the Lord hath hid in secret with himselfe.

Fourthly, wee are hence taught to seeke to enter into our habitation and true resting place, which is not the earthly Paradise, for that was our dwelling place before the fall; but Heauen it selfe, which since the fall is assigned and prepared to be a rest for the people of God: this was the citie which Abraham looked for, Heb. 11. so the Saints departed are said to be at home with the Lord being in heauen. Christ telles his Disciples he goeth to prepare them these dwellings in heauen, Ioh. 14. which elsewhere he calleth euerlasting habitations. Make you friends of vnrighteous mammon, &c. Now for our better practise hereof, this must be marked, that howsoeuer this our habitation be in heauen, yet the suburbes and the gate of it is here in earth; for all the assemblies of the people of God are the doores and gates of heauen it selfe, yea the very entry into it. Iacob when he saw the testimonies and tokens of Gods presence and fauour, built an Altar in the place for his worship, and called it Bethel, and said it was the very gate of heauen, Gen. 28. 17. and therefore we must while we liue here seeke to enter, if we would be admitted within that glorie hereafter. Qu. But what meanes may wee vse to help vs forward herein? Ans. These fiue. First, wee must alwaies endeuour to be found readie to enter into that heauenly habitation; for which purpose our harts must be at this our home, yea our whole conuersation must be in heauen, whilest our selues are vpon earth, our walking must bee in the path of life euerlasting, still containing our selues in the waies of repentance, obedience, and daily mortification, whereby wee denie our selues, take vp our crosse and follow Christ. Secondly, wee must loue the assemblie of Gods people, and ioyne our selues vnto them in the holy vse of the Word and Sacraments, whereby wee draw neere vnto heauen it ſelfe: yea and keepe at the gates of this Citie, and with Dauid thinke it a ſpeciall priuiledge to be a doore-keeper in the houſe of God, Pſal. 84. Moſes choſe rather to ſuffer with the people of God great affliction, than to enioy the treaſures and honors of Pharaohs Court: yea euen wicked Cain himſelfe thought of this as the greateſt part of his puniſhment, and which he moſt complained of, that hee was caſt out from the face of God, that is, out of Adams familie, where Gods face was to be ſeene in his worſhip. Thirdly, we muſt weine our affections from our earthly inheritances, which are but Tents, that they may be fixed vpon this ſure habitation in heauen; without the aſſurance of which, all earthly reuenews and treaſures can adde but little comfort to the heart. Cain built a Citie, hee had beſides great lands and faire poſſeſſions; but yet euen then the holy Ghoſt brands him with the name of a Vagabond; becauſe he was cut off from Gods people, and cared not to ioyne himſelfe vnto them againe by repentance. Fourthly, we muſt euery day addreſſe and prepare our ſelues to our death, ſeeing our death is a meanes to bring vs home to this habitation: euery new day muſt occaſion vs to renew this our preparation: and this will cauſe vs neither to feare our owne, nor exceſſiuely to ſorrow at the departure of our faithfull friendes, ſeeing they haue paſſed theſe firſt things, and are onely gone before to their longed-for habitation. Fiftly, if God call vs hereunto, wee muſt bee contented to leaue and forſake goods, friends, natiue countrie, and all for aſſurance of inheritance in this our countrie; and if we cannot finde the doores hereof in our owne countrie, wee muſt ſeeke them elſewhere, where we may enioy them, making light reckoning of all things for this one thing of higheſt account.

The laſt vſe of this doctrine is, to teach vs from this ſinne of the Angels our contrarie dutie; they by their office were to doe homage vnto God, and performe all dutie as children to their father; for ſo Iob calleth them the ſonnes of God; but this office they departed from; we now being by adoption the ſonnes and daughters of God, being called vnto holineſſe, are to take heede of this ſinne of forſaking our calling; yea on the contrarie to walke worthie thereof, as the ſonnes of God, approouing our faithfulnes vnto him. And it ſtandeth vs in hand ſo to do, ſeeing the contrarie hath ſuch iuſt vengeance attending vpon it, as now in this example we are in the next place to behold.

The third point in this example is the puniſhment of the Angels, which hath two degrees: firſt, their cuſtodie, in theſe words: He hath reſerued them] namely in durance. Secondly, their full puniſhment: vnto the iudgement of the great day.] The former is ſet foorth in two things: firſt, in that they are reſerued in chaines. Secondly, vnder darkeneſs. By theſe chaines are ſignified firſt that mightie power of God, which bridleth and reſtraineth the might and malice of the Diuels themſelues; as Reu. 20. the old Dragon was bound for a thouſand yeeres: the power of God was the chaine that curbed and ouermaſtred him; and this is one part of his preſent puniſhment. Secondly, the chaines ſignifie alſo that guiltines of the Angels, which by the tenour of Gods iuſtice bindeth them ouer to deſtruction: theſe bonds be vpon the conſciences of the wicked Angels, they know they are adiudged to damnation for their ſinne; ſo as let them be where they will, in the earth or ayre, or whereſoeuer, theſe chaines of guiltie conſciences binde them ouer to iudgement: where we are taught two things, firſt, to beware of guiltie and accuſing conſciences; for theſe are Gods chaines binding bodie and ſoule vnto euerlaſting vengeance: and therefore for time paſt, if thy conſcience accuſe thee, ſeek in due time to be looſed and freed by Chriſt, that thou maiſt be able to ſay with Paul; I know nothing by my ſelfe: and for time to come beware of ſinne, euen ſmall ſinnes as well as great: for ſo many ſinnes as thou committeſt, are ſo many chaines binding thee ouer to iuſt damnation. Secondly, hence wee alſo learne, that the ſeruice of God is a moſt happie and ſweete libertie, any libertie elſe is ſtraite bondage: men thinke that to be tied to the daily ſeruice of God is a yoke and bondage intolerable, and they muſt needs haue libertie to ſinne: but they deceiue themſelues, ſelues, for while they ſeeke for libertie, by this meanes they plunge themſelues into captiuitie, and lay chaines vpon themſelues, yea bolts which hold them in eternall bondage. The libertie which is ſweet vnto thoſe who are freed by Chriſt is, that they can walke before God in the compaſſe of their callings, without thoſe accuſing conſciences, which continually vexe and torment the wicked men and Angels themſelues. Further, theſe chaines are called here eternall,] becauſe the wicked Angels ſtand guiltie for euer without hope of recouerie or redemption; ſeeing Chriſt tooke not vpon him the ſeede and nature of Angels to redeeme them, but Abrahams ſeede: where note Gods infinite mercie to mankinde, who being fallen, haue found a meane of redemption publiſhed in the miniſtrie of the word; whereby Gods people (being bound before) are looſed from their chaines; but the Angels, thoſe glorious creatures, being fallen, found no Sauiour, nor any meanes giuen by God to looſe them, for their chaines are eternall: which infinit mercie towards vs, ſhould ſtirre vp our dead hearts to thankfulnes, and continuall praiſe of Gods free mercie, who hath giuen vs the blood of his Sonne to looſe theſe chaines; when wee as little deſerued it, as the Angels vnto whom ſuch fauour was denied.

The ſecond part of their cuſtodie is, that they are kept vnder darknes: which darknes ſignifieth the wrath and anger of God, and want of the bleſſed fauour which Dauid prayed for: and calleth it by the contrarie name; the light of his countenance, Pſalm.4. and as theſe Angels are ſaid to be in darknes: ſo the Saints are ſaide to bee in light, Col.1.12. that is, in Gods fauour. Ob. But the wicked Angels are not wholy caſt out of Gods fauour, for they haue faith, and therefore ſome fauour and grace of God. Anſ. The Diuels indeede beleeue, but they haue not their faith by the gift of illumination as men haue, but it riſeth of the remnant of naturall light and vnderſtanding left in them ſince their fall: whereby they can perſwade themſelues of the truth of the word of God: ſo as their faith is not from any grace ſince their fall, neither common, nor ſpeciall. Beſides, this reſerued light lighteneth not nor eaſeth, but increaſeth their torment.

Vſe. Seeing the miſerie of the Angels is, to be kept vnder darknes, which is to bee caſt out of Gods fauour; wee learne to place all our happines in the fruition and enioying of this fauour of God, and inſtantly to pray that the Lord would ſtill lift vp the light of his countenance vpon vs; in that our whole felicitie muſt be placed in the apprehenſion of Gods mercie, in the pardon of ſinne, and life euerlaſting.

The ſecond degree of their puniſhment is, that they are reſerued vnto the iudgement of the great day, wherein the fulnes and extremitie of their torment is expreſſed; for by iudgement is meant that fearefull and finall condemnation and torment which they are adiudged vnto, which abideth them, and is reſerued for them. Where we ſee that howſoeuer the Diuels are alreadie entred into diuers degrees of their puniſhment; yet their full puniſhment, and the full wrath of God is not powred vpon them till the laſt iudgement; this themſelues know, as Matth.8. Art thou come to torment vs before the time. That time is called here the [great day,] becauſe the greateſt workes of God ſhall be accompliſhed in that day. For firſt, an aſſemblie of all men and Angels ſhall be made by the ſound of a Trumpet, who ſhall all be cited before Gods iudgement ſeate, though they were reſolued into duſt many thouſand yeeres before. Secondly, all the workes and intentions of men good or bad ſhall be in that day reueiled, Eccl.12.14. Thirdly, another great worke is, the giuing of a moſt vpright ſentence vpon all men: of abſolution vnto the godly, and of condemnation vpon the wicked Angels and men. Fourthly, the reward ſhal be giuen to euery man according to his worke: to the godly free reward of life and glorie: to the wicked deſerued condemnation. Fiftly, then ſhall Chriſt God and man giue vp his kingdome vnto his Father, and ſhall ceaſe to raigne, not as God, for he ſhall bee ſtill equall to his Father; but as Mediatour; for an end ſhall be put to all families, ſocieties, Ciuill, and Eccleſiaſticall diſtinctions and gouernments, ſo as in regard of outward gouernment and adminiſtration this his kingdome ſhall ceaſe.

The great workes which ſhall be performed on the great day.

Vſe.

Vſe. Let the remembrance of this great day ſtrike vs with feare and reuerence of it. Shall euery worke bee brought vnto iudgement? Then let vs feare God, and keepe his commandements; it is the vſe that Salomon maketh, Eccleſ.12. and conſidering thoſe terrors of the Lord, what manner of men ought wee to bee in all holy conuerſation? ſaith the Lord. Yea the Diuels themſelues beleeue and tremble in remembrance of this terrible and great day: but how many Atheiſts be there worſe than the Diuels themſelues that make a mocke of theſe great workes, not fearing nor acknowledging the Scriptures, Heauen, Hell, God, Diuell, nor this great iudgement day? but experience ſhall teach ſuch fooles, who in the meane time might learne ſo much of the Diuell himſelfe (but that God hath giuen them into his hand to bee led by his will) to tremble at the remembrance of this dreadfull day; and let all that loue the Lord ſhake off ſecuritie, and ſtand in awe, and feare with another feare: let their hearts bee ſmitten with a reuerent feare, that this day ouertake them not vnawares.

Atheiſts ſtoſſe at that vvhich maketh the very Diuels to tremble.

Verſ.7. Euen as Sodome and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, which, in like manner as they did, committed, and followed ſtrange fleſh, are ſet foorth for an example, and ſuffer the vengeance of eternall fire.

IN this verſe is laid downe the third and laſt example, prouing the firſt part of the former reaſon, and it is the firſt part of a ſimilitude. The words [Euen as] ſignifying that the holy Ghoſt here inſtituteth a compariſon, the former part or propoſition whereof is in this verſe, and the reddition or ſecond part in the two next following. In the example conſider three things: firſt, the people who were deſtroyed. Secondly, the ſin for which they were deſtroyed. Thirdly, the deſtruction or puniſhment it ſelfe. Firſt, the people deſtroyed were Sodome and Gomorrha, and the reſt of the cities about them; which cities are named, Deut.29.23. Admah and Zeboim: the reaſon of whoſe deſtruction is noted by the Apoſtle; becauſe they followed the ſinnes of Sodome and Gomorrha: They ſinned in like manner; ſo as they being found in the ſame ſinnes, they were wrapped vp in ỹ ſame iudgements. Here firſt marke that the holie Ghoſt mentioneth not the perſons who were deſtroyed, but their Cities, to ſignifie an vniuerſal deſtructiõ, an vtter ruine, and a total ouerthrow of thẽ; the which heaping vp of ſo many words, expreſſing the ſame thing, giueth vs likewiſe to vnderſtand that place in 2.Pet.2.6. he turned their cities into aſhes, condemned them, and ouerthrew them. Whence we may note that there is a difference betweene the people of God, & thoſe who will nor be obedient to his word, theſe meet with vtter deſtruction. Gods people may be deſtroyed indeed, but not vtterly: for we muſt alwaies beleeue the Catholike Church vpon earth. Elias in his time could not behold it; but yet there were 7000. reſerued from that generall apoſtaſie of thoſe daies. When the Lord viſiteth his owne houſe in iudgement, his manner is to leaue ſome remnants whom he ſaueth, leſt their deſtruction ſhould be like this of Sodome and Gomorrha. So Iſaiah acknowledgeth: Except the Lord of hoſtes had reſerued vnto vs euen a ſmall remnant, wee had been like to Sodome and the people of Gomorrha. Iſai.1.9. Vſe. This may teach vs true humility in regard of our own deſeruings, and true thankfulnes in regard of Gods gratious dealing with vs: both of which muſt be often acknowleged of euery member of the Church, and euery man muſt confeſſe and ſay with the Church, Lam.3. It is the Lords mercies that wee are not vtterly conſumed. Secondly, in theſe people obſerue the iuſtice of God, and his ſeuerity in ſuch an vniuerſall deſtruction, ſparing none, but deſtroying euen the children with the parents, who ſinned not in following ſtrange fleſh as their fathers did, which maketh this a ſtrange and vnſearchable iudgement: whence the Atheiſts condemne theſe bookes of Moſes (whence this iudgement is fetched) as attributing to God crueltie, and iuſtifying in him iniuſtice. But herein to cleere the iuſt proceeding of the moſt righteous God, we are to know, firſt, that the childe is Gods creature, and the life of it is Gods (hee being the Lorde of life) ſo as hee may take it away when he pleaſeth, hauing power to doe with his owne as hee will. Secondly, children are parts of the parents, and therefore the Lorde may iuſtly infold them in the puniſhment of their fathers ſinne, to manifeſt his greater deteſtation of it. Thirdly, children are borne in originall ſinne, and therefore God may iuſtly inroll them with their parents, not onely in temporall puniſhments, but in euerlaſting condemnation alſo.

Thirdly, in this people who are made examples, note that as wicked a people as theſe haue had mercie offered them. Iſai.1.10. The Prophet calles the Iewes Princes, the Princes of Sodome, and their people the people of Gomorrha, that is; ſuch Princes and people as matched Sodome and Gomorrha themſelues in wickednes; and yet hee inuiteth them vnto repentance, with proffer of mercie and promiſe of pardon: yea though their ſins were as red as ſcarlet, he would then make them white as ſnow, verſ.18. Whence we may learne, that the mercie of God euery way matcheth his iuſtice; in iuſtice he ouerthroweth Sodome and Gomorrha, and in mercie ſaueth thoſe who were euery whit as wicked as they, his free grace bringeth thoſe to heauen, who by their ſinne equalled themſelues to thoſe whom his iuſtice had detruded into hell. Yea it offereth and giueth repentance to them which are holden in the ſnare of the diuell, and ruled at his will, 2.Tim.2.25. Manaſſeh himſelfe who broke off his couenant with God, by making league with the Diuell, found 2.Chro.33. mercie with God vpon his repentance. Vſe. Let not the greatnes of our ſinnes diſmay vs from ſeeking the Lord, thy ſinnes are not aboue the ſinnes of Sodome and Gomorrha, for which mercie hath been obtained; vſe thou alſo meanes to turne vnto God and there is mercie in ſtore: but ſee thou abuſe not this mercie vnto ſinne.

Fourthly, note that in the ſame time this people of Sodome and Gomorrha was deſtroyed, Lot eſcaped, though he was in Sodom: for at the time of the execution the Angell led him out from among them, and not before. Which teacheth, that although the Lord ſeeme ſometime to neglect his deare ſeruants, and leaue them in tribulation: yet the inſtant time of their neceſſitie ſheweth his gratious and ſeaſonable regard and remembrance of them. The Iſraelites had a promiſe, that after foure hundred and thirtie yeeres they ſhould be deliuered from their bondage in Egypt: which promiſe the Lord was not vnmindfull of, neither for the ſubſtance nor circumſtance of time; for in the very ſame night that the time was expired, their deliuerance was wrought according to the promiſe. Our dutie hence is to learne in the middeſt of our afflictions, with quiet hearts to reſt and relie our ſelues vpon God, waiting his time wherein hee will come in mercie vnto vs.

Fifthly, note that with this people of Sodom and Gomorrha, the other Cities Admah and Zeboim, becauſe they followed their ſinnes were likewiſe deſtroyed. Where we learne to auoide the wicked manners and faſhions of the world, not imitating theſe leſſer Cities, which imitated the greater in their wicked manners; but on the contrarie, follow the example of Dauid, in ſhedding riuers of teares when hee beheld men not keeping the lawes of God. Wee ſhould not with drie eyes behold mens impieties: yea for this end our hearts ſhould be like vnto Lots; when wee ſee the ſinnes of our people breake out as the ſinnes of Sodom and Gomorrha, our righteous hearts ſhould be vexed within vs in the daily ſeeing and hearing of ſuch vncleannes. So much of the people puniſhed.

Follow not the multitude to euill: neither let a common error preiudice the truth.

Now followeth the ſecond point in the example: namely, the ſinnes for which Sodom and Gomorrha were deſtroyed, in theſe words: They committed fornication, and followed ſtrange fleſh. Firſt, they committed fornication. Secondly, they committed ſinnes againſt nature it ſelfe, following ſtrange fleſh. To vnderſtand the vilenes of theſe ſinnes conſider two things: firſt, the cauſe and occaſion of them: and that was abundance of proſperitie, and plentifulnes of Gods bleſſings. For Sodom was as a Garden of God, enriched with varietie of profits and pleaſures: this cauſed Lot to chuſe Sodom to dwell in. This ground nouriſhed foure bitter rootes, from which theſe ſinnes of fornication and following ſtrange fleſh did ſpring, reckoned vp by Ezechiel, chap.16.49. The ſins of thy ſiſter Sodom were firſt Pride, by reaſon of proſperitie. Secondly, fulnes of bread: that is, they gaue themthemselues to eating and drinking excessiuely: for so saith Luk.17.28. Thirdly, Idlenes, which was the daughter of their securitie. Fourthly, Vnmercifulnes, and contempt of the poore: and these must needs nourish all sinnes of vncleannes: vnto which adde a fifth sinne, mentioned Gen.19.9. and 14. that is, contempt of heauenlie admonition and instruction; for they scorned Lot while hee warned them of their danger.

The second thing in their sinne is the measure of it. They sinned in like manner, &c. The originall signifieth and implieth not onely a bare committing of sin, but a giuing of themselues ouer to commit their filthie lusts, and that impudently and shamelesly: which the Prophet Esay noted also chap.3.9. They declare their sins as Sodom, they hide them not: shewing that they were past all shame in these most shamefull sinnes. Yea they boasted and gloried in them: both which may be gathered in Genesis 19.5. and 9.

Doctr. 1. By these sins we are taught to take a view of the sinnes of these last times, vnto which that of Ezechiel vnto Ierusalem may bee properly applied: Thou hast iustified thy Sisters (namely Samaria and Sodom) in all their abominations. So these last times iustifie Sodome in her abominations, which I prooue thus: First, the Church of Rome is that Sodome wherein the two Prophets were slaine, Reuel.11.8. It is there so called because it matcheth Sodom in her sinnes, in that it teacheth the sins of Sodom, in making lawes to inhibite lawfull mariage in sundry sorts of men, to tolerate fornication, and such filthinesse: yea not onely by the Scriptures, but in many other sundrie ancient, and some of their owne recordes, it is manifest that Rome is a Sodome. Whence wee see not onely the dutie of euery Lot, and righteous person, namely to hasten out of her, but also the end and destruction that abideth her, to be euerlasting fire. Secondly, againe in these times it must bee verified, and is also, which was applied by Christ vnto them of this age, Luk.17.28. It is in these latter times as it was in the daies of Lot, men eate and drinke, buy and sell, marrie, and giue in marriage, and thinke of nothing: and such is the wonderfull securitie of many professors, that many Cities in the midst of the Church herein may match, if not exceede euen Sodom & Gomorrha themselues. Thirdly, whosoeuer (saith Christ) shall not beleeue and obey the doctrine of the Gospell, it shall be easier for Sodome and Gomorrha in the day of iudgement, than for them. Which sentence might moue most men to tremble, who whilest they take themselues freed from Sodomes sins, fornication, and following strange flesh, they nourish a sinne within them, which maketh them as farre off their saluation as Sodom it selfe is, and that is the not receiuing of the Gospell as they ought: most men content themselues to liue ciuilly, and out of danger of humane lawes; but as for the doctrine of religion, and yet much more the power and life of it, it lieth horribly neglected. But Sodom it selfe shall bee saued before such men. Mat.10.15.

Doct. 2. In that fornication and following strange flesh are the sinnes of Sodom; wee are taught to auoide this sinne of fornication and al sinnes of vncleannes. For first, the heauie curse of God is passed not only against Sodom and Gomorrha for these sinnes; but whersoeuer they be found they be sins that burne to destruction, Iob.31.12. they set families on fire, and deuoure them vtterly, waste and consume them. Againe, no fornicators, adulterers, wantons, buggerers, shall euer be admitted into the kingdome of heauen: and in verse 15. the same Apostle propoundeth sixe reasons why we should flie fornication: first, our bodies are the Lords, and must be seruiceable vnto him. Secondly, wee looke they should be raised to glorie in the last day, and therefore wee must in the meane time keepe them honorable. Thirdly, they are the members of Christ, we may not then make them the members of an harlot. Fourthly, whereas all other sinnes are without the body, this directly is against the body. Fifthly, the body is the temple of the holy Ghost, and these sinnes make it the Diuels stie and stewes. Sixthly, our bodies are bought with a price, and it is sacrilledge not to glorifie God in the body as well as in the soule, seeing both are alike his. Now if any man be solicited by temptation vnto these sins, and would know how hee might ouermaster them, hee must begin with his heart, and obteine 1.Cor.6.9.

and

and reteine within it the feare of God, which onely is able to ouerrule him. This grace alone preserued Ioseph, being daily inticed by Potiphars wife: How should I doe this wickednes and sin against God? Gen.39.9.

The third point in this example is the punishment it selfe; in which three things may bee noted: first, the matter of it; they suffered the punishment of eternall fire: by fire, we must not vnderstand our fire, nor such materiall and bodily fire as ours is, but an eternall fire: that is, the endlesse and comfortlesse apprehension of Gods wrath for sinne eternally burning, that is, alwaies terribly tormenting the sinner, called fire, because as burning of fire is the most horrible and sensible torment vnto nature, so much more terrible is this torment; which elsewhere is called by other names, as the worme that neuer dieth, &c. Where in the soarefulnes of the punishment marke the grieuousnes of this sinne: it were therefore to bee wished that whoredome might bee punished with death. The theefe doth not more, if so much harme against families and Common-wealths, as sinners of this kinde and qualitie. The second thing is the time of their punishment, namely when they gaue themselues wholie to fornication, & were come to the height in their sins: Where note, that though the Lord be slow to wrath, yet hee recompenseth that slownes with the heauines of it when hee commeth; seeing he commeth not till he must needs, and that is not till sin bee at the height and most of necessitie bee taken downe: as appeareth in those foure hundred yeres allotted for the filling vp of the Amorites sinnes. Let vs then beware of abusing Gods patience, by adding to our sinnes; for then he is adding vnto, and heaping his iudgements, and wee shall finde that though he come slowly, yet he will strike surely, if we giue not such a stroke to our sinnes by repentance, as in due time his iudgements may bee preuented. The third thing noted here is the vse of this punishment; namely, herein they were made an example to the whole world. Which teacheth vs that Gods iudgements are so many verie sermons against the sinnes of the sonnes of men: for God teacheth not onely ordinarily by his word in the ministrie of it, but really also by his workes in the execution of his iudgements. Iob saith that God speaketh to men once or twice, therein teaching that corrections are the speeches of God in mens eares: so as no person or people can go cleere away with that plea, that they wanted all meanes of instruction, seeing the whole earth is filled with the iudgements of God.

Gen.39.9

The Lord is slow to anger, but much in wrath.

Gen.15.16

To auoide Gods stroke strike down thine owne sinnes.

Gods iudgments are his real sermons.

Vers.8. Likewise notwithstanding these dreamers also defile the flesh, and despise gouernment, and speake euill of them that are in authoritie.

NOw the Apostle commeth to the proofe of the second part of the former reason: namely, that these seducers are they which take libertie to sinne: and therefore they shall be destroyed. This is prooued in this, and some verses following, by a particular rehearsall of certaine sinnes apparant in these men.

In this verse three things are offered to be considered of vs: first, the setting downe of two vices vnto which these men were addicted: first, they defile the flesh: secondly, they despise gouernment. Secondly, the fountaine of these and other their sins in this word dreamers. Thirdly, the manner of their sinnes in these two words; Likewise notwithstanding; namely in two things: first, as Sodome and Gomorrha sinned, so sinned these likewise, no otherwise than they. Secondly, they did not only sinne as they of Sodome did: but notwithstanding they knew what had befallen Sodom and Gomorrha, they not being afraide of those iudgements rush into these sinnes: and hereby they are conuinced to bee dreamers, seeing they sleepe securely in the middest of such iudgements.

In handling the words wee will first speak of the fountain, because it is first in nature, and then secondly of their sinnes flowing from thence. The originall of these sinnes is that they are dreamers; which worde leadeth vs to a double cause of them: first, that they are sleepers made heauie with sleepe: and secondly, in this sleepe of theirs they are deluded with dreames. We are then to vnderstand first what this sleepe is: and in the next place, what bee the dreames which in their sleepe delude them.

them. This sleepe is not that naturall sleepe which oppresseth the bodie; but a spirituall sleepe, like vnto that in diuers things going ouer the soule, binding vp the faculties of the same, and bringing a heauines or deadnes rather into all the powers of man; so far forth as they ought to be moving in spiritual actions and affaires. It causeth the mind neuer to thinke seriously of God or a mans owne estate: the conscience neuer or seldom to accuse for sinne committed: the will neuer or seldome to will that which is truly good: the affections neuer or seldome to be mooued at Gods word or workes. Thus it goeth ouer the whole soule, and casteth it in a dead sleepe, so as it is altogether vnfit to goe about the actions of an heauenly life. Example hereof we haue in the old world, they eat and dranke, &c. and knew nothing till the flood came: they dreamed continually of many other things, but neuer of their owne destruction. Dines also was cast on such a sleepe; he fared deliciously every day, hee neuer thought of heauen, for he was neuer to come there; nor of hell fire till he felt the flame. This spirituall sleep is three-fold: first, the naturall sleepe of heart by which euery one is ouertaken; so as by nature no man can so much as moue himselfe to the least good, till God awake him, and say to him, Awake thou that sleepest, and stand vp from the dead. The second sleepe is a slumber, and indeed the remainders of this naturall sleepe in the children of God, being awakened out of their dead sleepe; for euen they are ouertaken often with a spirituall slumber, by reason of remainders of sin in them. So the spouse acknowledgeth Cant. 5.2. I sleep, but my heart waketh. The third sleepe is the increase of that naturall sleepe and deadnes of heart by the custome of sinne, when as the heart is made past feeling, and altogether senseleese through continuance in sinne, Ephes. 4.19. This last kind is that which is attributed here to these deceiuers, for so the word [notwithstanding] importeth: for although they knew the iudgements of God against sinne, yet they are senseleese and careleese in the middest of them.

Eph. 5.14.

Now in the next place let vs see what these dreames are here spoken of, and they bee nothing else, but wicked, carnall, and vaine imaginations, arising from an impure heart, and conceiued in a corrupted mind, which in the end deceiue and delude men no otherwise than a dreame, which while a man sleepeth seemeth to haue some truth in it, but as soone as one awaketh it vanisheth away, and indeed hath in it nothing lesse. An example whereof wee haue in the rich man, Luk. 12.19. who in his fulnes and encrease of riches dreamed of an happinesse and a continuance in it many yeeres: when that night his soule was taken away. The Angell of the Church of Laodicea dreamed, that hee was rich, encreased with wealth, and stood in need of nothing; whereas hee knew not that hee was blinde, poore, miserable, and naked, Reue. 3.17. So the Pharisee dreamed that he was another manner of man than the poore sinfull Publicane; but it was but a meere dreame, for the other departed away iustified.

Doct. Hence we may note the cause why so few entertaine the doctrine of the Gospell, so few forsake their sinnes and turne vnto God, and that is because men are dreamers, being cast and lulled asleepe in their sinnes, and therein deluded with many false imaginations which draw them from God. As first, some pleade that they were neuer booke learned, they could neuer write nor reade, therefore they must be excused in their ignorance, as not being bound to know the word of God; they need not frequent so many sermons, or if they doe, they are not greatly to care to carrie them away. Secondly, others dreame that because they haue liued thus long, and yet had neuer any such crosse, as they see befall others, therfore they are most happie men, and God loueth them; they finde the blessing of God vpon them in euery thing, and therefore they serue God well enough, or so much as serueth their turne. Thirdly, others haue learning and knowledge, and begin to dreame that therefore they want nothing, they blesse themselues in their naked knowledge, and neuer haue care in their hearts to receiue Christ. Fourthly, others are prophane, and dreame that the Master will not come yet; God will not yet call them, they shall haue time enough to repent in; for they craue but one houre houre on their death-beds, and that shal they haue; in the meane time they giue themselues ouer to riot and excesse, neuer regarding though all the world crie shame vpon them, vntill their Master take them vnawares. Lastly, it is a common dreame amongst men that the promise of life eternal is but a dreame, and so many make but a dreame of the whole word of God, and all religion: that looke as Sarah did not so much regard the promise as she ought to haue done, because she tooke it for a dreame, and made a matter of laughter of it, Gen. 18.12. and as those who were reduced from ỹ captiuity of Babylon, entertained the promise of their returne but as a dreame, by their own confession, Psal. 126. and Peter whē he was deliuered by the Angel out of prison, could not bee perswaded that it was so, but that he had seene a vision, or dreamed a dreame, Act. 12.9. Euen so, men hold the doctrine of the Gospell but as a dreame, seeing they can hold it in opinion, but neuer endeuour to reforme their liues by it: but such dreames disappoint men commonly of saluation; which while men bring to the hearing of the word, it is no marueile if we haue such iust cause of complaint for want of profiting vnder it, as appeareth euery where at this day. The most powerfull Ministrie shall little preuaile, so long as men come with their hearts ful fraught with their carnall imaginations, and with such heauines of spirit. Secondly, in that these dreames are made the causes of all sinnes, we are taught to learne the lesson of the Apostle, Ephes. 5.14. Awake thou that sleepest, and stand vp from the dead. And 1. Thess. 5.6. Let vs not sleepe as others doe: which that wee may doe, consider first the reasons, and meanes which may bee effectuall to awaken vs: and secondly, the notes to know when wee are wakened. For the former, consider first the infinite iustice and wrath of God against the least sin, which made the Apostle say, It is a fearfull thing to fall into the hands of God. Secondly, the greatnes of our sinnes, and the number which is like the sand vpon the sea shore. Thirdly, ỹ vncertaintie of the day & houre of our death, which as it leaueth vs, so shall the last iudgement finde vs. Fourthly, our vow in Baptisme; wherein we promise to forsake the Diuell, and all our owne lusts. Fifthly, Christs passion and his bloodie sweate, not for his owne, but our sinnes, which made him crie: My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken mee? Sixthly, that the night is past, and it is now day, the sunne is vp, euen the sunne of Righteousnes is risen vpon vs; and therefore we are to be raised out of our sleepe, and walke as children of the light, Rom. 13.12.13.

Most men dreame, that the doctrine of the Gospell is but a dreame.

Heb. 10.13

Secondly, if a man would know whether he begin to be awakened, let him obserue whether his heart haue begun to moue in spirituall actions or no. For that bodie is wakened out of bodily sleepe, which can moue it selfe in bodily actions. Quest. When doth the heart begin thus to mooue it selfe, and how shall I know it? Answ. When thou beginnest to turne thy eyes inwardly into thy selfe, and canst finde, and espie the priuie corruptions which lurke within thee. Secondly, when thou art inwardly and heartily displeased with thy selfe, and grieued for thy sins. Thirdly, when thou canst humbly and heartily sue to God for pardon, and canst hunger and thirst after Christ and his merits aboue all earthly things. Fourthly, when thou beginnest to endeuour to doe the will of God, and please him in all things; then assure thy selfe thou art wakened out of thy sleepe of sinne, and not before.

Thirdly, if dreaming be the fountain of all sinne, we must learne the contrary vertue, namely, that being once awakened, wee striue to watch and be sober, 1. Thess. 5.6. For the practise of which dutie these rules are to be marked: first, wee must daily and diligently obserue our selues, our hearts, and sinnes; and seeing what sinnes wee are most prone vnto, there must wee double our care and watchfulnes: for otherwise where we are weakest Satan sooneth maketh a breach, for there he makes his greatest assaults. Secondly, we must daily looke for an euill day, so as wee forecast euery day to endure the worst that it can bring foorth against vs and our profession: out of which forecast in vaine shal any man purpose to keepe faith and a good conscience. Wee may not crie peace, peace; for then commonly sudden desolation commeth vpon vs. Thirdly, wee must esteeme of euerie day as our last day, that so wee may be daily

Dye euery day, that thou maist dye once well on thy dying day.

daily prepared to our death: daily liuing as though we were daily dying, carrying our selues in the midst of our affaires, as though we were cast vpon our death-bed: the good seruant expecteth still the comming of his Master; whereas the euill seruant his properties is to defer it.

Lastly, seeing wee are all by nature such sleepers as these were, and our hearts as ready to be deluded by such dreames, our care must bee that the word of God may dwell plentifully in them, which alone can take vp the roome of them, and keepe out these dreames and false imaginations; without which care our owne hearts (being full of guile) can doe nothing but deceiue vs: yea our naturall reason is nothing but a dreame, vpon which wee may not relie our selues, for then wee deceiue our soules; but onely vpon the sure word of the Prophets & Apostles, and the directions thereof.

The second point is, the induction of the two sinnes, which are laide to the charge of these deceiuers: the first is, filthines of the flesh: the second, contempt of Magistracie. The former is in these words: [These also defile the flesh:] that is, they abuse their bodies by fornication, and sinnes of that kinde, euen as Sodome did, of which wee haue spoken in the seuenth verse, and therefore passe this sinne ouer without further handling. Onely let this one thing bee here remembred, that seeing it is a sinne of Sodome to defile the bodie with the sinnes of the seuenth Commandement, our duetie is to reserue within vs that speciall care whereby our bodies may bee preserued in holines and honour: 1. Thess. 4. 3. 4. This is the will of God; The bodie must be giuen vp as an holy sacrifice to God, else it shall not be acceptable, Rom. 12. 1. Wouldest thou haue thy bodie rise vp vnto glorie and fellowship with God and Christ at the last day? then let thy care bee to lay it downe in the graue in honour, by preseruing it a pure member of Christ: for without holinesse, no man shall euer see God, that is, haue fellowship with him being a most holy and chaste spirit: yea the contrarie things ought not to be named in the Church of God, Eph. 5. 3.

The second sinne followeth, in these words; and despise gouernment, and speake euill of those that are in authoritie.] In which words their contempt of authoritie is set downe in two branches. First, in their iudgement and opinion, [they despise] that is (as the word signifieth) they refuse and put away, yea and so farre as they can put downe all Lordship, gouernment, ciuill power and dominion. Secondly, in their practise, they speake euill &c. First, in their iudgement they put downe gouernment, by teaching (for otherwise they could not) and maintaining that after men were conuerted to the faith, being now become Christians and beleeuers, they were no longer to be vnder Magistracie or authoritie; but their neckes were to be eased from that yoke: and this errour was dangerously sowne by the malitious man in the Primitiue Church, and called some trouble and labour vpon the Apostles themselues in their times; as appeareth 1. Cor. 7. 11. where the Apostle answereth this case, which seruants themselues were bold to call in question being conuerted. Art thou called a seruant? care not for it. So Tit. 3. 1. Put them in remembrance that they be subiect to principalities and powers. So as it was a lesson not well learned in those first ages of the Gospell. This was the iudgement and opinion of the false Teachers, which euen the word [despise] implieth & presupposeth. Now whereas some might say, that they must needs (will they nill they) be vnder authority: for Rulers and Princes would and did keepe them vnder: The Apostle addeth, [and speake euill &c.] that is, although they cannot shake off gouernment so easily as they would, yet they can easily manifest their malice against it, in reuiling them that are in authoritie.

First then we are to speake of their doctrine, and then of their practise. In the former consider three things: first, what is this rule or gouernment which they despise: secondly, vpon what ground refuse they to be vnder authoritie: thirdly, vpon what ground doth Iude condemne them for this refusall. First, to know what this authoritie is, we must distinguish all gouernment into diuine and humane: The Apostle Peter acknowledgeth this distinction, 1. Pet. 2. 13. Submit your selues to euery humane ordinance. Diuine gouernment is the absolute power of God, whereby he maketh lawes to binde the conscience, and that vnder paine of life and death eternall. This is the power of all the Trinitie; but the administration of it is giuen to the Sonne. This power is not here meant; for had they denied this, they could not haue carried a face or shew of Christians. The other (which here is vnderstood) is humane or ciuill rule and dominion, whereby man is set ouer man; which may be thus described: Ciuill gouernment is a state of superioritie, consisting in the power of commanding, and in the power of the sword for the common good of mankinde. That it is a state of superioritie, appeareth Rom. 13. 1. Let euery soule be subiect to the higher power. Further, I say it consisteth in a double power: first of commanding, that is, of making edicts and lawes, of calling and conuenting. Secondly of the Sword, and that in foure things: first, in arresting: secondly, imprisoning: thirdly, putting to death: fourthly, making warre in way of protection or otherwise. This second power, namely of the Sword, is added: first, to put a difference betweene the authoritie of the Magistracie and Ministrie: which difference standeth in three things: first, the Magistracie hath a power in it selfe, whereby the Ciuill Magistrate may commaund in his own name. The Ministrie hath power onely to pronounce what God commandeth, and that in his name. Secondly, the authoritie of the Ciuill Magistrate is in himselfe; the authoritie of the Minister not in himselfe but in Christ; so as the Ciuill Magistrate may command obedience to himselfe, but the Minister commandeth it to God. Thirdly, the Ciuill gouernment hath an absolute power to compell, and enforce the outward man; but the Ministrie hath power only to counsell, perswade, exhort. Secondly, this power of the Sword is added to distinguish it from all priuate power, as in Schooles, families, which haue a power of commanding, but not of the Sword. Lastly, I adde for the common good of mankind, Rom. 13. 4. The Magistrate is the minister of God, for thy wealth, that is, procuring the welfare of soule and body: which standeth in two things: first, true Religion: secondly, ciuill iustice; both which are by Magistracie maintained. It may be here demanded; but how farre doth this Ciuill gouernment extend it selfe? Ans. It extendeth it selfe to two things: first, ouer all causes, things and words of men Ciuill or Ecclesiasticall; for temporall causes, there is no question: that it extendeth it selfe also to the causes of the Church appeareth, in that the King must haue the booke of the Lawe before them, Deut. 17. 18. he must reade it, and execute it accordingly: yea he must doe all the law, that is, see it to bee done. Iosiah kept the Passeouer himselfe, and gaue commandement concerning their preparation and performance of the same, 2. Chron. 35. and saw it done. But here two differences in this authoritie must be marked: First, that ciuill authoritie doth not after the same manner order causes ecclesiasticall as ciuill: for in ciuill causes it ordreth all, and executeth all likewise; but in ecclesiasticall it hath power to order all, but not to execute them. The Magistrate indeed ordereth and prescribeth in all, but the Minister is he that executeth in ecclesiasticall causes. Secondly, that ciuill authoritie hath power ouer all the things of men, but not ouer the things of God; as the Word and Sacraments, faith, conscience, the graces of God in the hearts Ciuill power hath no rule ouer these; concerning which Christ commanded to giue vnto God the things of God, and vnto Cæsar Cæsars. Secondly, this authoritie extendeth it selfe to all persons, as well Ecclesiasticall as Ciuill, but so, as it stretcheth onely vnto the outward man, to the bodie, life, conuersation, and outward things, but not to the soule and conscience, of which God is the onely Lord and gouernour. If it be asked what are the kinds of this power? I answere, it is of three sorts: first, in one person man or woman, which is a Monarchie: secondly in moe, when the gouernment is in a few states and Peares: thirdly, in the bodie of the people, which is a popular gouernment: by one of these three is euery Common-wealth gouerned. These are the Gouernments despised by these seducers.

The authoritie of the Magistrate and Minister farre different.

The second point followeth, namely vpon what grounds they despised gouernment? Ans. Their grounds may be knowne by the Heretikes of this time the Anabaptists, who are giuen vp to the same error: and they may be reduced ced to these foure heads: First, subiection (say they) came in with sinne; and therefore Christ hauing taken away sinne, hath taken away subiection also. The former part they proue out of Gen. 1.26. Man in innocencie was to rule ouer the fish of the sea, the fowles of heauen, ouer the beasts, the earth, and all creeping things; but not ouer man: but after the fall Eue is put vnder subiection to Adam, Genes. 3. Ans. There bee two kindes of subiection: the first Seruile, the second Ciuill. The former is the subiection of a slaue or vassall, who is onely to seeke the proper good of his Lord and Master. The latter whereby one man is subiect to another for the common good. The former came in by sinne: the latter was before sinne in innocencie. Eue was subiect to Adam in innocencie: thus the Apostle reasoneth 1. Tim. 2.12. Let the woman be subiect to the man: for she was taken out of the man. Againe, in innocencie it was said, Increase and multiplie; and therefore in the light of nature is a plaine distinction betweene the father and sonne, and an inequalitie.

The first place is misalleaged Genes. 1.26. because it was spoken not of man alone, but of all mankinde, euen women as well as men; who haue also dominion giuen ouer the vnreasonable creatures. As for the second place, Gen. 3.15. He shall rule, and thou shalt be subiect. It is not spoken because the ordinance of God simply considered in it selfe was not before the fall: but because now the subiection was ioyned with feare, griefe, and sorrow, which it wanted in innocencie: for then it was a pleasure, and this makes subiection a curse in some respect; but is not so (no not since the fall) in it selfe considered.

Secondly, they reason thus: Euery beleeuer is in the kingdom of heauen, euen in this life: Now in heauen there is no King but God; and therefore no beleeuer is to bee subiect to any but God and Christ. Ans. There bee two kindes of gouernments vpon earth; one is spirituall and inward, this is the kingdome of heauen and of Christ within man, standing in peace of conscience and ioy in the holy Ghost: in regard of which regiment of Christ, there is no distinction of persons, no difference of bond or free, Master, seruant, father, sonne; but all are one in Christ. The other is a ciuill regiment, wherein orders and distinctions of men must be maintained; as some must bee Princes, some subiects, some fathers, some children, some Masters, some seruants. Whence it is that euery man sustaines vpon him two persons: and is to be considered first as a beleeuer, and as a member of the kingdome of Christ: thus is he equall to any beleeuer, and any beleeuer equall to him. Secondly, as a member of the Common-wealth wherein he liueth; thus he is either a superiour or inferiour. Their reason were somewhat, if euery beleeuer were onely in the kingdome of heauen: but euery of them liuing here in earth is also a member of some Common-wealth.

Thirdly, Ciuill gouernment is full of cruelties, which hauing the power of the sword destroyeth the bodies and soules of offenders, in not giuing them time of repentance: and therefore is intolerable among Christians. Obiect.

Ans. Moses and the Leuites by Gods commandement slew 3000. of the Israelites for worshipping their golden Calfe, and neuer gaue them space to repent. Secondly, the malefactor that is not moued to repentance at the sentence of present death, there is little hope that euer hee would repent after if hee had longer time. Thirdly, Gods wisedome and commaundement must take place of mans reason; he commaundeth that the Malefactor should die, and thereby that the euill be taken away; better it is that one should bee destroied than an vnitie; better that one bee remoued, than a multitude by the contagion of his example infected. Answere. Exo. 32.28 Perat vnus potiùs quam vnitas.

Fourthly, they plead liberty by some places and testimonies of Scripture: Gal. 5.1. Stand fast in the libertie wherein Christ hath set you free. Ans. The libertie which Christ hath procured vs is libertie of conscience, freedome from the power of sin, Satan, death, hell, and condemnation; and therefore spirituall: but not from temporall and ciuill subiection. Obiect. Answer.

Ob. Rom. 13.8. Owe nothing to any man but loue: therefore not obedience. Obiect.

tract and bargaining between man and man: the second is a debt to which we are bound by Gods law and couenant; the place is meant of the former, so far as it lies in our power: but wee are bound still to obedience and subiection by the latter.

Obiect. Ob. Matth.17.26. The Kings sonnes are free from tribute; and therefore from

Obiect. Obiect. 1.Cor.7. Ye are bought with a

Answere. ny gouernment of man. Ans. One thing it is what wee doe, another what wee ought to doe: we ought indeede so to liue, as not to need gouernours, but we doe not; yea and if beleeuers could, yet were the reason naught, for the Church containes as well bad as good; hypocrites as well as sincere Christians; and therefore the best Churches neede Magistracie for the punishment of the euill doers, and the praise of them that doe well. Yea the Church lying open to the malice of Satan and the wicked, standeth euer in neede of Magistracie to protect it by force and warre, or otherwise.

The third generall point is; vpon what ground doth the Apostle here blame and condemne these seducers for despising ciuill gouernment? Ans. The ground is, because it is a solemne ordinance of God; called therefore by Peter a creation or creature, which bindeth euery soule vnto subiection to the higher power, Rom.13.1. and that for conscience sake, which respecteth not so much the rule it selfe as Gods commandement, subiecting not only ciuill but all ecclesiasticall persons thereunto. Christ himselfe taking vpon him mans nature, was subiect vnto authoritie, submitting himselfe vnto Caiphas, and Pilate, yea to apprehension, arraignment, condemnation, and execution, Matth.26. Paul himselfe whose Apostolicall authoritie and spiritual weapons, were able to bring downe euerie opposition; yet acknowledged that he must be iudged by Cæsar, Act.25.11.

Obiect. Ob. Ierem.1.10. I set thee ouer nations and kingdoms to plant and pluck vp: the Prophets therefore and their successors are not to be subiect vnto ciuill Magistracie. An. The Prophet is set Answere. ouer nations & kingdomes, not to gouerne by the ciuil sword, but the sword of the Spirit in his mouth; and he is to plant and plucke vp kingdomes no otherwise, than by declaring that God would plant or pluck them vp.

Obiect. Ob. Esay 60.10. Kings shall come and serue the Church in the new Testament; and therefore the Church is not to be subiect vnto Princes, but they vnto it. Ans. In the Church are two things: Answere. first, the persons of men: secondly the things of God. Now Kings are subiect Regni mundi & regni Christi est mutua subiectio. Bucer. to the Church; but how? not to the persons of beleeuers, but to the things of God, namely the Word, Sacraments, faith, &c.

Obiect. Kings and Magistrates are as Obiect. sheepe; Ministers are Pastors and shepheards: therefore they are vnder the Ministers, as the flocks vnder the shepheards. Ans. In the Prophets, Pastors, Answere. and Ministers, consider two things: first their persons: secondly, their ministerie. In regard of their persons all of them are subiect to their owne Princes, and that for conscience sake: but in regard of their Ministerie, Princes and Magistrates are to bee subiect thereunto, as wherein the Word is taught and Sacraments administred: euen as a meane man being a Sergeant, may arrest a Baron, Earle, or Duke, who may not resist him, because hee commeth with the Princes authoritie, vnto which he must yeeld himselfe, though not vnto the person of the Sergeant: so must Magistrates to the Ministers comming not in their owne, but in the name of God. For this also must be marked, that Magistrates are not simply subiects to the Ministerie, but so farre as the word is rightly taught, and Sacraments dulie administred; for else they haue power either to reforme, or depose such Ministers as shall faile in their administration:

tion: for euen in this regard themselues are shepheards. As Isai. 44.1. Cyrus is called a shepheard, though otherwise he be a sheepe, so far as he is truly taught and directed by the Minister. So much of the ground.

Vse. By this doctrine we may discouer the wickednes and horrible rebellion of sundrie persons in this age. First of the Bishop of Rome that most ancient Rebell, who hath for many hundred yeeres taken vpon him an vsurped supremacie ouer all ciuill gouernment in the earth; which is the highest rebellion which euer the world hath heard of, seeing there is not a soule which must not bee subiect to the higher power. Ob. Yea but that place is meant of those that are to be subiect, but the Popes themselues are exempted. Ans. But besides that the text commandeth euery soule to bee subiect, it is made a note of Antichrist, to exalt himselfe aboue God, and all that is called God; that is, all Magistrates.

The Pope the arch-rebell of the world.

Obiect.

Answere.

Obiect. Ob. But they alleage the example of Vzziah the King, 2. Chron. 26.20. who taking vpon him presumptuously the office of the Priest, Azariah the Priest resisted him, cast him out of the temple, and deposed him from his kingdome.

Answere. Ans. Azariah resisted the King not by force, or violence, but by word onely and admonition, whereby hee caused him to depart the Temple: neither did he depose him from his gouernment; but being by God striken suddenly with a leprosie, he was by the law shut out from the companie and societie of men, and so disabled to gouerne; although the right of it still belonged vnto him.

Obiect. Ob. They alleage likewise the example of Iehoiadah the high Priest, who deposed Queene Athaliah from her kingdome, and set vp yong Ioash to be King, 2. Chron. 23. therefore the Pope hath authoritie to depose Kings and Answere. Emperours. Answ. Iehoiadah the high Priest was next to the King in blood, 2. Chro. 22.11. and was one of the states of the land; who deposed her not alone, but by the common consent of all the states and Peeres of the land; as chap. 23.1.2. He indeede is chiefly named, because he was the chiefe of them in blood; neither did he set vp Ioas, but helped to maintaine his right, which was vsurped by Attaliah: in a word, he protected the right heire, but could not himselfe, nor did not dispose the kingdome vnto him. And of this kinde are all their allegations: which yeeld no patronage at all to that vsurped Papall authoritie, but euen the Pope himselfe ought to bee subiect to his Emperour, if hee would auoide his most iust title of a most vniust vsurper.

Vse. 2. Hence also may be obserued that the exemptiō or immunitie of the Clergie from the authoritie of the Ciuill Magistrate is wicked, and a kinde of rebellion: and this is the condition of the whole Romane Clergie. Ob. They Obiect. pleade that Kings and Princes of their bountie haue granted these priuiledges vnto them. Ans. The law of nature ac- Answere. knowledgeth a ciuill subiection: the law of God straitly enioyneth it, and no law of any man may offer violence, or derogate from either of these.

Thirdly, the Pope vsurping a power to free subiects from their alleageance, and their oath of obedience, hath been for many hundred yeeres a most wicked instrument of rebellion, as the kingdomes of Europe haue had too wofull expetience of. If here they say, the Pope may dispense with the lawes of kingdomes. I answere, were it so that he could dispense with humane lawes of Kings and Princes in their Countries and Prouinces, (which is grosse vsurpation) yet with what face dare he challenge to dispense with the lawes of God and nature?

Fourthly, wee see hence what we are to esteeme of the Romane Religion: namely, as of a Religion to bee abhorred, as are these seducers themselues, because it is cleane contrarie to Christian Religion: which teacheth to feare God and honour the King: but the Romane Religion pretendeth to teach men to feare God, but putteth downe the honour of the King: nay he that professeth that Religion, must sweare the flat contrarie to the Kings honour.

Popish religion vrgeth mē to forsweare the honor of the king.

Fifthly, wee are hence directed what to thinke of that oath of the supremacie vnto the Bishop of Rome, namely to be such a one as fighteth directly against the law of God and nature; seeing it giueth all ecclesiasticall gouernment vnto the Pope, which belongeth properly to Kings and Princes in their ſeuerall dominions.

Sixthly, if euery man muſt be ſubiect to the power of the Magiſtrate for conſcience ſake, then all wandring beggars and rogues, that paſſe from place to place, being vnder no certaine Magiſtracie or Miniſtrie, nor ioyning thẽſelues to any ſet ſocietie in Church, or Common-wealth, are the plagues and banes of both, and are to bee taken as maine enemies of this ordinance of God: and ſeeing a moſt excellent law is prouided to reſtraine them, it is the part of euery good ſubiect or Chriſtian to ſet themſelues for the executing, ſtrengthening and vpholding of the ſame.

And ſpeake euill of them which are in authoritie.] In theſe words the Apoſtle ſheweth how theſe falſe teachers pull down authoritie by their practiſe, as in the former they did by their iudgmẽt: for when they cannot quite put downe all authoritie and Magiſtrates, they ſpeake euill of them, and blaſpheme thoſe that exerciſe the ſame: that is (as the word ſignifieth) thoſe that are in dignities and glories: for that is his meaning, when hee calleth Princes by the name of Glories. Here two things are to bee conſidered: firſt their ſinne, [ſpeake euill;] ſecondly, the amplification of their ſinne, partly in this verſe, and partly in the next. The ſin is mentioned and condemned in Exod. 22.28. Thou ſhalt not ſpeake euill of the Rulers of thy people. Eccleſ. 10. Curſe not the King, no not in thy heart, for the birds of the ayre ſhall bewray it. Which ſinne wee ſhould be ſo farre from, as that wee ſhould not receiue any accuſation againſt any Elder, vnder two or three witneſſes, 1. Timoth. 5 If we may not receiue ſlanders againſt Rulers, much leſſe may we raiſe them.

Vſe. 1. See here as in a glaſſe the common ſinne of theſe daies, wherein the common practiſe, yea and table talke of men is the cenſure of the doings of the Magiſtrate, and the doctrine of the Miniſter. Paul when he called Ananias a painted wall; being reproued, anſwered, that he knew him not to be the high Prieſt, for then he would not haue reproched him: that is, he acknowledged him not, but knew him rather to be an vſurper, which made him vſe that boldnes. Secondly, if a man may not ſpeake euill of a Ruler, then much leſſe may any priuate man take a ſword in hand to take away the life of a Prince or Magiſtrate. Dauid knew that he was to ſucceed Saul in the kingdome, and that Saul ſought his life daily, and yet his heart ſmote him when finding Saul at aduantage that he cut off but the lap of his garment, whereas he might haue as eaſily taken away his life; the ground of his griefe was, becauſe hee was the Lords annointed. Where take notice of the ſpirit that leadeth and ruleth thoſe Romiſh vaſſals, who are ſent out into Chriſtian lands with Commiſſion to take away the liues of the Lords annointed ones, who will not ſtoope vnto that Antichriſtian tyranny. Inſtruments of Satan they are, inflamed by Diabolicall furie; fighting for their Babylon with the weapon of moſt monſtrous and vnnaturall crueltie. Thirdly, we are on the contrarie taught hence to bleſſe our Magiſtrates, eſpecially the Lords annointed ouer vs: as alſo other inferiour Magiſtrates; who although their perſons may bee meane, yet are vnder the ſupreame, as hee vnder God is a Steward and Deputie for our wealth. The Apoſtle Paul willeth that prayers be made for all men, but eſpecially for Kings and Princes; and thoſe that are vnder them in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godlineſſe and honeſtie. Ieremy wiſheth the people in captiuitie to pray for Nebuchadnezzar an Heathen King, that vnder him they might haue peace. Hence is that good order commended vnto vs, wherby in our publike prayers we make ſolemne mention of our lawfull Magiſtrates, teſtifying both our deſire of their good, and our thankfulnes for their gouernment.

Secondly, the amplification of their ſinne ſtandeth partly herein, that they ſpeake euill of Dignities, Glories, Maieſties, that is, of thoſe whom God hath adorned with theſe: in detracting and detaining from them their due honour.

It may bee here asked, why doth the Holie Ghoſt call Magiſtrates by the names of glorie and dignitie? Anſ. For two cauſes: firſt, becauſe the Lord hath ſet them in his owne roome and place, and accordingly honoureth them with titles titles befitting the ſame. Pſal. 82. 1. God ſtandeth in the aſſemblie of Gods, that is, of Magiſtrates; called Gods, not onely becauſe he hath ſet thē in his place; but alſo becauſe they haue receiued a particular charge and commandement, and therwith a power of executing his own iudgements amongſt men vpon earth as his deputies. 2. Chro. 19. 6. They execute not the iudgements of man, but of the Lord. Secondly, theſe titles are giuen them, becauſe the Lord doth vſually furniſh them with worthie and peculiar gifts (though not alwaies of ſanctification) yet of regiment and gouernment to bee anſwerable to their former deſignement, as of wiſedome, courage, zeale, &c. 1. Sam. 10. 9. when Saul was made King, the Lord gaue him ſuch princely gifts, as it is ſaid, God gaue him another heart, his heart was changed in regard of other gifts than formerly he had: ſo when Dauid was annoynted King, and when Samuel had powred the horne of oyle vpon his head, it is ſaid, 1. Sam. 16. 13. that the ſpirit of the Lord came vpon him, which furniſhed him with gifts and graces both of regeneration and regiment alſo. In like manner the Lord tooke of the ſpirit of Moſes, and put it on the ſeuenty Elders, Numb. 11. 17. whereby they were furniſhed with gifts of gouernment, and enabled to beare rule, and iudge iuſtly as Moſes was: ſuch titles therefore as theſe, are not aſcribed vnto them without iuſt cauſe. Yea, how can they be fitlier called than Glories? ſeeing there is no greater glorie in earth than to ſupplie Gods roome, and to bee enabled with gifts for the ſufficient diſcharge of it.

Hence learne, that it is lawfull for Princes to beare an outward pompe, in diet, buildings, coſtly apparell, and troopes of men, for they are dignities, and their dignitie being outward in regard of men, they may maintaine it by outward pompe, to procure more reuerence and awe of men thereunto. So Act. 25. 23. Agrippa and Bernice came with great pompe and entred into the common hall: which pompe is not there diſcommended, but rather approued, as by the circumſtances of the text appeareth.

Secondly, Magiſtrates ought eſpecially to honour God, becauſe he eſpecially honoureth them; this muſt they doe by diſcountenancing and puniſhing vice, and by ſetting vp and maintaining true religion and vertue.

Thirdly, being in Gods place they are to execute iuſtice, without corruption or partialitie, in the face and feare of God. 2. Chro. 9. 7. Seeing the iudgement is the Lords, let the feare of God bee vpon you, take heede and doe it. Deut. 1. 17. Ye ſhall haue no reſpect of perſons in iudgement, but ſhall heare the ſmall as well as the great: ye ſhall not feare the face of man, for the iudgement is Gods: and herein ſtands a great part of their glorie.

Fourthly, we are in all lawfull things to yeeld free ſubiection and obedience vnto our Magiſtrates and gouernours, euen as vnto God himſelfe, whoſe roome they are in; which duty the child oweth alſo to his father, the ſeruant to his Maſter, becauſe they alſo are ſet ouer them in Gods ſtead.

Fifthly, hence alſo is it lawfull for vs to giue to Princes the titles of Maieſtie and Grace, becauſe it hath pleaſed the holy Ghoſt to aſcribe them vnto them, and by their titles to commend their perſons and places vnto vs; yea and to furniſh them with ſuch gifts of Magiſtracie, as that they become not onely naked titles, but iuſt ſignifications of the true honour which God hath graced them withall.

Verſ. 9. Yet Michael the Archangell when he ſtroue againſt the Diuell, and diſputed about the bodie of Moſes, durſt not blame him with curſed ſpeaking, but ſaid: The Lord rebuke thee.

IN this verſe is laid downe another reaſon, amplifying their ſin of theſe ſeducers, by a compariſon from the greater to the leſſe: and thus it ſtandeth: Michael the Archangell durſt not ſo much as raile on the Diuell himſelfe, much leſſe may theſe vpon Magiſtrates who are Gods: and conſequently their ſinne is hainous, who dare open their mouthes to reuile Princes and Magiſtrates. Here one queſtion is mooued, namely: whence the Apoſtle had this hiſtorie of the diſputation betweene Michael and the Diuell, concerning the bodie of Moſes, ſeeing it is not to bee found in the Scriptures? I anſwere, the ſubſtance of it is in the Scripture, although not the circumſtances. For in Deut.34.6. is ſaid, that the Lord buried Moſes, but no man knoweth of his ſepulchre till this day. There is the ground of the hiſtorie: the other particular concerning the contention of the Archangell and the Diuell, with this manner of rebuking, is not found in the old Teſtament. Queſt. Where then had he this? Anſ. Either from ſome booke then extant among the Iewes, which is not now to bee found: or elſe from ſome tradition which paſſed amõg the Iewes from hand to hand, as many things did: as that 2. Timot. 3. 8. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that Iannes and Iambres withſtood Moſes; the hiſtorie of which is not found in the old Teſtament.

Hence the Papiſts conclude, that the word written is not ſufficient and perfect in and of it ſelfe, vnleſſe the vnwritten word be added vnto it, that is, that word which is giuen by tradition, both which (ſay they) make a perfect word, but neither is perfect or ſufficient alone; grounding their opinion hence, that Iude alleageth an example out of a tradition which is not found in Scripture. But that is an hereticall doctrine and vntrue, ſeeing the perfection of a thing is not to bee meaſured by euery thing that is wanting vnto it, but by the perfect end of it: for perfection is taken from the end. Whence I reaſon thus: If the written word be perfect and ſufficient to the end to which it is ordained, it is euery way perfect. But it is perfect and ſufficient to that end, namely, to the glorie of God in working out perfectly the faith & ſaluation of man: and is in nothing wanting for the atchieuing of this end, but ſufficiently teacheth all things to be beleeued and done, and giueth perfect direction concerning faith and manners. Ioh. 20. 31. Theſe things are written that they might beleeue, and beleeuing might haue life through his name. Rom. 15. 4. Whatſoeuer things are written, are written for our learning, that wee through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might haue hope: and therefore the word written is euery way moſt ſufficient and abſolutely perfect, and neede no addition or tradition to helpe forward this end.

Ob. This place is a tradition and not written, and many other true traditions were neuer written: beſides that the Church may make traditions. Anſ. We grant many true traditions are not in Scripture, but ſuch they are as a man may be ignorant of, and not preiudice his ſaluation. Againe, the Church hath a power, and hath had priuiledge to make conſtitutions and lawes, which were to be knowne and receiued: but theſe are ſuch as only concerne the orderly gouernment of the Church, and are not neceſſarie to ſaluation.

Ob. But ſome traditions are neceſſarie to ſaluation, which are not contained in the written word, and they alleage two: firſt, in Rom. 12. 6. that Gods word muſt be tried by the rule of faith, and ſo alſo by the ſame rule expounded. This rule of faith is nothing elſe (by their expoſition) but a general conſent in the hearts of all true Catholikes; together with the Pope aſſenting with them, which of neceſſitie wee muſt beleeue; and yet (ſay they) it is not in the Scripture: and therefore ſome things muſt of neceſſitie bee beleeued which are not in the Scripture. Anſ. The rule of faith is not ſuch a crooked rule as they would thruſt vpon the world by their wicked expoſition; but the right rule of faith is the plaine word of God, euery way abſolutely directing in all points of faith and loue, 2. Tim. 1. 5. Paul wiſheth Timothy to keepe the true patterne of wholeſome words in faith and loue: which is nothing elſe but the teſtimonie of Scripture, in points of faith and loue, compriſed in the Decalogue and Apoſtles Creede. The rule of faith therefore in expounding Scripture is Scripture it ſelfe. The ſecond thing neceſſarie by their doctrine to be beleeued, not contained in Scripture, is, that the Canonical Scripture is Gods word: which truth is abſolutely neceſſarie to ſalution to be beleeued, but cannot otherwiſe bee knowne or beleeued but onely by the tradition of the Church. Anſ. As euery other Arte and Science hath certaine principles of truth to proue all other precepts by: but themſelues are to bee proued by none; ſo alſo hath Diuinity the chiefe of al other Sciences: of which kinde this is one principle; that Canonicall Scripture is Gods word, which not granted, infereth a deſtruction of all other diuine rules: this is a truth therefore confirmed, not a thing teſtified from ſome other, other, but as a ground of it selfe. Secondly, in diuine matters faith goeth before knowledge, which in humane things is cleane contrarie: for if a man would know whether fire bee hot, let him put his hand vnto it, he shall haue experience of it, and then he shall beleeue it: but in diuine things first a man giueth credit, and yeeldeth consent to the word, and then hath experimentall knowledge: for although faith hath his

Rom. 4. 18. knowledge, yet experimentall knowledge followeth faith. Abraham beleeued aboue hope, here faith went before knowledge. Ioh. 7. 17. If ye do the will of my Father, yee shall know whether the doctrine bee of God, nor no. Thus then we may conceiue it, the tenour of the word of God is this: Thus saith the Lord. If the question now be whether the Lord said thus or no: I answere, to beleeue the Church herein before God is sacrilege: but herein we are first to yeeld assent vnto God, and then after this experimentall knowledge will follow, that Canonicall Scripture is the word of God. Thirdly, wee know that Scripture is Gods word, by Scripture, and not by the Church: out of which being in humilitie taught and acquainted with the excellent matter of it and manner of writing, the end the glorie of God, and our owne saluation; wee cannot but haue sufficient perswasion of the author of it, and that it can proceede from none other but God himselfe. Thus notwithstanding the allegations of the aduersaries, the written word retaineth that perfection, which needeth no tradition to strengthen or further it in that end to which it is appointed. Now to the reason it selfe, amplifying this sinne in this verse which containeth three points to be considered. First, the person that durst not raile. Secondly, the goodnes of his cause, which was very iust, and yet he durst not raile vpon the Diuell himselfe. Thirdly, the manner of his speech: The Lord rebuke thee.

The person that durst not raile was Michael the Archangell, whom some affirme to bee Christ himselfe: others, that he is some chiefe, arch and principall Angel; which opinion is more probable. For first, the Apostle speaketh of him as one in subiection, and standing in awe, not daring to breake the law of God, for he durst not reuile the Diuell. Secondly, in 1. Thess. 4. 16. The Lord Christ shall come to iudgement with the sound of a Trumpet, and the voyce of an Archangell; where is a plaine distinction betweene Christ who should come in the clowdes, and the Archangell. Thirdly, Peter explaineth it speaking the same thing, and saith: The Angels giue not railing iudgement against them, 2. Pet. 2. 11. It is more probable then that by Michael was meant a principall Angell, rather than Christ.

Doctr. First, from the person wee learne that there be distinctions and degrees of Angels; there bee Angels and an Archangell. Quest. Is there but one Archangell? Ans. The Scripture speaking of Archangels, vseth alwaies the singular number, neuer mentioning more than one: and where the Scripture resolueth not, we are not to determine: yet I condemne not those who haue probably held that there are more than one. Secondly, wee haue here an example of Angelicall meeknes and modestie, Tit. 3. 1. Put them in remembrance that they bee subiect to principalitie, and speake euill of no man; but shew all meeknes vnto all men: the contrarie practise of railing, slandering, and obtrecting is a propertie of the Diuell, whence he hath his name, Reu. 12. 10. the Accuser of the brethren: and the Aduersarie, 2. Pet. 5 8. who is euer readie with one accusation or other to stand vp against euery man; the malitious man, whose malice caused him to stand vp against Iob, and falsely accuse him of hypocrisie vnto Gods own face. Let slanderers and backbiters of their brethren see hence whom they imitate, and most liuely resemble.

Secondly, consider the goodnesse of Michaels cause, which was this: It was the wil of God that Moses body should be buried in a secret place vnknown to any man, to preuent and auoid al occasion of superstition and Idolatrie amõg the Iewes. The Diuell on the contrarie would discouer it, that so the Israelites might fall to Idolatrie before it; herein the Archangell resisted him, and stroue with him for the performance of the will of God and the maintenance of his true worship: and yet in this good cause Michael durst not reuile the Diuel himselfe. In this cause consider two things.

First,

In these conflicting daies of ours not men only but the Angels haue their combats.

First, the fight and contention betweene Michael and the Diuell. Secondly, the cause and occasion of it about Moses bodie. In the former wee may obserue that there is a sharp and serious contention betweene good and bad Angels; in which the good Angels labour to defend all that are in Christ, against the rage and furie of the Diuell and his angels. As Psal. 34.8. The Angels of the Lord pitch their tents round about those that feare him. And on the contrarie, the Diuell and wicked spirits cast about how to destroy the bodies and soules of men. 1.Pet.5. Our aduersarie the Diuell goeth about continually seeking whom he can deuoure. This combat concerneth and is conuersant about either first the persons, or secondly the societies of men. The fight about the persons concerneth either infants, or men of yeres. First, for infants the Diuell seeketh how to spoyle and destroy them (especially those of elect and faithfull parents) in regard of their weaknes and tendernes both of minde and bodie: but the Angels of the Lord haue charge giuen thē to defend them against this malice of Satan. As Psal. 91.12. They shall beare thee vp in their armes, that is, they shall bee as nurces to beare them in their armes, preserving them from danger. Mat. 18. 10. Despise not one of these little ones: for their Angels alwaies behold the face of my father which is in heauen. Secondly, concerning men of yeeres, the diuell and his angels striue to driue them out of their waies and callings, and to leade them into crooked paths; as he would haue had Christ to haue leapt frō off the top of the pinacle, although he had an ordinarie way to go downe: and haue made stones bread: but the good Angels on the other side are giuen vs to keep vs in all our waies, Psal. 91. and so vnder the protection of the Almightie. The second strife, namely about societies, concerneth either first families, secondly Churches, or thirdly Common wealths; all which the Diuell striueth to ouerturne: as the good Angels to preserue and maintaine them. First, the Diuels endeuour is vtterly to ouerthrow all families, of Christian men especially: he robbed Iob of all his substance, slew his seruants, and children: but the good Angels guard and defend them. Iacob had the Angels of God defending him and his familie from the furie of Esau, Gen. 31.1. Psal. 91.10. when the plague and pestilence preuaileth against the vngodly, the good Angels keepe it off from comming neere the tabernacles of the righteous. Secondly, in Churches and congregations, the wicked Angels striue to corrupt the word, Sacraments, and all the Ministerie; or to make it fruitlesse, euery way to their power hindring the good successe thereof. The Diuell offereth himselfe to bee a lying spirit in the mouth of all Ahabs Prophets. Zach. 3.1. He standeth at Iehoshuah his right hand, to withstand him in his office. He soweth tares in the field where the good seede of the word is sowne, Mat. 13. Hence are those false doctrines of forbidding meates, and marriages, called the doctrine of diuels, 1.Tim. 4.1. He hindred Paul once or twice from his iourney to the Thessal. to confirme them, 1.Thess. 2.18. He raiseth persecution against the Church: for hee is said to cast some of the Church at Smirna into prison, Reu. 2.10. The good Angels on the contrarie fight against them, for the good of the Church, the furtherance of the Gospell, and preseruation of the true worship of God. The Law was giuen by their ministrie, Galat. 3. The tidings of saluation and the doctrine of the Gospell was first preached by Angels, Luk. 2.9. The Angell brought Philip to instruct the Eunuch, Act. 8.26. as also to baptise him, vers. 38. deliuered Peter out of prison, Act. 12.11. Thirdly, the wicked Angels seeke to supplant Common-wealths and kingdomes. Satan moued Dauid to number the people, by which sinne he wasted 70000. of his people. The good Angels fight in their defence. The Angell told Daniel that hee fought against the Prince of the kingdom of Persia for the Iewes, Dan. 10.13. The Angell smote of Zenacheribs armie in one night, an hundred fourescore and fiue thousand, who were enemies to the Church, 2.King. 19. Ob. How can the Diuell thus furiously fight against persons and societies, seeing he was neuer seene, neither can this fight be perceiued of vs? Ans. As he is a spirit, so his fight is spirituall, not easily discerned by the eye of flesh: for we fight not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, and spirituall wickednesses. Againe, he fighteth not onely in his owne owne person, but by his instruments and complices, whom hee daily raiseth vp against the persons of men, and all humane societies: and this fight we may in part perceiue.

Eph.6.12.

Vse. First, note hence the dignitie of euery beleeuer, who haue the Angels, yea and as here the Archangels, to put themselues in garrison for their defence: for from Christ it is. Secondly, we are with all thankfulnes to acknowledge Gods prouidence and protectiō especially in this land, whose peace and prosperitie hath bin so long established vnto our persons and societies, our families, Church and Common-wealth: whereas if Satā had might to his malice, not one of these should stand a moment. Thirdly, in all dangers our comfort must hence bee raised, that though Satans cruelties bee neuer so great, yet we haue the guard and defence of the good Angels to keep vs in al our waies; and these are too many, and too strong for him, and all the power hee can raise against vs. Thus was Elishaes seruant comforted: There be more with vs then against vs: the good Angels are more powerfull for our good, than the wicked are to harme and hurt vs. Fourthly, hence learne to make conscience of euery sinne in thought, word, and deed: for admitting and committing any sin, wee trecherously turne against those that fight for our defence, and do what we can to grieue and driue them away from vs, and so put our selues in the power of Satan to bee led at his pleasure into sinne, as also into the dangers of it.

The second point in this cause of contention is, the occasion of it, namely, it was about Moses his bodie. Michael would not suffer the Diuell to reueile where Moses bodie was laid, so to sow the seedes of Idolatrie, whereby Gods true worship might be ouerturned: for hee cared not for the bodie of Moses, but to bring in Idolatrie by meanes of it. Hence note that the wicked Angels fight not so much against the bodies of mē, as against their soules; nor contend so much to ouerthrow them in their outward estate, or to deprive them of their goods, meat, drink, &c. as in their inward, to wrest from them their spirituall things, namely Gods true worship, and the things and meanes which tend to the maintaining and preserving of the same. We haue to fight against principalities and powers, and spirituall wickednes in high places, Ephes. 6. 12. But it may as well be read in spirituall things: for therein bend they their principall forces. The drift of the diuell is to blinde the minds of Infidels, that the light of the glorious Gospell of Christ should not shine vnto them. 2. Cor. 4. 4. This same Serpent that beguiled Eue thorough his subtiltie, seeketh how to corrupt your minds from that simplicitie which is in Christ, 2. Cor. 11. 3.

Vse. First, we must keepe that which is committed vnto vs. 1. Tim. 6. 20. The treasure which God hath put into our hands is his true worship, sound doctrine, right vse of Sacraments: al which seeing Satan most desireth to breake off or corrupt, wee ought accordingly to striue how wee may preserue them to our selues, and haue them continued in their puritie to our posteritie. Secondly, in that Satan seeketh to deprive the soule of spiritual things, we must watch our graces, and become more vigilant in maintaining, and adding also vnto our knowledge, faith, loue, hope, and other our graces; seeing Satan will sift vs to make vs as chaffe, we must watch and pray that our faith faile not.

Thirdly, marke who is the author of Idolatrie, namely the diuell himselfe, and of that especiall part of it, which then he could not effect; but hath now obtained in that Idolatrous Church of Rome, namely, in worshipping of Images, stocks and stones, relikes of Saints, and of the woodden Crosse; yea armes, legges, hands, feet, and fingers of Martyrs: whence is al this but from the diuell himselfe, who for the same purpose would haue reueiled where Moses bodie was buried by God? Yea so farre haue they gone on in this delusion, that they are become spectacles of follie to the whole world: for if Iohn Baptist had had so many heads as the Papists brag of, he had been a monster of men: besides, though the Crosse wheron Christ was crucified was no greater than an ordinarie man might beare; yet so many seuerall peeces thereof they pretend themselues to haue in seuerall places as would load a shippe. Ob. They say they had all these relikes by reuelation from from heauen. Anſ. Theſe reuelations are but diabolicall illuſions to maintaine Idolatrie: beſides that how (the word being a moſt perfect rule in all matters to bee beleeued or done) vnwritten reuelations are no proofes of doctrine, but are iuſtly to be ſuſpected.

The diuell hath preuailed with the Papists and drawn them to that idolatrie which he could not bring among the Iewes.

The third thing in the verſe is the manner of his ſpeech, in which obſerue three things: firſt, what ſpeech the Archangell would not vſe: He would not ſpeake euill. Secondly, what ſpeech he vſed; The Lord rebuke thee: Thirdly, the reaſon or cauſe of both; becauſe he durſt not ſpeake euill.

Firſt of this cauſe, as being firſt in nature, which is ſaid to bee feare. Now to know what kinde of feare it was, conſider that there is a three-fold feare: firſt, from entire nature: ſecondly, from the corruption of nature: thirdly, from grace. The firſt is a naturall propertie, whereby the creature ſeeks to preſerue it ſelfe, and to ſhunne danger: which feare is not ſinne in it ſelfe; for it was in Chriſt when he ſaid his ſoule was heauie euen vnto the death: and, if it be poſſible let this cup paſſe from me: but this is not here meant. The ſecond feare proceeding from corruption of nature in men and Angels, is that ſeruile feare when the creature feareth nothing but due and deſerued puniſhment, the conſcience being guiltie vnto it ſelfe and accuſing for ſinne, and the heart deſtitute of faith and loue of God; which if it were preſent would caſt out this ſlauiſh feare; which is no other than the feare euen of the Diuels themſelues: who beleeue and tremble, Iam. 2. 19. but neither was this the feare of the Angell. The third feare is from grace, and it is a gift of the ſpirit of God (who therefore is called the ſpirit of feare) working in men and Angels a care to pleaſe, and a feare of diſpleaſing God in all things: this is the feare here meant which was in the Angell. In which conſider three things further: firſt, the beginning of it, which is faith euen in the Angels themſelues; whereby they beleeue the power, iuſtice, ſouereignetie, and Lordſhip of God ouer them; and that they muſt be ſubiect and obedient thereunto: but in man it is a faith, apprehending the mercie and fauour of God reconciled by Chriſt: this feare in Angels and men therefore is the fruite of their faith. Secondly, the propertie of it; which is to make the ſubiect of it to feare the offence of God as the greateſt euill in the world, to feare ſinne properly, and firſt of all; becauſe by it God is diſpleaſed: and in the next place it breedeth a feare of iudgement conſequently, but not in the firſt place. Pſal. 119. 12. My fleſh trembleth for feare of thee, and I am afraid of thy iudgements. This was the religious feare of Dauid: firſt, a feariug of Gods offence, and then a ſtanding in awe of his iudgements: thirdly, the vſe of it: which is to make man and Angel make conſcience of ſin. Exod. 1. It made the Midwiues ſpare the Hebrew children; it will not ſuffer the Angell here to reuile the Diuell. The feare of God (ſaith Salomon) cauſeth to ſhunne euery euill way: yea it frameth to obedience, and is pure, becauſe it keepeth the heart from defiling it ſelfe. Our dutie hence is to pray that the Lord would put into our hearts this religious feare, which may containe vs in awe of his Maieſtie, and ſo keepe vs from offences, wherein wee may reſemble this Angell: as alſo to be a wellſpring of life vnto vs, not onely to eſcape the ſnares of death, but to quicken and prouoke vs in the waies of life euerlaſting. Secondly, wee muſt auoide the ſinne which the Angell was afraid of, namely the boldnes of ſinning, eſpecially in theſe daies wherein men aduenture and ruſh vpon ſinne without feare or ſhame.

Pſal. 19. 9.

Prou. 14. 27

The ſecond point herein is, what ſpeech the Archangell would not vſe, that is, curſed ſpeaking, or railing iudgement. Which to know what it is, obſerue the differences of iudgement; which is two-fold, either publique or priuate. Publique iudgement is when a man is called by God to iudge the creature; and this is two-fold: firſt of the Magiſtrate; ſecondly of the Miniſter. The Magiſtrate is called by God to ſeeke out the miſdemeanours of men, and according to the offence is to pronounce a righteous ſentence, euen to the taking away (if the cauſe require) of the temporall life it ſelfe. The Miniſter is alſo in the name of God to pronounce the curſe of the law vpon vnrepentant ſinners; and the promiſe of the Goſpell vnto the penitent. Secondly, priuate iudgement is, when one creature paſſeth iudgement againſt another, ther, without calling from God, but vpon priuate grudge, anger, ſtomacke, and reuenge; this is here called railing iudgement; and it is practiſed three waies: firſt, in ſpeaking falſehoods and vntruths againſt others. Secondly, in ſpeaking truths, but with intent of ſlandering and detracting from the good name of others. Thirdly, in miſconſtruing mens ſayings and doings to the worſt part, when they may be taken in the better: this railing ſpeech the Angell durſt not vſe.

Hence we learne to make conſcience of this ſinne of ſlandering, reproching, and reuiling others, from which the Archangell abſtained dealing euen with the Diuell himſelfe: but many of vs who can vtter the prouerbe, That it is a ſhame to belie the Diuell; are contented, yea and readie to belie, and detract from the children of God our brethren by this railing iudgement. Some will ſay, what may we neuer vſe this kind of iudgement? Anſ. Neuer, no not againſt the Diuell: but if wee would take vp iudgement againſt any creature, let it bee againſt our owne ſelues for our ſinnes; here we may paſſe ſentence freely, and ſo eſcape the iudgement of God: as for others wee are to iudge by the iudgement of loue, which hopeth, ſpeaketh, thinketh, and ſuſpecteth the beſt, and couereth the worſt, euen a multitude of ſinnes.

The third point is the ſpeech which the Archangell vſed in theſe words: The Lord rebuke thee. Which words are a forme of prayer, in which he commendeth and remitteth reuenge vnto God, deſiring that the Lord, to whom iudgement belongeth, would reſtraine, correct and repay the Diuell for his malice. Here it may bee asked: what ſhall we doe when wee are wronged? Anſ. Learne of the Angell not to requite and repay euill for euill, neither in action, ſpeech, or affection; but leaue all reuenge vnto the Lord. Zacharias being ſtoned to death vniuſtly, deſired no reuenge, but ſaid: The Lord ſee and require it. Chriſt himſelfe being accuſed before Pilate, anſwered nothing; and when he died he prayed for thoſe who crucified him, Matth. 17. Againe, when a man will needs reuenge himſelfe of a wrong done againſt him, hee takes vpon him the perſon of the accuſer, witneſſe, Iudge, and executioner; which is againſt all iuſtice and equitie: beſides that the Lord challengeth this as his own prerogatiue; Vengeance is mine, and I will repay.

1. Chro. 24. 22.

Ob. But did not Elias pray for fire from heauen in way of reuenge, whereby he deſtroyed his enemies? Anſ. He did: but by inſtinct from God, which is as much as a commandement.

Ob. But Chriſt when he was ſmitten, ſaid: If I haue well ſaid, why ſmiteſt thou me. Anſ. We muſt put a difference betweene lawfull defence of our ſelues in our good cauſe, and the offence of our aduerſaries. Farre was Chriſt herein from reuenge, and ſo muſt we.

Ob. But this is hard and impoſſible vnto fleſh and blood. Anſ. Yea but we profeſſe our ſelues to bee children of our Father in heauen, and therefore we are to haue more than fleſh and blood in vs; euen that grace of God which carrieth beleeuers further in Chriſts ſchoole, than fleſh and blood can leade them. Vſe. Schollers and learned men that are to defend Gods cauſe and the truth of religion, yea euen againſt very heretikes, muſt abſtaine from reuiling ſpeeches; if wee be reuiled by the pen of the aduerſarie, we muſt commit the iniurie to God. Secondly, people that goe to law with others, for moſt part herein offend, that they doe it in way of reuenge, and to wrecke their malice vpon their aduerſarie; whereas the right vſe of ſuite in law is only to defend a mans right, all reuenge laid aſide. Thirdly, hence men of valour are taught not to take a challenge into the field, it is an honour not to accept of it, ſeeing reuenge is to bee left vnto God, let the wrong bee neuer ſo great. Fourthly, when men be at oddes and difference, it is not lawfull to chide, braule, contend, crie, and liſt vp the voyce in threatnings, ſeeing all theſe are degrees and kindes of reuenge, which wee muſt leaue vnto God. Qu. What muſt a man doe that is to incounter with the Diuel, either by temptation, poſſeſſion, or otherwiſe? Anſ. Hee muſt follow the practiſe of the Archangel, euen flie to God by prayer, and intreate him to rebuke him. The like practiſe muſt be taken vp by thoſe who are to deale with heretikes, who ſeeke the ouerthrow of religion: The Lord must be intreated to restraine the malice of the Diuell, that he may not in himselfe or instruments preuaile to corrupt or represse; much lesse suppresse or supplant the truth.

Vers. 10. But these speake euill of those things which they know not, and whatsoeuer things they know naturally, as beasts which are without reason; in those things they corrupt themselues.

IN the former part of this verse is laid downe a third argument, which amplifieth the sinne of these deceiuers; thus framed: For a man to giue sentence, and condemne that which hee knoweth not, is a point of great iniustice and rashnes: But these men condemning Magistracie, condemne a thing they know not: and therefore are iustly accused of rashnes and iniustice. The like sinne of these seducers hath been too vsuall in all ages. In the daies of the Apostles themselues, the Gentiles accounted the doctrine of the Gospell but foolishnes: the Iewes, an offence; and yet neither of them knew what it was. The same rashnes is at this day to bee descried in the Church of Rome, who haue denounced the sentence of excommunication against our Churches, and condemne the Protestants for heretikes, when the most of them neuer knew our doctrine, nor neuer heard what wee could say for our selues; yea most iniuriously they mistake vs in sundry maine points of doctrine; as when wee teach that workes doe not iustifie a man before God, they crie out and say we condemne all good workes. The same fault is exceeding rife amongst vs in these daies: for let a man make conscience of his waies and endeuour to please God, he is presently branded with names of reproch, by those whose tongues are nimble to speake euill of things they neuer knew; who are to know that a man cannot be too precise in keeping the commaundements of God, and that themselues haue made a promise in Baptisme to walke in no other waies, and ought to renew the same so often as they come to the Lords table.

And whatsoeuer things they know naturally.] In the rest of this verse is set downe the third sinne of these deceiuers, which is the sinne of intemperance, standing in the immoderate vse of meate and drinke, apparell, &c. Touching this sinne two things are propounded: first, the proper cause of it, that is naturall knowledge, in these words: Whatsoeuer they know naturally.] Secondly, the sinne it selfe, or the propertie of it: In those things they corrupt themselues. The cause is, because they are guided with a naturall knowledge, like the bruite beasts which are without reason. There be three kindes of knowledge incident vnto the creature; first, naturall knowledge, arising from the instinct of nature common to man and beast, and consisting in the senses of sight, taste, touching, &c. by the benefit whereof the beast it selfe can discerne what is food fit for it selfe, and what is not; what is profitable, and what is hurtfull and vnprofitable for it: vnto which is ioyned a naturall appetite, by the benefit of which the creature can chuse or refuse his food and meate in season. The second is reasonable knowledge propet to man, and is nothing else, but the light of vnderstanding, whereby he reacheth farre higher, and discerneth meate, drinke, apparell, and rest, to be Gods good gifts, and knoweth the ciuill vse of them; with the which is ioyned election of will, whereby hee can chuse or refuse the ciuill or vnciuil, honest, or dishonest vse of them. This knowledge is in all men, for euen the Gentiles themselues doe by nature the things contained in the law, Rom. 2. 14. that is, ciuilly and outwardly: thus many of the Heathen haue excelled in ciuill carriage, and practise of iustice, temperance, and other ciuill vertues. The third is spirituall knowledge, not proceeding either from naturall instinct, or reason it selfe; but from the enlightening of the spirit of God: and it hath sundrie fruits. First, it enableth men to know these things in their right causes, as that these gifts of meates, drinks, & such like proceed from God, not as he is the God of nature only; but as by grace in Christ he is our God, yea our Father, & so they become pledges of his speciall mercie; seeing they are now restored againe to the beleeuer, hauing been formerly lost in Adams fall. Secondly, this knowledge causeth men to know them in the due measure of their goodnes and excellencie, rightly diſcerning them from ſpirituall bleſſings: ſo as the heart ſhall not be ſet vpon them in the firſt place, but vpon the other as of farre higher eſteeme; yea they ſhall bee counted as dung in regard of theſe. Thirdly, it inſtructeth men in the right vſe of them, namely when it worketh this perſwaſion in their hearts, that til their perſons pleaſe God they can neuer vſe them well; and then onely hee is pleaſed in their vſe of theſe, when as their perſons firſt pleaſe him. Qu. What is the thing then condemned in theſe ſeducers? Anſ. The very ſin condemned is, that in the vſe of the creatures of God they are not guided by reaſonable, much leſſe this ſpirituall knowledge; but onely by nature, ſenſe, and appetite, as the beaſt is, and no otherwiſe, which is the cauſe of all intemperance.

Hence note the proper cauſe of the abuſe of all Gods bleſſings vnto couetouſnes, pride, ſurfetting, drunkennes, and other ſinnes of that kinde: namely, becauſe though men haue by nature the vſe of reaſon; yet in the vſe of theſe things they lay it aſide, and follow their own ſenſe and appetite: ſo farre are they from being guided by that higher knowledge which is wrought by the ſpirit of God.

Secondly, from the reprehenſion we are taught to labor for ſpirituall knowledge, whereby we may be led into the right vſe of theſe temporall things; for then and not before ſhall we vſe them as pledges of Gods mercie in Chriſt vnto vs (as the beaſts cannot) and ſhall hardly be drawne to their abuſe in riot and intemperance, as theſe ſeducers were.

Thirdly, in that they are ſaid to bee guided only, as the beaſt which is without reaſon, that is by nature, ſenſe, and appetite: note the practiſe of the Diuel which is to keep men (if he can) in their naturall knowledge, and will not ſuffer them to attaine to that which is ſpirituall: yea and which is more, hee corrupteth alſo that naturall knowledge which men haue. A notable experience hereof we haue in the Church of Rome; which of a famous Church is become hereticall, and ſchiſmaticall; the reaſon of it is, becauſe the Diuell hath turned all their religion and doctrine, into a natural doctrine & religion: the maine points whereof are grounded vpon naturall reaſon, and the learning and Philoſophie of the Heathen and Gentiles. As iuſtification by workes, merits, Purgatorie, with the reſt. Others not a few amongſt our ſelues alſo are deluded by this ſubtilty of Satan; who ſuffereth many men to liue ciuilly and honeſtly among their neighbours, but will not brooke that they riſe any higher: they muſt content themſelues to liue by naturall knowledge: Hence many men plead they know enough, namely to loue God aboue all, and their neighbour as themſelues: and that God is mercifull, &c. which is nothing but a ſleight of the Diuell ſtill to hold them in their naturall knowledge, and ſo within his owne power.

The ſecond point is the ſinne it ſelfe, and propertie of it: In thoſe things they corrupt themſelues.] This ſin of intemperance cauſeth men in the abuſe of meate, drinke, and apparell, to corrupt themſelues: here then are two things to be ſpoken of, wherein the whole nature of intemperancie is ſufficientlie compriſed. Firſt of the abuſe of the creatures: ſecondly of his corruption that thus abuſeth them. Concerning the former; the abuſe of the creatures is foure waies: firſt, in exceſſe, whē men vſe them beyond their calling, habilitie, or that which nature requireth; this maketh the heart heauie: forbidden by Chriſt, Luk. 21.34. Secondly, in curioſitie, when men are not content with ordinarie meate, drink, apparell; but deuiſe new faſhions of apparell, and new kindes of waies of ſtirring vp and whetting of appetite. Thirdly, in affection, when men ſo addict themſelues to meates and drinks, as they cannot bee without them. The Miniſter muſt not be one that loueth to ſit at the wine, nor giuen to wine. The affection is here condemned, when he cannot ſit without the pot at his elbow; for elſe it is indifferent, & for his health ſake he may drinke a little wine. Paul willeth that the ioy in the creature bee as no ioy. Thoſe alſo are reproued that drinke not for ſtrength, but for drinke ſake: for although they neither are drunke nor ſurfet, yet this very affection is a ſinne. Fourthly, in time, when theſe good creatures are vſed vnſeaſonably. Eccleſ. 10.16. Woe be to the land whoſe

Eccleſ. 10. 17.

Princes riſe early to eate. A woe is alſo denounced againſt thoſe, that riſe early to drinke wine, Iſai.5.11. that is, out of ſeaſon. The rich man for that he was clad in purple, and fared deliciouſly euery day, is branded with a note of intemperance, in not obſeruing this diſtinction of times. Theſe bee the waies whereby the creatures are abuſed.

The ſecond point is, how intemperate perſons in theſe things corrupt thēſelues: namely foure waies: firſt, in regard of their bodies, vpon which by their ſin of intemperance they call ſundrie ſickneſſes, diſeaſes, yea and haſten their death. Secondly, they deface Gods image, making themſelues worſe than the beaſts themſelues. Thirdly, they deſtroy their ſoules; for no drunkard, or riotous perſon ſhal inherit heauen, 1.Cor.3. Fourthly, they ouerthrow their families in waſting their ſubſtance, to the maintaining of their intemperance, and ſo bring ruine to the places where they liue.

Vſe. In theſe ſeducers we haue a glaſſe, wherein to behold the ſtate of our daies and times; in which intemperance hath taken place not only in prophane houſes, but euē in religious places, & where reformation is profeſſed. A common practiſe it is to drink with glaſſes, without feete, which muſt neuer reſt; alſo by the bell, the die, the douzen, the yard, and other meaſures, & then vſe Tabacco or other meanes to ſharpen appetite ſtill: an horrible ſin exceeding this ſin of theſe ſeducers themſelues. Secondly, ſeeing intemperance bringeth iuſt corruption, and in the end deſtructiō vpon the offenders, we muſt make conſcience of ſobrietie and temperance: this is the end of Gods grace which hath appeared, to teach vs to liue ſoberly, Tit.2.12. And whoſoeuer cannot obtaine thus much of himſelfe to deny the abuſe of creatures, will neuer attaine to the deniall of himſelfe for Chriſt his ſake, and is as yet a man of no religion.

But for the defending of this murthering ſinne, ſome things are alleaged.

No face is ſo foule but ſhall finde ſome painter.

1.Ob. Gen.43.vlt. Ioſeph and his brethren did eate & drink, and were drunke together. Hagge 1.6. The people are threatned to drinke, but not to drunkenneſs: wherfore drunkennes is not vnlawfull; yea it is a curſe to drinke and not to be drunke. Anſ. Theſe places may indeed be thus tranſlated; but then drunkennes is taken two waies: firſt, for exceſſe in drinking: of which the places alleaged ſpeake not. Secondly, for liberall or plentifull drinking, and this may bee done in a holie manner. So Ioſeph with his brethren eat and dranke liberally and plentifully; but not exceſſiuely: ſo the people were threatned in Hagge to drinke, but not to ſatietie and plentifulnes.

2.Ob. Ioh.2. It is ſaid the gueſts had well drunke; yet Chriſt turned water into wine ſtill, and commaunded the Miniſters to draw forth. Anſ. This only ſheweth what we may doe; namely, vſe the creatures of God in plentifull and liberall manner, vpon ſuch occaſions as this; but iuſtifieth not intemperance, or exceſſe in the vſe of them.

3. Ob. It is an ancient rule, that in ſome olde and lingering diſeaſes it is good to be drunke; therefore it is lawfull vpon ſome occaſion to be drunke. Anſ. This cannot be done in good conſcience, being an vnlawfull meanes to cure any diſeaſe, though old and vſed.

4.Ob. But ſome ſay they can drinke and neuer be drunke, they can beare more away than two or three. Anſ. Woe vnto them that are ſtrong to drinke wine and ſtrong drinke; there is a curſe of God againſt them who vſe needleſſe drinking, though they neuer ſurfet nor be drunke. Iſai.5.22.

Q. For what ends may we vſe the creatures, and in what manner? Anſ. The lawful end of their vſe is two-fold: firſt, for neceſſitie to preſerue life and health: ſecondly, for our lawful and honeſt delight. Pſal.104.14. God giueth bread to ſtrengthen the heart, and oyle alſo to make his countenance glad. Chriſt ſuffered a woman to powre a boxe of pretious oyntment vpon his head: himſelf was at a feaſt in Galeley and forbad not the liberal vſe of wine. Secondly, for the manner and meaſure we muſt knowe that one man cannot herein be a rule to another, one mans ſtomack and health craueth more, another leſſe. But euery man muſt obſerue this rule of ſobrietie: that he haue alwaies an eye to ſpirituall exerciſes; as praier, hearing of the word, meditation, as alſo to the workes and duties of his ſpeciall calling; and ſo much as fitteth a man vnto theſe is his meaſure: and when a man by the creatures maketh himſelfe heauie and vnfit for theſe, he hath exceeded his meaſure.

Verſ.

Verſ.11. Woe vnto them, for they haue followed the way of Caine, and are caſt away by the deceit of Balams wages, and periſh in the gainſaying of Core.

IN the former words of the verſe, [Woe vnto them] is laid downe the concluſion of the principall argument of the Epiſtle, namely, that theſe ſeducers ſhall be deſtroyed: hauing taken vnto themſelues libertie of ſinning; which he hath alreadie prooued by a particular enumeration of the ſinnes, vnto which they were addicted: and further amplifieth that ſecond part of the reaſon, by the reckoning vp of diuers other ſinnes, both in this verſe, and in the reſt vnto the twentith. Firſt of the concluſion; Woe vnto them.] Here firſt it may bee demaunded, why or how the Apoſtle dare pronounce ſuch a peremptorie ſentence againſt them, and that of euerlaſting condemnation; ſeeing the Archangell durſt not paſſe iudgement, no not againſt the Diuell himſelfe? Anſ. There be two grounds of this practiſe: firſt, God giueth to all Prophets, Apoſtles and Miniſters the power of the keyes; whereby they retaine and binde vp ſome mens ſinnes to deſtruction, as alſo to remit and looſe the ſins of ſome others: in both which they pronounce iudgement generally. Secondly, God gaue yet a further power vnto Prophets and Apoſtles (which is denied now to ordinarie Miniſters) whereby reuealing vnto them his ſpeciall iudgements againſt particular perſons, hee made them his inſtruments to pronounce theſe his iudgements againſt men, euen in particular. Thus Dauid, Pſal.109. curſed particular perſons. Paul curſeth Alexander the Copperſmith, 2. Tim. 4. and Gal.5.12. Would to God they were euen cut off that trouble you: and by the ſame ſpirit of reuelation the Apoſtle diſcerned this woe moſt certainly to befall theſe ſeducers. Vſe. Hence the Papiſts conclude, that Prophets, and Apoſtles, and cõſequently the Popes, may make laws to binde the conſcience, becauſe they haue power ouer it; it being lawfull for them to curſe bodie and ſoule. Anſw. A creature may bee curſed two waies: firſt, by impoſing a curſe and inflicting it vpon the bodie, ſoule, or conſcience: this is the peculiar curſe of God, reſting in his power alone, and is not committed to Prophets, Apoſtles, or Miniſters; for it argueth ſuch a power ouer the ſoule as may ſaue or deſtroy it. Secondly, by foretelling and pronouncing a curſe to come, which God will inflict; and this is that which belongeth to Prophets, Apoſtles, and Miniſters: but this argueth no power at al ouer the conſcience. Secondly, ſome hence may conceiue that they haue warrant to curſe other creatures, man or beaſt, ſeeing the Apoſtle vſeth it. Anſ. This practiſe of the Apoſtle (hauing an extraordinary ſpirit of reuelation) is no rule for any man, no not for the Miniſter ordinarily called. Our rule left vs by Chriſt is to bleſſe, and not curſe, Mat.5.44. Rom. 12.14. which muſt be vnderſtood of particular perſons, for otherwiſe the Miniſter hath authoritie to accurſe impenitent ſinners in generall; but not this or that particular perſon; no not in Gods cauſe: for he knowes not what ſhall be the future eſtate of this or that man in particular: much leſſe may priuate men in priuate cauſes vſe curſings or imprecations againſt others: which condemneth their wicked practiſe, who in their anger and impatience breake out into curſing of their childrẽ, ſeruants, friends, yea or enemiẽs; our contrary duty muſt be to bleſſe, as we are called vnto bleſſing. Thirdly, marke the Apoſtles diſpoſition; they were themſelues moſt meek in dealing with men, who called others vnto meeknes; their own patient minds were knowne vnto all men in all the matters of men: but when Gods glorie was called into queſtion, and the ſaluation of men likely to be hindred, they lay aſide their meekenes, and put on ſeueritie, and roughnes, their zeale in Gods matters would not admit ſuch lenitie and patience, as towards men in mens matters they were willing to exerciſe. They had an Apoſtolicall rod, which in ſuch caſes they vſed againſt offenders. Moſes the meekeſt man vpon the earth, when he ſaw the Iſraelites worſhip the golden Calfe, was ſo incenſed with wrath, that hee brake the Tables which were in his hands, and tooke his ſword, and together with the Leuites ſlew three thouſand of them the ſame day, Exod.32.27. bruſed reede; yet dealing with the Scribes and Phariſies, who had corrupted the whole lawe, laded them with woes and curſes, Matth. 23. Paul, who otherwiſe was all things to all men; yet when Gods glory was impared by Elymas his withſtanding of him, he ſtrook him blinde: and curſed Alexander out of a rightly ordered and holie zeale: all which examples teach vs the like religious affection, that when Gods honor is in hazard, our zeale ſhould be inflamed; when mans ſaluation is likely to be hindred, our meeknes muſt be for the time ſet aſide, that the zeale of Gods houſe may euen conſume vs, Pſalm. 69. 9. as it did Chriſt himſelfe when he ſaw his Fathers houſe diſhonoured, and of a houſe of prayer made a denne of theeues, vnto whom we are daily to be conformed.

They haue followed the way of Caine.] In theſe words the Apoſtle returneth to the former part of the reaſon, whereby he hath alreadie by three forenamed ſinnes proued, that theſe ſeducers are they which take libertie to ſinne; and vnto them addeth this fourth: That they haue followed the way of Caine. In which, firſt we will ſhew the meaning of the words; and then obſerue the doctrines. In the former conſider two things: firſt, what is the way of Caine: ſecondly, why they are ſaid to walke in this way of Caine. The way of Caine is that courſe of life which Caine took vp to himſelf, in following the luſts of his owne heart againſt the will of God. It is deſcribed in Gen. 4. of which way there be ſeuen ſteps or degrees, but euery one out of the right way. The firſt ſtep was his hypocriſie: he worſhipped God by offring ſacrifice as Abel did, but his heart was not a beleeuing heart as Abels was; his worſhip was outward & ceremonious, but not in ſpirit and truth, for his heart was an euill heart of vnbeleefe. The ſecond, his hatred of his owne, onely, and naturall brother, proſecuting him with wrath and indignation, teſtified by the caſting downe of his countenance vpon him: the reaſon of all which was, becauſe his own works were euill, and his brothers good, 1. Ioh. 3. 12. ſo as (his brothers offering being accepted, and his reiected) he feared that Abel might get the birthright, and become the Prieſt, Prophet, and King in the familie, and euery way (as he deſerued) be preferred before him; for thus much is ſignified in theſe words, Geneſ. 4. 7. that if he did well, Abels affection ſhould bee ſubiect vnto him, and he ſhould hold his rule ouer him. The third, his murther, whereby hee ſlew his righteous brother. The fourth, his lying vnto God, ſaying, he knew not where his brother was, hauing ſlaine him, and extenuating his ſinne, denied himſelfe to be his brothers keeper. The fifth, his deſperation, after that God had conuicted him and pronounced ſentence againſt him: for being curſed for his ſinne, he cutteth himſelfe off from the mercie of God, in ſaying: My puniſhment is greater than I am able to beare. The ſixth, his ſecuritie and careleſnes, hee regardeth not his ſinne, nor the conſcience of it, but buſieth himſelfe in building a Citie, and calleth it after the name of his child: that ſeeing his name was not written in heauen, he might yet preſerue his name and memorie in the earth. The ſeuenth and laſt, which was the higheſt ſtep of his way, was his prophanenes; for from thencefoorth he caſt off, and contemned all the care and practiſe of Gods worſhip: which appeareth Gen. 4. 26. Then men began to call vpon the name of the Lord. Which wordes haue relation to the whole chapter going before concerning Caine and his poſteritie, who had vtterly reiected the ſeruice of God, and betaken themſelues to other affaires: Caine himſelfe to his building; Lamech to his luſt, being the firſt founder of Polygamie; for hee tooke vnto him two wiues: Iabal to the framing and pitching of Tents: Iubal to Muſicke: Tubal Caine to other curious works. But when Enoch was borne, then men began to affect better things, to call vpon the name of the Lord; then the true worſhip of God (formerly neglected) began to bee reſtored. This is the path wherein Caine walked.

The ſecond point is, in what regard theſe ſeducers are ſaid to follow Cains way, and that is in regard of all theſe ſeuen ſinnes: but eſpecially in the hatred and crueltie which he practiſed againſt his brother: for as he was bloodily, and maliciouſly minded towards his brother, though he gaue him good words, till he ſaw his time conuenient to execute his conceiued malice: ſo is it with theſe ſeducers, they may ſeeme for the ſeaſon otherwiſe affected, yet indeed they carrie a hatefull affection to the Church of God, and againſt thoſe alſo that endeuour in the building vp of the ſame.

Doct. Hence firſt note that the way of Caine is the high and broad way of the world. The Turks and Iews follow Caines footſteps in the profeſſion and practiſe of all prophanenes, in that they denie and deſpiſe the Meſſias the Sonne of God, yea and perſecute with a deadly hatred all Chriſtians, and are neuer ſatisfied with the ſpilling of their blood. The way of the Papiſts alſo is the way of Caine, carrying within them the ſame heart towards Proteſtants, which Caine did towards Abel; without any conuiction of them either of hereſie, or of wickednes; and (no otherwiſe than Caine) they now carrie themſelues quietly and ſilently till opportunitie may ſerue them: which if it were offered, we ſhould feele and haue fearefull experience of the fruits of a Cainiſh heart in them, as Abel did. Beſides, the doctrine of the Romiſh Church teacheth the way of Caine, for it ſtādeth wholy in outward Ceremonies, borrowed partly from the Iewes, partly from the Heathen; yea it traineth vp men to bee hypocrites, becauſe it is onely a dumbe and dead ſhew, without any power or life of godlines. Againe, it teacheth deſperation, in that by it no man ought to be aſſured of his ſaluation (for that were preſumption) as alſo that a man muſt ſatisfie the iuſtice of God for his ſinnes, and can neuer obtaine pardon without confeſſion of all his ſinnes in the eare of the Prieſt. And to come neerer home euen among our ſelues, this way of Cain is not vnbeaten; our hypocriſie, lying, malice, but aboue all, our prophanenes will conuince vs hereof. Doe not men goe backward in religion, as thoſe that ſhake off the waies of God? Is not the Goſpell of farre leſſe reckoning among vs, than it hath been heretofore? Is that wholſome doctrine not leſſe reſpected now, than it was twentie yeeres agoe? and much leſſe therfore obeyed? which is a manifeſt argument that Caines way is generally the beaten way of this age.

The way of Caine beaten in Poperie, as is ſeene in infinite cauſeleſſe maſſacres and cruell murthers of Proteſtants.

2. Doct. Secondly, wee muſt be warned to turne out of the way of Caine, into the waies of God. Qu. Which is the way of God that wee may walke in it? Anſ. It is altogether contrarie to the way of Caine: for firſt in Gods way is ſinceritie. God is worſhipped in the ſpirit, and not in hypocriſie. Secondly, loue of God and men, teſtified in word, and deede; oppoſed to Cains hatred. Thirdly, in Gods way is faith, which reſteth vpon Gods mercie and prouidence, euen againſt feeling, both in life and death; oppoſed to Caines deſperation. Fourthly, wiſedome, whereby the heart is ſtirred vp to ſeeke Gods kingdome, peace of conſcience, inward ioy, and in the ſecond place for the things of this life. Fifthly, in Gods way is faithfulnes and conſtancie, men that begin in the ſpirit end not in the fleſh, but are faithfull to the death: whereas the way of Caine is to begin with ſacrifice, but end in profanenes. This is the way of God in which we muſt walke: vſing all good meanes whereby wee may be both ſet and contained therein; eſpecially the word preached and the Sacraments; which meanes the very Phariſie himſelfe could acknowledge when he ſaid to Chriſt, Maiſter thou teacheſt the way of God truly. So the Prophet Eſay ſaith: Ye ſhall heare a voyce behind you, ſaying, This is the way, walk in it: this voice is nothing but the voice of the ſpirit in the miniſtrie of the word.

3. Doct. Thirdly, note what theſe ſeducers are blamed for, namely for two things: firſt, for making choiſe of Cains way: ſecondly, for walking and going on forward in it; which is a propertie of the wicked. It is true that the childe of God by the frailtie of the fleſh may ſlip into Caines way, as Dauid did in ſlaying Vriah; but hee doth not ſtand, goe on, and keepe a courſe in that way, as the wicked doe, being branded to be ſuch, as ſtand in the way of ſinners, Pſal. 1. We on the contrarie muſt preſerue a care to recouer our ſelues out of the way of Caine, if at any time we ſhall be miſled into it: that if we cannot keepe from al ſinne, yet we may be kept from a courſe and trade in ſinning. Let this Chriſtian care preſerue our paths in the waies of God, and returne vs vnto the obedience of his will, when through many weakneſſes and ſlips we often are turned aſide: and the rather becauſe Caines end attendeth Caines whole courſe; who was haunted with an euill and accusing conscience, whose sinne lay at the doore as a wilde beast readie to teare him, and pull out the throte of his soule: besides that he was accursedly cast from the presence and face of God; that howsoeuer hee was a Prince and mightie amongst men, yet he was a vagabond and runnagate on the face of the earth: which curses let them not looke to auoide whosoeuer will follow his way, no more than Caine himselfe could.

And are cast away by the deceit of Balaams wages.] In these wordes is set downe the fifth sinne of these seducers: the meaning of which is first to bee knowne. Cast away. The word signifieth they are powred out, or powred away: which forme of speech is taken from water, the which distilleth not out of a vessell drop by drop; but is powred out in abundance, till so all is quickly spent. Whereby the Apostle would giue vs to vnderstand, that in the affection of their hearts they were violent, and euen carried headlong to commit their wickednesse. By the deceit of Balaams wages: that is, they are thus forcibly carried to doe euill vpon hope of wages; of which hope notwithstanding they are disappointed and defeated as Balaam was. So as this fifth sinne is couetousnes, propounded in a similitude or comparison, of which there are two branches: first, as Balaam was carried headlong to curse the people of God in hope of wages; so these wicked men vpon hope of reward are set to falsifie and corrupt the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles. Secondly, as Balaam was deceiued and frustrated of the reward hoped for, as Numb. 31.8. hee lost his reward, yea and after his life (for returning home hee was slaine by the Midianites) so shall these lose their reward which they expect, for falsifying that doctrine which they teach: And so much for the meaning. That which was the sinne of these seducers, is the sinne of these times of ours, wherein 2.Pet.2.3. that propheſie of Peter is accomplished; where is foretold that false teachers should come in the latter times, who through couetousnes, with fained words should make merchandise of mens soules. Quest. But where shall we finde these couetous teachers? Ans. They are too easily found euery where, but especially within the precincts of the church of Rome. The Bishop of Rome and the guides of that Church are the Archseducers, who through couetousnes make merchandise of mens soules, teaching first that a man must confesse all his sinnes, or else hee cannot be forgiuen; and when he hath reckoned vp all, hee must satisfie for them in that manner as they will prescribe: who commonlie enioyne men to bestow so much land, or such a summe or pension of money vpon this or that Church, or Abbey, that so they may buy out a pardon. By which wicked doctrine through couetousnes they haue (by encroching vpon Countries and kingdomes) enriched themselues, and purchased, or rather craftily conueyed to themselues the greatest part of the reuenewes of all Europe. Secondly, they through couetousnes maintaine the distinction betweene mortall and veniall sinnes; betweene the fact and the punishment, and hold that the sinne may be remitted, but not the punishment: for which purpose the fire of hell is changed by them into a milder fire of Purgatorie, to bee suffered after this life; of which the Pope is Lord and King, indulgent to whom he please: especially to those that can pay well for the merits of others, or masses of their own. This painted fire hath a long time kept the fire of the Popes kitchin so bright burning, which if it should goe out, his state were shaken. Thirdly, through couetousnes they forbid many degrees of men from marriage, which God forbiddeth not, that so they may the oftner dispense with those degrees which themselues haue forbidden: for the more dispensations, the more wealth haue they comming in. And thus is their whole religion contriued and plotted for gaine, compacted of falsehood and couetousnes. So as Peters prediction is most fully accomplished in these Balaamites of Rome: but especially herein the Pope is become a second Balaam, in that as Balaam cursed Gods people for gaine; so to maintaine his owne pompe and state, by his Buls and thunderbolts hath he assaied to curse euen Kings and Princes, and some whole kingdomes, yea all such as haue shaken off his intolerable Antichristian yoke. The same accusation may be iustly intended against verie tie many that profeſſe godlineſſe and true religion; for theſe be the laſt daies and perilous times, wherein men ſhall be louers of themſelues, couetous, &c. 2. Tim. 3. 2. Such as Ieremy complained of, Iere. 6. 13. From the leaſt to the greateſt euery one is giuen to couetouſnes; from the Prophet vnto the Prieſt they deale all falſely. The vſuries, oppreſſions, iniuſtice, the common craft and cuſtomable deceit in all trades, crie out of this ſinne of couetouſnes in all eſtates. But ſome will perhaps here ſay; Yea but you wrong Chriſtians to charge them thus deeply with Balaams ſinne, for they haue better things in them. Anſ. But it is no iniuſtice, for Balaam had ſome as good things in him as many Chriſtians: for when he was firſt ſolicited of Balaak to curſe the people of God, he would not till he asked leaue of God; and when God had denied him leaue, he anſwered him that he would not go with him if hee would giue him his houſe full of gold and ſiluer. Further, he deſired earneſtly to die the death of the righteous, and that his end might be like his. Iudas alſo had many good things in him, he left all to follow Chriſt; he became a preacher of the truth, none of the Diſciples could accuſe him, or could eſpie any thing in him, and yet was carried away with couetouſnes: ſo let no man obiect the good things in many Chriſtians, which I grant they may haue, and yet too eagerly hunt after the world, yea and be powred out alſo after filthie lucre no otherwiſe than Balaam was.

Now for the auoiding of this ſinne, let vs obſerue three things, which the Apoſtle admoniſheth in the words. Firſt, in that he ſaith they are powred out, we are giuen to vnderſtand that the affection of couetouſnes is a moſt violent headſtrong affection, carrying a man headlong to ſinne euen againſt conſcience, as it did Balaam: and cauſing him to powre out his heart vnto wickednes. Achans couetouſnes could not be curbed, no not by Gods ſpeciall commandement, the wedge of gold and the Babyloniſh garmẽt did ſo ſway with him. Ahab was ſicke of couetouſnes, no phyſicke could recouer him, but Naboths vineyard and life. Iudas for thirtie peeces of ſiluer was carried againſt al ſenſe to the betraying of his Maſter, and that after diuers admonitions. Ananias and Saphira to ſaue but a little money, make no bones of lying vnto the holy Ghoſt. What is the cauſe of all treacheries, and thoſe moſt cruell murthers, of fathers, of mothers, of ſeruants, and ſtrangers, but the couetous heart ſet vpon the bootie, ſaying to it ſelfe; by this fact, this houſe, that land, ſuch a ſumme of money ſhall be mine? which obiect in the eye putteth out all the light of religion, reaſon, and ſometimes of nature it ſelfe. Thus the heart is eaſily powred out vnto euill, when as firſt it is poſſeſſed with couetouſnes, which Paul calleth the roote of all euill.

Couetouſnes a violent and headie ſin.

Ioſh. 7.

Secondly, the Apoſtle would haue vs conſider how hard a thing it is to be recouered from this ſinne, ſeeing ſuch a ſinner is powred out and caſt away by the deceit of it: and indeede little hope is there of the repentance of a couetous man, of whom Chriſt was bold to ſay, that as eaſie it is for a Camell to goe thorough the eye of a needle, as a rich man to enter into heauen: the reaſon is, becauſe his couetous cares choke and hinder the word from taking place in his hart, and ſo hee fruſtrateth all meanes of his ſaluation. Againe, he hath renounced the true God, and ſet vp another god in his heart. The Idols in our Church are defaced and deſtroyed by the Magiſtrate; but the Diuell ſetteth vp Idols ſtill in the hearts of men, which ought to bee Gods temples, euen Riches the god of greedie men.

Thirdly, obſerue that in Gods iuſt iudgement the couetous man is diſappointed of his hope, his wages are the wages of deceitfulnes: for either he atchieueth not, or retaineth not the things expected, as in the former examples: of Achan, who for the wedge loſt his life with it; ſo neither Ahab himſelfe, nor his poſteritie euer enioyed Naboths vineyard. Iudas brought backe the thirtie peeces of ſiluer, and hanged himſelfe. Ananias and Saphira deſirous to keepe a part of their poſſeſſion, loſt with the poſſeſſion both their liues: or elſe if hee retaine the bootie, and get and keepe alſo wealth fraudulently gotten and heaped vp by oppreſſion; yet hauing the thing, he hath not the vſe of it; his couetous heart keepeth the key of it, and locketh it from his comfortable vſe: yea, and be it that he haue ſome vſe of it, yet his gaine is ſmall for which he loſeth

Vſe. We are all hence admoniſhed, eſpecially aged and rich perſons, to beware of this dangerous ſinne. It becommeth Saints not to haue couetouſnes once named among them, Epheſ.6. Our practiſe is to varniſh it ouer with termes of thriftines and good husbandrie, and the worſt it heareth of vs is ſcarſe a ſmal diſlike: ſo as when wee ſpeake of a wrechod worldling, we ſay he is an honeſt man, but ſomewhat hard or worldly: ſo as this ſinne is in no diſgrace among the moſt, as it deſerueth, being both ſo odious vnto God, and hurtfull vnto the ſinner himſelfe. But let vs conſider firſt that it eaſily draweth a man vnto perdition, and enwrappeth him in the Diuels ſnare. 1.Tim.6.9. Thoſe that will be rich fall into many temptations and ſnares. Whereſoeuer it ruleth, that man reſpecteth not commandement, reaſon, conſcience, no nor common honeſtie it ſelfe. Secondly, wee profeſſe our ſelues to be members of Chriſt, the ſons and daughters of God; now ſuch a baſe ſinne beſeemeth not ſuch an high profeſſion: for a Noble man or a Prince apparent to ſpend and trifle away his time in buying and ſelling pinnes and points were a madnes; what a baſe follie were it for vs that hope to bee heires of the kingdome of glorie to bee ſtill poring on earth and earthly things? whoſe hearts and affections ſhould be raiſed vp higher, and taken vp with heauenly meditations, vſing weanedly this world as though we vſed it not. Thirdly, Nature is contented with a little, and is ſurfetted with abundance: and yet grace is pleaſed with leſſe: and therefore if we haue food and raiment for vs and ours, let vs bee therewith contented, 1.Tim.6.8. Qu. But what ſhall we doe then? doe not all men thus, and may not wee ſeeke wealth as others doe? Anſ. The rule of the word muſt bee our direction herein, and not the manner of the world: and that aduiſeth vs to make God our portion: which leſſon God himſelfe taught Abraham, Gen.15.1. I am thy buckler, and thy exceeding great reward. Dauid had learned this leſſon, Pſal.16. The Lord is my portion. This is done by ſetting our loue, our ioy, our principall care, yea our hearts and affections vpon the Lord, as men doe vpon their treaſures. By which meanes if riches increaſe, our hearts ſhall not be ſet vpon them, for they are not our portion; and if we be pinched and preſſed with aduerſitie, want, or loſſes, yet ſhall we not be oppreſſed; for we want nothing but that we may well be without, and haue not as yet loſt any part of our portion.

Further, in the phraſe which the Apoſtle vſeth; They are powred away, note a difference between the child of God, and a wicked man; when both of them are found in the ſame ſinne, but the one powreth out himſelfe to wickednes, giueth himſelfe leaue to ſin with full conſent, without reſtraint, yea with greedines: the other ſinneth with conſent, but not full conſent; for being regenerate hee is not all fleſh as the wicked man, but partly, fleſh, partly ſpirit: and therefore partly willeth and conſenteth to ſin, partly nilleth & conſenteth not, he is not powred out without reſtraint, as the other is, but at length recouereth himſelfe by repentance, and obtaineth reconciliation with God. Secondly, we muſt beware of powring out our ſelues to wickednes, but rather with Annah powre out our ſoules before the Lord in humble confeſſion of ſinne, and petition for pardon, that ſo the Lord may powre foorth his mercie vpon vs, and ſhed his loue abroad in our hearts. Thirdly, we may not content our ſelues with a few or ſome good things; for the hart may notwithſtanding be powred foorth to ſinne, as Balaam and Iudas; but ſeeke carefully to haue our hearts truly ſeaſoned with grace, with the loue and feare of God, which for the preſent will cauſe vs to decline euerie euill way; yea to deteſt and hate euery ſinne, and for time to come with a reſolute and conſtant purpoſe, and endeuour neuer to offend God againe: for otherwiſe a ſhew of ſome good things may often deceiue and delude vs, and wee may periſh for all them, as Balaam did. Laſtly, we are hence taught neuer to giue reines to our affections and deſires, but curbe, crucifie and mortifie them carefully: for if once they get head, and bee yeelded vnto, they will not eaſily be ſubdued, nor ſuffer a mā quiet til he haue powred forth himſelf vnto all wickednes, and ſo brought him into the high way of perdition.

And

And are perished in the gainsaying of Core. In these words the Apostle laieth downe the sixth sinne of these seducers: to vnderstand the meaning whereof, consider two things: first the historie it selfe: secondly, the application of it. The historie is recorded in Numb.16. wherin Moses mentioneth three things concerning Corah: first, the cause of his sinne, which was ambition and pride; for Core (being a Leuite) affected the Priesthood of Aaron: and Dathan and Abiram (being heads of the tribe of Ruben) stroue to take the gouernment of the people out of Moses his hand, who was appointed by God as King ouer the Israelites, Deut.33.5. Secondly, the sinne it selfe, namely in this their discontentment, they enterprised an insurrection against Moses and Aaron: they stood vp against them, contradicted and gainsaid them in their offices; and charged them first that they vsurped authoritie, and tooke too much vpon them, and lifted vp themselues aboue the congregation without the Lord, vers.3. and therefore they would not obey Moses commaundement, vers.12. and secondly, that Moses had dealt deceitfully with the people; and (onely in policie to make himselfe a King) had promised them a land flowing with milk and honey, whereas they saw no such matter: nay rather hee had brought them out of Egypt to destroy them in the wildernes, ver.13.14. Thirdly, their punishment for their sin, which was an horrible destruction vpon them, and their companie, being all of them partly swallowed vp of the earth; partly deuoured by fire from heauen, verse. 32.35.

Secondly, the historie of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, is applied to these false teachers by way of comparison, and they are compared in two things. First, as Core and his companie most ambitiously and proudly gainsaid Moses and Aaron; so doe these false teachers the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles. Secondly, as they were destroyed for their such resistance; euen so shall these perish in their gainsaying of the truth. Thus the meaning of the words is made plaine. This Epistle was written for a warning vnto the last times, euen vnto vs vpon whom the ends of the world are come; and therfore that which is affirmed of these men, is verified in sundrie sorts of men in this age. For example: first, the Bishop of Rome is the next follower of Core: for looke as Core gainsaid Moses and Aaron, in regard of their lawfull authoritie; so doth the Pope gainsay Christian Kings and Princes, in striuing to take out of their hands all their power and authoritie in causes Ecclesiastical within their owne dominions: nay herein he goeth beyond Core, in that hee vsurpeth that power ouer them which the Lord hath put into their owne hands, and so (being inuested in their own persons) most rightfully belongeth vnto themselues. Secondly, his shauelings, and Masse-priests, not onely gainsay and contradict Christ in his doctrine; but also attempt to vsurpe his office, in offring a real and proper sacrifice of attonement for the sinnes of the quicke and dead: yea, and (wherein they strip Core) they take vpon them to become mediatours betweene Christ and the Father, in praying the Father that he would accept the sacrifice of his Sonne, as hee did the sacrifice of Abel. Thirdly, of this sort are all Traytors and Rebels, either Priests or Iesuits, or other traiterously minded men at home or abroad, who (no otherwise than Core) gainsay the ordinance of God, and stand out in deniall or resistance of their lawfull and naturall Prince, whom the same punishment shall assuredly finde out, which consumed Corah and his companie in the end of their conspiracie. Fourthly, many amongst vs who professe the Gospel, yet walke in the gainsaying of Core, of whō some wil openly say they care not what the Ministers speake; whatsoeuer it is they will withstand it: yea many wretched creatures who come to the Lords Table, will not sticke to say, that they hope to see the day when they shall bee hanged; which argueth them to bee abetters in the wicked conspiracie of Core. Lastly, it were to bee wished that some of our students euen of Diuinitie, had not a spice of this sinne of Core: for within this sixe or seuen yeeres, diuers haue addicted themselues to studie Popish writers, and Monkish discourses, despising in the meane time the writings of those famous instruments and cleere lights, whom the Lord raised vp for the raising and restoring of true religion; ligion; such as Luther, Caluin, Bucer, Beza, Martyr, &c. which argueth that their mindes are alienated from the sincerity of the truth; because the writings of these (the soundest expositors of the Scriptures raised since the Apostles) are not sauourie vnto them: yea some can reuile these worthie lights themselues, which is a spice of Core his sinne.

2. Doctr. Secondly, hence wee are taught to beware of ambition, and studie to bee contented with that condition of life wherein God hath placed vs, not seeking things beyond our estate. Dauid would not meddle with things beyond his reach, Psal. 131. 1. Paul had learned in euery estate to bee con-
Philip. 4. ted, to be abased as well as to be exalted. Our first parents in the ambitious conceit of further highnes, fell from a most happie condition, and brought ruine vpon themselues, and vs their posteritie. The vertue of contentation is indeed necessarie for al men, but especially let students seeke it at the hands of God; and the rather, because that within these few yeeres diuers of them (not possessing the benefit of this vertue) being frustrated here of their expected preferments, which they thought were due to their gifts, haue departed away discontented, and haue growne to resolution in heresie, Papistrie, treasons, and most desperate attempts. Now that euery man may learne to bee contented with his condition, be it better or worse, let him think well vpon these two considerations: first, that the present estate and condition of life, wherin euery man is set by God, is the best estate for him: health is best in time of health, and sicknes in time of sicknes: riches when they are enioyed, pouertie and want when the Lord changeth his hand: life whilest he liueth, yea and death it self is the best when as that change befalleth: and all this is because the Lord so ordereth and disposeth vnto euery man out of his wise prouidence, which wee for our parts must in all our thoughts be submitted vnto. Secondly, that in regard of our sinnes we are lesse than the least of Gods mercies; vnworthie to draw breath in the common ayre, or to tread vpon the earth: and therefore (being so vnworthie) if we haue but small & few blessings, wee may well content our selues: for by our deserts wee cannot challenge so much as wee haue. Iacob herein staied himselfe in his want that he was vnworthie of the least mercie of God: the baasest calling is too good for the best man, if hee looke at his desert. Ob. But euery man is preferred before me, and yet I deserue as well as they, or some of them. Ans. Herein content thy self, God hath called them to such condition; stay till he call thee: distract not thy thoughts herewith, but rest in his reuealed will.

3. Doct. Thirdly, it may seeme strange that Core & his companie should gainsay Moses and Aaron, and their authoritie, especially beholding all the miracles whereby their calling was confirmed, the one to be Prince, the other the high Priest; and yet we see it to be so: for his affection had blinded his conscience: hee knew very well that they were called by God: he saw their whole religious course, the great miracles in their hands: but yet the disordred affections of his hart were they which blinded the vnderstanding of his minde. In like manner, men may marueile that so many learned Papists, otherwise so wise and prudent, should maintaine so many grosse errors, and heresies, and those against the foundation of religion: but the case is with them as it was with Core; for let them bee neuer so learned, graue, and wise, yet their wicked hearts and ambitious affections ouercast their iudgement and knowledge, and ouercarrie them against conscience: yea and often reason it self: they reade the Bible the word of truth, but see not the truth therein contained, because the clowd of corrupt affections hath ouerspread and darkned their vnderstandings. Whence wee may learne, that if at any time wee would with fruite heare, reade, studie or learne the word of God, we must bring with vs not only quick vnderstandings, sharpe conceits, and firme memories, but honest hearts, calme and tempered affections: without which it shall bee with vs as with the Iewes, who saw indeed and yet perceiued not.

Fourthly, here Magistrates and Ministers must learne, not to be discouraged if they be gainsaid and contradicted by such as Core, Dathan, and Abiram, who were great men in their Tribes; it was Moses and Aarons lot. Christ himselfe was a rocke of offence, and many stumbled at him; he was made a wonder of men, and few of the great beleeued his doctrine: yea few there were that did not gainsay it: it is not well with men when all men speake well of them; meeke Moses shall haue his patience tried by very many such in the world.

The worst kinde of discontentment is in things concerning mans saluation.

Fifthly, Students especially of Diuinitie, must take heede of this spirit of contradiction and gainesaying, whereby no wholesome doctrine can easily please them; which was Cores sinne: and content themselues with that truth of doctrine, and those sound grounds of Diuinitie, which are propounded in the writings of those famous and excellent instruments aforenamed, who were the restorers of pure religion; preferring them before all Popish writers and corrupt postillers (in whom a man shall meete with nothing sooner than error and vnsoundnes) and reading seriously their workes and writings, as the soundest and best grounds of Diuinitie, and expositions of the Scriptures, which haue been set out since the daies of the Apostles.

Sixthly, let inferiours hence learne obedience, and silent subiection vnto superiours; the seruant or subiect must not be a gainsaier, nay not an answerer againe, Tit. 3. This cutteth off all disputation betweene the Master and seruant, father and childe, prince and subiect: for the very appearance of Cores sinne must be auoided.

Seuenthly, Core gainsaieth both Moses and Aaron; the one in regard of his Magistracie, the other of his Priesthood. These two sinnes goe hand in hand: he that opposeth himself to Moses, despiseth Aaron also; he that honoreth not the King, feareth not God; he that careth not for the word, is not loyall to his Prince: a rebell to God, is a rebell to his Prince. Seeing then loyaltie towards God and the King are so linkt together in themselues, let vs not sunder them, but rather conioyne them in our practise, as the Apostle hath coupled them in one precept, commanding vs to feare God, and honour the King.

Whosoeuer resisteth Moses despiseth Aaron also.

Eightly, it may be here demaunded, whether haue we done well in gainsaying and contradicting the Church of Rome, seeing our Church before the time of K. Henry the 8. was a member of that Church? Ans. When two are at strife both are not be blamed, but the partie in whom the cause is conuinced to be: we haue indeede departed from them; but the cause of our departure was not in vs, but in themselues: we haue departed from them, as the Israelites by Gods commandement from the Tents of Core: they haue first a long time gainsaid Christ, and therefore we haue well done to gainsay them: we are not therefore the schismatikes, neither blame worthie; but they in whom the cause of schisme is: no more than Moses was here to be blamed, the cause resting in Core.

We haue departed from the Papists as the Israelites from the tents of Core by Gods commandement. Numb. 16. 22.

Lastly, it will be asked, what did Moses all this while that he was gainsaid? Ans. He fell on his face, and prayed vnto the Lord. Wherein he became a fit president for vs in this land, who haue been aboue fourtie yeeres assaulted by Popish Cores, enemies and rebels, without and within vs: from whom we haue bin defended not so much by the sword, as by Gods protection, obtained by the prayers of his seruants: which teacheth vs for time to come to turne vs to this most ready course, of subduing al gainsaiers and enemies of our peace: for the direct way to discouer conspiracies, to subdue treasons, and rebels, and to purchase tranquillitie to a Church and land, is to commend the safetie thereof vnto the Lords fauourable protection, whose eyes are euer watchfull ouer his people. And thus much of Core his sinne.

The last point is their punishment: in which it may be asked how they perished? Ans. It is commonly thought that Core, Dathan and Abiram were swallowed vp of the earth: but I take it, that all the men of Core, al his substance and his Tents; Dathan also and Abiram were swallowed vp of the earth: but that Core himselfe was burned with fire from heauen, with the 250. men that offered incense, verf. 35. for in the historie, Numb. 16. 27. 32. it is said that Dathan and Abiram and the men of Core were swallowed vp; but Core himselfe is not mentioned: so Deut. 11. 6. and Psal. 106. 17. In both which places Dathan and Abiram are said to be swallowed vp with their households; but in neither place is Core mentioned. Secondly, Dathan and Abiram were in their Tents, and so were the men of Core also, when the earth opened and swallowed them, vers. 17. But Corah and the two hundred and fiftie men were at the doore of the Tabernacle with their Censors, fire and incense, and were deuoured with fire from heauen, vers. 19. Ob. Num. 26. 10. The earth opened her mouth and swallowed them (that is, Dathan and Abiram) with Core. Ans. The learned expound that place not of Cores person, but his substance & retinue.

Marke here the iust iudgement of God: Corah had abused himselfe (being a Leuite) his office, and those sacrifices which he offered by fire; and the Lord destroied him by fire. The same was the dealing of God with Nadab and Abihu, Leuit. 10. 2. Looke in what things men sin and dishonour God, by those for the most part the Lord reuengeth himselfe vpon them: so men glorie in abusing the creatures of God, as meats, wine, and strong drink, the Lord in the meane time secretly turneth the same to their owne destruction; that those which are his good gifts and ordained for the preseruation of nature, being by men abused, through Gods iust iudgement are turned to the choking and ouerturning of nature.

Note.

Secondly, hence learne the wise counsell of Salomon, Prou. 24. 22. Feare God, honour the King, and meddle not with the seditions; or with them that make alterations. For although it be lawfull for a subiect (being called) to shew his minde, what he thinketh meete for the Church or Common-wealth; yet for a priuate man to attempt vpon his owne head to alter any thing, standing by Gods and the Princes law, is no better than sedition, and is a branch of Corah his sinne.

Priuate men may not attempt to controle publike constitutions.

Thirdly, although Corah, Dathan and Abiram are destroyed for this sinne, yet Cores children are not destroyed, but spared, Numb. 26. 11. God in iustice remembring his mercie, his care for the Ministerie was such as could not suffer the Leuites race to bee rooted out, but preserued for the vse of the Tabernacle. Let Gods care teach vs our dutie in this behalf, namely to applie our best endeuours for the maintaining and preseruing the Schooles of learning, for the vse and seruice of the Church. Commendable hath been the care of many Kings and Princes in this behalf, whom wee should imitate in preseruing these seed-plots of the Ministerie: for herein they imitate the great King euen God himselfe.

Vers. 12. These are spots in your feasts of loue, when they feast with you, without all feare feeding themselues.

IN these words the Apostle setteth downe the seuenth sin of these seducers: to know the meaning whereof the better, consider foure things: first, what is meant by feasts of loue and charitie. Ans. In the Primitiue Church it was a custome and manner to haue a feast before the Lords Supper, made by the Communicants; vnto which some brought hony, some bread, some wine, some milke, and euery one according to their abilitie contributing somthing thereunto. These were here meant and called Loue-feasts, because they were herein to testifie their mutuall loue among themselues; as also to the poore, who hereby were relieued; and to the Ministerie it selfe, which was by these feasts partly sustained. Secondly, what is meant where these seducers are called spots in these feasts, or rocks; for the word signifieth either, and more properly the latter; they are rocks, because as rocks are perceiued a farre off by the seafaring men: euen so the infection of these wicked men spreads it selfe very farre: and againe, as rockes are dangerous and troublesome to them; so are these as rockes and stumbling blockes to the weake, hindring them from the profitable progresse in godlines: they are also rightly called spots, because as a spot defaceth the countenance; so their presence is an eye sore & a disgrace vnto these Loue-feasts. The third thing is the cause why they are thus called: that is, because in these Loue-feasts they feede themselues: for laying aside all care of the poore, & of the Ministrie, for whose sake this contribution was made, they pampered and fed themselues, riotously wasting the goods of the Church. The fourth is the cause of this their riot [without feare] that is, because they haue cast off the feare of God and man. In these words therefore the Apostle chargeth these false teachers not only with intemperance in generall, but also with a special kind of riot in mispending and wasting wasting the contribution pertaining to the poores maintenance, and the sustaining of the Ministerie.

Vse. That which is spoken of these mē, may be applied to these last times, wherein diuers men riotously abuse the goods specially prouided for the maintenance of the Ministerie and poore: as first the Romish Clergie, those Locusts that come foorth of the mouth of the beast; idle bellies, and slow backes, the most of which want learning, and are vnable to teach the people; yet feede themselues without feare, so as their eyes are swollen with fatnes: wealth they want not, hauing craftily conueied vnto themselues the third part of the reuenewes of Europe; but with it do nothing but pamper themselues. Secondly, such Patrones are here included as feede themselues with Church-liuings, appointed for ẏ releiuing of the poore, and maintenance of the Ministerie: in such sort as Gods people cannot bee faithfully and sufficiently taught: they can bee content to depart from some ten pounds a yere to some vnable man, so as they may of the rest feede themselues without feare, or else (as some doe) serue their lusts, in mispending the Churches reuenewes vpon Hawkes, Hounds, and other improfitable rauenous creatures. Thirdly, such Students whether Fellowes or Schollers of or in Colledges as mispend their time in idlenes, gaming, or other improfitable exercises, come also within the compasse of the Apostles reprehension, as feeders of themselues with that salarie or liuing which was giuē for the maintenance of the Ministerie.

The Romish Clergie hath better faculties in feeding themselues than others

Here a question may be demaunded; namely, whether those whom wee call lay men, hauing Church lands & liuings impropriate vnto them, may bee said with these seducers to feede themselues without feare; or whether can any man impropriate any Church goods or liuings, without sacriledge? Ans. The answer hereof is two-fold: first, though no good member of the Church can in good conscience seeke the harme and preiudice of the same; yet the plaine truth is, that the Church goods and lands may bee sometimes vpon some occasions alienated: the grouṅd of which answere is this rule; namely, that the gouernours of the Church are to content themselues with things necessarie. For when the people had brought sufficient for the building of the tabernacle, Moses biddeth them bring no more, seeing (saith he) there is enough: so as when the Church hath too much and excesse (as the Romish Church & these Churches of Europe gotten by Masses, Purgatorie, Dirges, Sacrament of Penance, &c.) there may be admitted alienation and impropriation of Church goods and lands; but so as two conditions must be necessarily obserued: first, there must be iust cause: and that which is so alienated must bee employed to some good vse in the Church or Commonwealth; and this is foure waies: first in case of present necessitie; for tenths haue bin in some cases of necessity lawfully paied in way of tribute, and otherwise neither Church nor Commonwealth could haue been preserued. Secondly, in way of exchange when the alienation of some lands shall be rather more conuenient both to the Church it selfe, and to whom such lands are alienated. Thirdly, when as some great profit shal ensue vnto the Church and common-wealth: vpon which ground King Henry the 8. of famous memorie most iustly alienated most of ẏ Church lands called Abbey lands; that Monks, Friers, Abbots, and such like idle Drones should neuer haue more footing in this our land. Fourthly, in way of reward: for Kings and Princes that are the Patrons & protectors of the Church may alienate Church lands (where there are excesse) vnto such as haue bin faithfull in the defence of Church or Commonwealth, and that in way of requitall and reward of their seruice. The second condition is, that there must bee reserued a sufficient relieſe for the poore, and maintenance for an able Ministerie. Some there are which teach otherwise, and they reason thus: Tenths (say they) standing by Gods law are not to bee alienated: but the goods and lands of the Church stand chiefly in tenths, and therefore admit no alienation. Ans. In England tenths stād not by Gods laws, but by the positiue lawes of the land; so as if it please the King he may appoint eights, or more or lesse as well as they: which if it were not so, no Minister were to meddle with the tenths of his Parish: for by Gods law tenths were brought to the storehouse of the ouerseers, and distributed by them to the Leuites, according as euery man had neede; but the Leuites themselues neuer medled with the. Againe, if tenths stood now by the law of God, then the poore should haue euery third yeere all the tenths of the earth: for so it was among the Iewes while they stood in force by Gods law. Secondly, they obiect that in the Prouerbs, chap. 20. 25. It is a snare to deuoure tenths. Ans. The place is to be vnderstood of tenths the standing in force by Gods law, not of ours which stand by mans. Thirdly, they alleage that some decrees were made in the Primitiue Church, that the alienation of Church lands should become sacriledge. Ans. But those decrees concerned priuate persons who might not, nor may not on their owne heads impropriate the Church goods; as also they debarred the taking away of necessaries from the Church, for then the Church was farre from that superfluitie which sithence it hath obtained: so that for a lay man to hold lands impropriate, the former conditions obserued, is no sacriledge. Now if the question be concerning the impropriations of Colledges, whether they lawfully hold them or no: then I answere secondly, that I take it, they hold them by a more speciall right; for they being giuen at the first vnto the Church, they are not (being impropriate to Colledges) generally and wholie alienated from the Church; but remaine in this speciall vse of the Church for the maintaining of the Seminaries of it; without which the Church must needs decay: and this seemeth a sufficient cause of reserving vnto them this maintenance, so as care be had of the people and poore for their relieue & instruction. Secondly, whereas the Primitiue church first feasted, and then receiued the Lords Supper, wee note first the lawfulnes of feasts, so as the poore be regarded, superfluitie and riot auoided, and the right end intended, which is the praise and glorie of God expressed in thankfulnes for the abundance of his good blessings. So after the sacrifices & offrings Aaron and the Elders of Israel came to feast with Iethro before God, Exod. 18. 12. So Ezra. 8. Goe your waies, eate the fat, and drinke the sweete, and send part to them for whom none is prepared; for this is the day of the Lord. Secondly, the Papists are deceiued, who teach it necessarie to come to the Sacrament of the Supper fasting, for these feasted before it. Thirdly, in the Primitiue Church, and in the Apostles daies, there was no priuate Masse in which one Priest should eate vp all alone; but there were feastings, which cannot bee performed by one man alone, but the whole congregation. Fourthly, hence wee may note the end of the Lords Supper to be the increase of our fellowship & communion with Christian men, as well as our vnion with God; and that wee are to come together in loue and Christian vnitie: for the testifying of which charitable affection, the ancient beleeuers in the Apostles daies had these feasts of loue before they came to the Lords table.

Further, in that these seducers are called [spots in these feasts] I note first that open offenders should be hindred and repelled from the Sacraments, being as spots in the face; which because they are blemishes, must bee washed away: so ought these by the censure of excommunication to be (vntill their repentance) cut off from the face of the congregation. Secondly, that euery one that professeth the faith is not a true member of the Catholike Church, as the Papists erroneously hold; that let a man be what he will, if he professe the faith, it is sufficient to make him a member of the Catholique Church. Whereas open offenders are to be accounted as spottes, which no man will say are true parts of the bodie, but blemishes to bee pared away, that their bodie may be the more perfect and entire.

Feeding themselues without feare.] In Doctr. feasting we are to preserue feare within our hearts, which is two-fold: first of God, secondly of man. The former is seene Exod. 18. 12. The men of Israel feasted before the Lord. Iobes feare was, lest his sonnes should cast this feare of God out of their hearts in their feasting, and so offend God. The latter is prescribed Prou. 23. 1. 2. When thou sittest to meate before a Ruler, put the knife to thy throte, that is, bridle thine appetite; haue respect not to passe the limits of sobrietie, temperance, and moderation. And as wee are to eate and drinke, ſo alſo to ſeaſon all other our actions with the feare of God and men: which one grace would cut off many graceleſſe practiſes euery where raigning amongſt men. But a ſpeciall thing here aimed at, is, that we ſhould neuer come to eate the Lords Supper without feare and reuerence: which becauſe the Corinths wanted, Paul complaineth that one came hungrie, another drunke, and ſo prophaned that holy inſtitution, 1.Cor.11.21. Ob. But in that place it ſeemeth Paul condemneth theſe Loue-feaſts, which Iude here diſpraiſeth not, where hee ſaith, euery man eateth his ſupper before, verſ. 21.22. Anſ. Theſe Loue-feaſts were indifferent, and might bee vſed or not; Paul condemneth the great abuſe of them in Corinth, becauſe ſome were made by them drunke, and vnfit for the Lords Supper, and the rich deceiued the poore: but Iude commendeth them, becauſe they were in other Churches rightly and religiouſly vſed.

Clowdes they are without water, carried about of windes.] Theſe words containe the eighth and ninth ſinnes of theſe wicked men: which the better to know what they are, let vs a little conſider the meaning of them. [Clowdes they are without water,] It pleaſeth the Spirit of God in many places of the old Teſtament, to compare Prophets and Teachers vnto clowdes; and their doctrine vnto the dropping and diſtilling of the raine and ſweet ſhowers falling from theſe clowds. So the Prophet Ezechiel is commaunded to ſet his face towards the way of Teman, and drop his word toward the South, and his prophecie towards the forreſt. Deut.32.2. My doctrine ſhall drop as the raine, and my ſpeech ſhal diſtill as the dew, as the ſhower vpon the herbes, and as the great raine vpon the graſſe. Mich.2.7. and 11. The word tranſlated * prophecie, ſignifieth properly to drop or diſtill: The reaſon of which compariſon is rendred Iſai.55.10.11. Becauſe as the raine falleth vpon the earth, and returneth not in vaine, but moiſtneth it, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may giue ſeed to the ſower, and bread to him that eateth: ſo the word in the mouth of the Miniſters returneth not voide, but accompliſheth the Lords will, and proſpereth in the thing whereto it is ſent; in becomming the ſauour of life to the ſaluation of ſome, and of death vnto the death of them that periſh. The words then ſtanding vpon this ſimilitude beare this ſenſe; Though the propertie and vſe of clowdes is to carrie water and raine for the vſe of the earth, yet ſome clowdes are without water: euen ſo, though all Teachers ought to bee filled and fitted with ſtore of wholſome doctrine, to powre it out for the vſe of the Church; yet theſe ſeducers are vtterly deſtitute thereof. And againe, as thoſe clowdes without water are light, and fitter for nothing than to be carried about with euery winde: ſo theſe are altogether variable and vnconſtant, carried about with euery blaſt of ſtrange doctrine. The former of theſe ſimilitudes condemneth their ſinne of barrennes and vnfruitfulneſſe: the latter their ninth ſinne of inconſtancie and variableneſſe.

Ezech.20. 46.

Concerning the former, ſeeing that the Apoſtle taketh it for granted that the clowdes are naturally ordained, to containe water; it may be demanded how it can be cõceiued that the clowds aboue being heauie with water ſhould not fall to the earth; ſeeing euery heauie thing naturally deſcendeth and tendeth downward? Anſ. The clowdes are heauie indeed; for euen the windes themſelues (being by many degrees lighter than they) haue their weight, Iob.28.25. No man therefore by wit or reaſon can reſolue this doubt, but onely from the word of God: which teacheth that it is by vertue of Gods commandement giuen in the creation, that the clowdes fall not. Gen.1.6. Let the firmament ſeparate the waters from the waters: by force of which commanding word, the water hangeth in the clowdes, and the clowds in the ayre, and need no other ſupporters. Iob ſetting out the Maieſtie and greatnes of God in his works, here beginneth; That he hangeth the earth vpon nothing, he bindeth the waters in the clowdes, and the clowd is not broken vnder them. Philoſophie is too defectiue to yeeld the true reaſon of this great worke of God, which commonly attributeth too much to nature, and too little to the God of nature; whoſe prouidence and power is herein to be acknowledged, in that by his word he ordereth all his creatures, vnto which he ſpeaketh the word and they obey.

Secondly, hence wee learne to conceiue the right meaning of that place, Gen. 1. 7. Let the firmament separate the waters that be beneath, from the waters that be aboue. By the firmament is meant the ayre, or the distance betweene the earth and the starrie skie: by the waters vnder this firmament are meant the seas and floods; and the waters aboue, are the watrie clowdes, which are diuided by the firmament or ayre in which wee breathe, called the firmament of heauē: for it is the lowest of the three heauens, which the Scripture maketh mention of, reaching to the starres; the second being the starrie heauen, the third being the heauen of heauens, the seate of God, where hee reuealeth his glorie to his Saints and Angels. Those then are deceiued who out of this place dreame of a watrie heauen aboue the starres.

Now further in that these seducers are called Clowds without water, because they are destitute of wholesome doctrine; wee learne first that Ministers ought to bee such as are able to teach wholesome and sound doctrine, 1. Tim. 3. 2. Malach. 2. 7. The Priests lips should preserue knowledge: otherwise they are as clowdes without water, keeping the field of God barren & fruitlesse: which abilitie supposeth, yea and imposeth the performance of diligence herein; or else whether they haue knowledge or not, they come vnder the rank of them whom Esay 56. 10. calleth dumbe dogs; which cannot, or doe not barke. In former ages I grant indeede there were readers appointed in the Church, who could not otherwise teach: but yet none were called for Teachers into the Church, but such as had this abilitie of watring Gods church by doctrine more or lesse, vntill heresie and schisme came in. Secondly, Ministers ought so to teach as they drop and instill the graces of faith, repentance, and obedience into the hearts of the hearers: euen as the clowds drop water vpon the drie earth which sinketh into the same. This was Pauls desire to see the Romanes, that he might bestow some spirituall grace vpon them, Rom. 1. 11. This is the right handling and diuiding of the word, when men shew not words but power, 1. Cor. 4. 14. That Teacher sheweth learning that sheweth men Christ, and can bee a meanes to distill Gods graces into their soules: let this be the scope of those who are set apart vnto this holy Ministrie; else shall they be as vnprofitable as clowdes which containe no water in them at all. Thirdly, if the Ministers must be as clowdes hauing water in them; then must the people be as drie ground, not in regard of barrennes, but of thirst and desire after these drops & dewes of grace distilling from the Ministerie. Psal. 143. 6. My soule desireth after thee, euen as the thirstie land: vnto which disposition wee are to preserue two things within vs: first, look as in drie land parcht with the heate of the Sunne, there is a great want of moysture; so in our soules must bee retained a sense of the want of the graces of God, with an heartie sorrow for our want. Our hearts must bee perswaded that in vs, and of our selues there is no good thing, that God can take delight in: yea and the griefe conceiued must not bee small, but wee must feele our selues euen dried and parched with the heate of his wrath due vnto our sinnes, vntill these sweete waters flowing from vnder the threshold of the Sanctuarie haue graciously refreshed vs. Mary saith, that God filleth the hungrie with good things: by the hungrie are meant those who feele themselues voide of grace, yea as it were pined and starued for want of it. Christ telleth the woman of Canaan that he came to the lost sheep of the house of Israel: that is, hee that knoweth himselfe not a wādring sheep, but quite lost, euen in the lions paw ready to be deuoured: such doth Christ take vpon his necke, and like a good shepheard bring backe to his fold. For hee was sent to preach the acceptable yeere; not to the mightie and states of the world, but to prisoners and captiues, that is, such as could grieue and mourne for their captiuitie. Secondly, as drie land parched with drought gapeth and openeth it selfe wide, as if it would swallow vp the clowdes for raine: so must our hearts preserue within them an earnest appetite, and insatiable desire after Christ and his merits, aboue all the things in the world: more hungring after him, than after wealth, gold, siluer, honours, health, or whatsoeuer is delightfull and highest prized among the sonnes of men. And this will follow of the former: for if wee bee once at the point, Ioh. 4. Clowdes without water keep Gods field fruitlesse and barren.

Men must be as drie ground, not in barrennes, but in regard of their thirst after the drops of grace.

Luk. 1. 13.

Mat. 15. 24.

point, that wee are out of all conceit of our owne goodnes, we will seeke earnestly for it at the hands of him who is the fountaine of al goodnes: if we feele our spirituall pouertie once, we cannot but couetously hunt after those true treasures which onely inrich our soules to all eternitie. The woman of Samaria did but prattle with Christ til he had told her of her sinne, and of her husbands: and that he which was now her husband was none of hers: then could she humble her selfe, and confesse him to bee a Prophet, and quickly after came to acknowledge him the Messiah, and al her cauelling was laid aside: so till we be humbled we doe but cauel at the word, and receiue it not as drie land doth the showers which fall; but let the heart once bee touched, it is turned presently vpside down, and we are become other manner of men than before.

The ninth sinne blamed in these seducers is, that they are inconstant and vnstable, carried like light clowds with the windes of strange doctrine: whence Teachers must learne to hold constantly the doctrine of saluation, Titus 1.9. holding fast the faithfull word: people also must not reuolt or depart from it, nay not bee vnstable, or soone remoued to another Gospell. Eph.4.14. Be no more children wauering and carried about with euery wind of doctrine: but both Teachers and hearers must beware least we (being by Gods blessing freed from the spiritual Egypt, where we were many hundred yeeres detained) now after fourtie yeeres and moe, looke backe again, and fall from that faith into which we haue been baptised.

Beware of looking behinde thee toward Sodom, out of which thou art escaped.

Corrupt trees and without fruite, twice dead and plucked vp by the roots.] In these words is the tenth sinne of these seducers set down, and that is their incurable hypocrisie; illustrated and amplified by a comparison or similitude, from bad and barren trees: containing foure steps or degrees of naughtines, euery one worse than other. The first step, they are corrupt trees; which must be vnderstood not in regard of their substance, but in regard of their corrupt fruits: for the word translated * corrupt, properly is applied to trees that beare no fruite, but in the fall of the leafe, which with the leaues fall off, being neglected and wither away, neuer comming to any good or gathering. The second degree, they are without fruite: which words are a correction of the former; for they are not onely without good fruite, but vtterly destitute of any fruite at all. Thirdly, they are twice dead: that is, certainly dead, hopelesse of any fruite. Fourthly, they are plucked vp by the roots, that is, vtterly without hope, not of fruite, but of life it selfe; they are past liuing, and much more past fruite. This similitude then chargeth these seducers (to whom it is fitly applied) first, that al their workes are but hypocriticall. Secondly, that they are vtterly destitute of all good workes, which truly are good. Thirdly, that they haue no heauely and spirituall life or sappe in them. And fourthly, that they are out of Christ, not rooted in him, but plucked vp: and therfore they are most hopelesse of euer bearing fruite vnto life, being proceeded so farre in the high way vnto perdition. So much of the meaning.

* Vide ex Grammatica.

Doct. In that these false teachers are iustly condemned for this sinne of being corrupt trees without fruite: wee on the contrarie must striue to become good trees of Gods delight; Isai.5.7. Iudah is the plant of my delight: trees of righteousnes; Isai.60.21. The planting of the Lord, laden with the fruites of righteousnesse: which that we may be, foure things are required of vs: first, that we be well rooted: secondly, that wee liue in the roote: thirdly, that wee beare fruite: fourthly, that wee beare good fruite.

First we must be rooted. In this rooting two things are required: first, there must bee a roote: this roote is Christ, Ioh.15.1. He is the vine, wee the branches. Rom.5.6. If wee bee planted into him, Col.2.7. rooted in him. Here wee must consider Christ not as God alone, or man alone, or the Son of God alone, but as God-man; as God made man; as an Immanuel, God with vs, euen our Mediatour and Redeemer. Thus he is our roote, in whom are hid the treasures of graces, Col.2.3. and of whose fulnes we all receiue grace for grace, Ioh.1.16. The second thing in this rooting is ingrafting: for trees of righteousnesse grow not by nature. Psalm.1. A good man is as a tree planted: for by nature the best men are but wilde oliues, and muſt be tranſplanted from the firſt Adam into the ſecond. The author of this ingrafting is God himſelfe, who doth it by two actions: firſt, he giueth Chriſt truly and really in the word and Sacraments, not out of the word, but in and by it. So 1.Cor.3. Paul planteth, Apollo watereth; that is, God by their miniſtrie ingrafted the Corinthians into Chriſt. Secondly, when on his part hee giueth Chriſt, hee giueth alſo a power to the beleeuer to apprehend him, and receiue him with his merits vnto ſaluation, and that by the only hand of faith. Ob. But this can bee no ingrafting, ſeeing Chriſt is in hēauen, we are on earth. Anſ. It is not indeede a naturall ingrafting, which cannot be but by the fit applying of two bodies one to the other, but ſpirituall, yet as ſure and as ſtraight as that is. We ſee in nature, the minde is preſent and ioyned with the thing it thinketh of, although it be diſtant many thouſand miles: if this can bee true in nature, then much more in faith which is a worke ſupernaturall, and far aboue the reach of nature. Againe, a man hath land giuen him in Spaine, Turkie, or America, many thouſand miles off him, he was neuer at it, he neuer ſaw it, and yet is truly the Lord of it, and may ſay of it, it is his owne, by vertue of the donation. Euen ſo God in his word giueth Chriſt and his merits to the beleeuer, who as he hath receiued him by faith, ſo he retaineth him by grace: by vertue of which donation, and acceptation, a man may as truly ſay, Chriſt is his, as though he were now in heauen alreadie with him; yea ſo firme and certaine is this ingrafting, that it once being made can neuer be diſſolued, but is euerlaſting: for the root liuing and abiding for euer, ſo alſo doe the branches, being ſet into the ſame, and that by the hand of the good husbandman God himſelfe.

The ſecond thing required in a tree of righteouſnes is life, which is not the naturall life of other plants, but ſpirituall and eternall; for eternall life beginneth euen in this life. Galath.2.20. Now I liue, yet not I now, but Chriſt liueth in me, and this life is by the faith in the Son of God, and then wrought in vs, when the ſame minde which was in Chriſt whileſt hee was vpon earth is alſo in vs, Philip.2.5. for hee conueyeth his owne diſpoſition into his members in part, who are daily made conformable vnto him: of which conformitie the Apoſtle maketh two parts, Rom.5.6. Firſt, a conformitie vnto him in his death; that looke as he died for ſinne, ſo ought his members vnto ſin: and as he by his death ſubdued ſinne, and obtained victorie ouer it; ſo ought they daily to be nibling in the aboliſhing, and mortifying of that ſinne which preſſeth them downe, and hangeth ſo faſt vpon them, vntill the day of their full conqueſt and finall deliuerance. Secondly, a conformitie vnto him in his Reſurrection; that as he roſe againe from the graue, ſo ſhould they from the graue of their ſinnes: and as hee roſe to liue for euer, ſo ought they by vertue of his reſurrection to liue to God in newnes of life, as thoſe that looke to liue foreuer with him. Thirdly, the tree of righteouſneſſe muſt bring foorth fruites, to teſtifie the life of it, called Galath.5.22. fruites of the ſpirit, and there reckoned vp; Loue, peace, ioy, long ſuffering, gentlenes, goodnes, faith, meekenes, temperance. Phil.1.11. Paul prayeth that the Philippians might be filled with the fruites of righteouſnes, that is, the duties of the Morall law contained in the firſt and ſecond Table. Fourthly, a tree of righteouſnes muſt bring foorth good fruites, ſuch as are pleaſing vnto God. Queſt. How ſhall a Chriſtian bring forth good fruits? Anſ. Firſt, good fruit muſt come from a good heart, an heart penitent, and truly turned to God. Mat.3. Bring foorth fruites worthie amendement of life. 1.Timot.1.5. Loue out of a pure heart. Secondly, it muſt be brought forth with intention, will, purpoſe, and endeuour to obey God in his commandements, which the heart muſt reſpect. Thirdly, the end of this fruite muſt be the glorie of God, not ſeeking our ſelues but Gods honour. In Leuit.19.23. God requireth that the trees ſhould bee circumciſed, which was thus performed: The three firſt yeeres the fruite was to be caſt, or fall away; the fourth it was to bee dedicated to the Lord, and the fifth yeere the Iſraelites might eate of the fruite: euen ſo wee muſt firſt caſt away in reſpect of our ſelues our fruites, and dedicate them vnto the Lord, ſo he ſhall taſte of them with delight, and not before. Fourthly, it muſt bee brought foorth foorth to the good of others; as trees beare fruites not for themselues, but for men: so our fruites must bee intended not so much for our priuate good, as the common good of the Church and Common-wealth.

Doct. 2. Seeing the faithfull are not such corrupt trees, but of Gods owne planting, they haue here first a ground of comfort in the middest of sorrow, sicknes, yea and death it selfe; for being ingrafted into Christ, the whole man is preserued safe & sound in him: yea the dying bodie, nay the dead bodie, and that which is rotting in the graue is planted into him, and is to liue againe in him who alwaies liueth, and will raise it to life eternall at the last day. Trees in winter are dead to mans sense; yet because the rootes of them liue, and haue in them sappe and moysture, in the spring they shall bud, blossome, and beare fruite againe: euen so the rotten body at the time of refreshing shall reuiue againe and become a glorious plant, putting off mortalitie and corruption, no more to be subiected thereunto againe, than the roote into which they are set; who hath for his members chased them away. Secondly, seeing we must be planted, and cannot attaine this growth by nature: we must detest, and abhorre our selues in dust and ashes, renounce, and bewaile our naturall condition, and be at no rest till wee feele our selues set into Christ, by liuing the life of the Sonne of God: For know we not that Christ liueth in vs, except we be reprobates? Thirdly, our Church hath herein resembled Iudah; hauing been for many yeres a plant of Gods delight, who hath hedged and fenced it by his fauourable protection: but many, yea the most branches are barren, bearing no fruite; others beare lesse fruite than they haue done, being withered and fallen back: what will be (thinke we) the end hereof? Surely the axe being alreadie laid to the roote of the tree, shall cut downe whatsoeuer branches beare not foorth good fruite, and they shall be cast into the fire. It standeth vs then in hand to become more fruitfull before we be cut downe. Fourthly, hence let euery man learne subiection vnto God in all his crosses and afflictions; wee are trees or branches at least, of the Vine, the Father is the husbandman, and looke as the husbandman loppeth, cutteth & pruneth, yea and almost cutteth downe his trees to make them more fruitfull: so dealeth the Lord with his children, who therein are to rest well contented; for he chasteneth them for their good, that although no chastisement seemeth ioyous for the present, yet it bringeth afterward the pleasant fruite of righteousnes to those that are exercised thereby.

Twice dead and plucked vp.] Some hence gather this, that wee are once dead in Adam by originall sinne; and secondly after regeneration or ingrafting into Christ by some grieuous sinne wounding the conscience to death: and hence conclude that a man regenerate may die againe, and fall from grace: vrging for their purpose that in Rom. 11. 20. Through vnbeleefe they were broken off, and thou standest by faith; be not high minded but feare. But this cannot be so vnderstood: for by twice dead, is meant dead certainly; or dead twice, once in Adam by originall sinne, and the second time dead by their owne actuall sinne. As for that place in Rom. 11. I answere, there are two kindes of planting: first outward: secondly inward. The outward is when God giueth the word vnto a people with other his ordinances, and they publikely professe it. The inward is when God giueth true faith, whereby men are set into Christ. Now the Iewes whom the Apostle speaketh of, were implanted by the former onely, and therefore might be broken off: the other is euerlasting. 1. Ioh. 2. 19. They went out from vs, but were not of vs: for if they had been of vs, they should haue continued with vs. Further, where it is said, Plucked vp:] hence is gathered by some that they were once in the roote, and therefore a man rooted and set in Christ may perish finally. Ans. But we must know that this phrase in the Scripture signifieth a manifestation of the things to be done, rather than the doing of them; they are therfore said to bee plucked vp, whom God manifesteth neuer to haue been rooted: as also men are said to be blotted out of the booke of life; not that they were euer written therein, but in that God manifesteth and maketh knowne to men that they were neuer written in it.

Vers.

Vers.13. They are raging waues of the sea, foaming out their owne shame: they are wandring starres, for whom is reserued the blacke darknes for euer.

THe Apostle in this verse proceedeth on in the further discouerie of these wicked men by sundry other sins; set downe after the same manner as the former by way of similitude and comparison. And first he compareth them to the raging waues of the sea; and secondly to wandring starres. And in the end of the verse: For whom &c. the conclusion is againe repeated, of which we haue spoken in the 11. verse. The former comparison hath three expositions: for some will haue their grosse hypocrisie hereby signified; and then the comparison standeth vs: Looke as the waues of the sea rage and swell, rising vp towards the heauens, as though they would swallow and ouerflow the earth, which they seeme to threate; but drawing to the shore, they are broken to a little foame: so these seducers make a great shew of godlinesse, and pietie, as though they onely would goe to heauen; yet is the matter nothing so, all is but froth, seeing they want the power and practise of religion, and godlines in the middest of such pretenses. Secondly, others hereby expresse their vnprofitablenes and deceitfulnes in their doctrine, thus: As the waues of the sea rise very huge and high, especially being stirred by the windes, and yet their effect is nothing but a little foame and mire, which they cast vp: so these lewd men being puffed vp in themselues, promise great matters to their followers: as much libertie, many blessings and great good things; and yet the effect of all their shewes is but to make men much more the seruants of sinne than before. And thus Peter speaketh of them: In speaking swelling words of vanitie they beguile with wantonnes, through the lusts of the flesh, them which were cleane escaped from them. This was truly spoken of them, and may as truly be applied vnto diuers of our times: as first the Libertines and Familists, fondly assuring their disciples that they shall bee illuminate and deified, such great matters they promise: whereas they make them the children of the diuell seuen fold more than they were before. Secondly, the Romish Clergie haue been as large in their promises vnto their hearers: teaching them that they shall be able to satisfie the iustice of God for their sinnes, yea and merit life euerlasting, and that many of them can performe works of supererrogation, which the law of God bindeth them not vnto: but what is this but to foame out dirt and mire, and to teach men that for a little mony they may breake al Gods Commandements? The third exposition is this: As the Sea stirred by the windes and weather rageth, and from the foundation casteth vp nothing but froth: so these men stirred and mooued by the hand of God correcting them, amend not, nor profit thereby: but rather vnder the same, discouer the wickednes and vnbeliefe of their hearts: which is the most agreeable and fittest exposition; explained in Isai.57.20. The wicked are like the raging sea that cannot rest, whose waters cast vp mire and dirt. From this sense consider these two things: first, a worke of God: secondly, a practise of man. First the wil, work, and appointment of God is, that men shall be troubled, stirred, mooued, and set out of quiet, and haue within them such disquietnes, as if the raging waues of the sea were within their soules. The minds of men both godly and wicked, their willes and affections are often so distempered, as is the sea whē it is troubled with boisterous windes and tempests. Iere.49.23. The Lord shall trouble Damascus, so she shall become as a fearfull sea that cannot rest. Iosh.7. Iosua said to Achan; Thou hast troubled Israel, and the Lord shall trouble thee. Iob saith, The Almightie troubled him, chap.23.16. Yea Christ himselfe, although hee was without sinne, had his soule troubled in his agonie, in which his minde, will and affections were disturbed: and this trouble God bringeth on men diuers waies; sometimes by those of a mans owne house, as Iacobs sonnes troubled him, Genes.34. Sometimes they of his companie, as Achan, Iosh.7. Somtimes by the Lords withdrawing of himselfe, Psal.30.7. Thou diddest hide thy face, and I was troubled. Sometimes a mans own heart and conscience will rage against him, as Baltazer seeing the hand writing vpon the wall, was troubled, and there there was no life in him, Dan. 5. What then wil some say, is there no difference betweene the godly and the wicked herein? Ans. Yes: for euery little crosse vnto the wicked is a tempest breaking the rockes: which maketh them to storme and rage, and send foorth foame and mire: but the crosses of the godly are as calme windes; a little shaking them indeed, & for a little time: but are blowne ouer when they haue a little exercised their faith and graces, so as they are bettered, yea and furthered by them. 1. King. 19. Elias standing on Mount Horeb, there passed by him a mightie tempest which rent the rocks; and then an Earthquake, then fire: but God was not in any of these: afterward there came a still and soft voyce, and God was in the voyce. Afflictions are like that tempest, earthquake and fire, namely to the wicked, against whom the Lord commeth to shake and consume them: but to the godly are as a still voyce to teach and instruct them: vnder which they quietly content thēselues, because God is in that still voice, namely, by his grace and presence supporting and sustaining them euen in the middest of their troubles.

Romish sea casteth out nothing but foame and mire.

Secondly, the practise of a wicked man is, when hee is troubled and stirred by God to foame out his owne shame; euen as the sea his froth. Experience teacheth, that if a wicked man haue any wrong or disgrace offered him, presently he discouereth the corruption of his heart, and breaketh out into railing, cursing, reuiling, and all manner of reuenge: so if Gods hand bee vpon him by sicknes, or vpon his familie, he cannot couer his want of loue of God, he cannot hide the infidelitie of his heart: for hee betakes himselfe the next way to the Sorcerer, Figure-caster, or the next Wizard, so flieth from God as fast as his feete will carrie him: and euery way the same violent affections bewray themselues, which these seducers are charged withall.

As Adam fled from God vpon his sinne: so many a one flieth to the diuell vpon the punishment of it.

Vse. Seeing this is the propertie of a wicked man being troubled, to foame out his owne shame, let the childe of God in his trouble quiet himselfe, restraine and bridle his corruptions; yea let him shew foorth his faith, obedience, meeknes and subiection vnto God; let him repaire vnto God by prayer: as Iehosaphat being in a great streight on euery side turned his eyes vnto the Lord, saying: I know not what to doe, but our eyes are towards thee. And Dauid flying from Absalom his sonne reuiled him not, nor stormed against him, but turned to the Lord, saying: If I please thee not, Lord here am I, doe with me euen as thou pleasest. 2. Chro. 20. 12.

The second comparison followeth in these words: They are wandring starres. By which words wee may not vnderstand the Planets in the heauens: neither the fixed starres which keepe a direct and constant course: but such as wee call shooting, falling, or gliding starres; which haue some light, but it is soone obscured. The sinne then is, that which was before mentioned, namely their false and instable doctrine, which can neuer direct men to heauē, no more than these shooting starres can direct either sailers by sea, or trauellers by land. Hence learne two things: first, that all true Teachers must be starres. Secondly, they must bee fixed and not wandring starres: first they must bee starres. Ob. This cannot be, seeing they haue no light of their owne. Ans. Christ is the light which inlighteneth euery man that commeth into the world; called therefore the Sunne of righteousnes, and the day starre, from whom all Ministers receiue their light. Againe, they may bee fit instruments to carrie light vnto others (which is their office) although they haue none of their own, saue that onely which is conueied from Christ vnto them: as a Lanthorne hath no light in it selfe but what men put into it.

Doct. First, all true Teachers must first haue the Sunne of righteousnes to shine in their owne hearts, before they can enlighten others with his light: for as Paul was himselfe comforted that he might be able to comfort others, 2. Corinth. 1. so no man can teach others, till himselfe first bee taught. Secondly, if they be starres they must shine to somwhat, and that is, to the hearts of men: so as the principall care of Ministers ought to bee herein placed, that they may enlighten the minds, consciences, wils, and affections of men, so becomming the meanes of the rising of the Sunne of righteousnes in mens hearts, not that they may fill the eare with words, words, but the heart with light, comfort, and refreshing. This was the scope of Pauls preaching, 2. Cor. 4. 2. in the declaration of the truth to approoue himselfe to euery mans conscience in the sight of God: so as if his Gospell were yet hid, it was not his fault; but of those men whose eyes the God of the world had blinded, that the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ should not shine vnto their hearts.

Vse. This teacheth that all men by nature are the children of darkenesse, without the knowledge of God; as vnto whō God hath appointed Teachers to be as shining stars to enlightē them. We neede not to go farre to proue this truth, for euen our owne countrey witnesseth that in the daies of former Princes, our forefathers wanting this light and these stars, sowed and reaped their fields, brought home their corne, baked their bread: which serued them partly for foode, and partly to make a breaden god of; a more palpable darknes than that of Egypt which might haue been felt. Secondly, seeing that darknes is chased away, and wee haue the light, and many bright starres to direct vs, take the exhortation Ephes. 5. 8. Ye are now light, walk as children of light, namely by accepting, entertaining and embracing of the light. That wee may doe this, first wee must know the light, and behold it with the loue and affection of our hearts vnto it; that as when the Sunne shineth, euery man openeth his doores and windowes to receiue the comfort of it: so wee should open the doores of our hearts to entertaine, and retaine the light of Christ, to haue them filled therewith: for then Gods fauourable countenance is shining vpon vs. Secondly, hauing the light, we must doe the workes of the light, that is of obedience: when the Sunne is vp and shineth euery man walketh in his calling, and whilest our Sunne of grace is ouer our heads, wee are to walke as becommeth the calling of Christianitie, to make conscience of all sinne; a shame is it at noon day to stumble & fall, and rush into a pit: so now is it for Christian men in such a sunne shine of the Gospell, to betake them to euery worke of darknes, and be betaken with euery snare of sin, as though they had no light to direct them, but were left in darknes.

Open the doore of thy heart, that the Sunne of righteousnes may shine into the house of thy soule

Secondly, true Teachers must not onely be starres, but fixed starres, that is, constant & stable in the doctrine which they teach, and deliuer out of the Prophets, and Apostles: for if the starres and Sea markes should chaunge their places, and remoue to & fro, the poore passengers that looke for constant direction from them, are likely to be carried and cast vpon quicke sands and rockes, and so bee ouerthrowne and drowned: in like manner if Teachers bee variable, and changelings in their doctrines, the soules of their hearers (not knowing where to haue sure direction) are as likely to suffer shipwracke and sinke into the pit of hell.

Vse. People ought to haue their hearts stablished, and setled vpon the doctrine of religion taught, and proued vnto them out of the word; by the direction whereof they are to bee passed vnto the hauen of happines. If this bee learned of the bodie of this land, our peace and prosperitie shall be stable, within our walles and palaces: yea Gods protection shall be a wall of fire round about vs. So much of that verse.

Vers. 14. And Enoch also the seuenth from Adam prophecied of such, saying: Behold the Lord commeth with thousands of his Saints.

THe Apostle hauing in the latter part of the former verse repeated the conclusion of the reason, which is, that these seducers shall be destroyed, (the blacknes of darknes being reserued for them) hee confirmeth that conclusion by a worthie testimonie of Enoch; who prophecied that the Lord would giue iudgement against all vngodlie men: and therefore these vngodly men vers. 4. must needes be destroyed. In this testimonie consider two things: first the preface before it: secondly, the testimonie it selfe. In the preface he nameth the author; who was Enoch: and commendeth him in that he was the seuenth from Adam. Here two questions are to bee answered: first, whence had Iude this historie, seeing it is no where recorded in the Scriptures? and how knew he it to be Enochs? I answere two waies: first, he either had it and learned it to bee his by some tradition which went from hand to hand: (or else written ten by some Iew) or secondly, he learned it out of some booke which went vnder Enochs name: then extant in the daies of the Apostles, though now lost: it is certaine that one of these waies hee had it.

Hence the Papists gather that the Iewes had vnwritten traditions, and consequently all their traditions are to be obserued. Ans. We denie not all vnwritten traditions, of which some are true and profitable: but wee renounce and denie all those traditions which are made articles of faith, & rules of Gods worship, necessarie to saluation, (for all such doctrines are written in the books of the Prophets and Apostles, which containe perfect direction and rules concerning faith & manners) of which kind the Romane Church holdeth their traditions to be: this is of another kind, it being no article of faith, nor necessary to saluation to knowe whether Enoch writ this prophecie or no. Againe, from the second answere, others who are no Papists, conclude, that some bookes of Canonicall Scripture are perished and lost. But this is vntrue; for then first the fidelitie of the Church, which is the keeper of these Oracles, should be called in question: and secondly, in the bookes Canonicall extant, not one sentence, or tittle, no not the sense of any sentence is lost: how then should whole bookes come to be lost?

It is alleaged that the books of Salomon are most of them lost. Answ. The bookes of Salomon which were lost, were bookes of humanitie and Philosophie: for hee writ of all beasts, birds, trees, euen from the Cedar in Libanus to the hyssop vpon the wall: the books of humane truth might faile, but no part of Canonicall Scripture.

Ob. Mention is made in the Scripture of the bookes of the Chronicles of the Iewes or Kings of Iudah; but these are perished. Ans. They were politique histories, as are the Chronicles of England, or other Countries.

Ob. The bookes of Nathan, Gad, Iddo, Shemaiah, and other Prophets are perished. Ans. All these (as is though by the learned) are contained in the bookes of the Kings, Chronicles, and Samuel.

Ob. This book of Enoch is lost. Ans. First, it is doubted whether it was a booke or no, or went by a tradition. Secondly, if it was a booke, it was no part of Scripture: for Moses was the first penman of Scripture, who liued long after Enoch.

The second question: why doth the Apostle make choise of this testimonie of Enoch, rather than some other Prophet? Answ. Himselfe giueth two reasons. First, he was the seuenth from Adam: it is therefore an ancient testimonie, to be receiued and reuerenced for the antiquitie: but withall it sheweth what is true antiquitie; namely, when a doctrine of religion can bee prooued from some Prophet or Apostle: (for this testimonie was a prophecie) and therefore that antiquitie which the Church of Rome challengeth to her religion and doctrine is but counterfeit; because they are not able to iustifie the maine pointes thereof from any Prophet or Apostle: yea in these wherein they dissent from vs they cannot bring their proofe and descent from within the first hundred yeeres after Christ. It is then a vaine plea and false pretence of them to boast of the antiquitie of their religion. The second reason is in the word prophecied: for Enoch spoke not this of his owne head or motion, but from God; for no creature, Angell, or man, can foretell things to come; it being a prerogatiue properly belonging vnto God. Ob. Yes, but the learned Physition can truely foretell the death of the patient to come. Ans. He doth not properly herein foretell a thing to come: for the death of the partie is present in the signes and causes of it. Ob. But the Diuell could foretell Sauls death, 1.Sam.28.19. To morow shalt thou be with me and thy sonnes. Ans. The Diuell could not properly foretell it, but might see it in the causes and signes. Againe, hee might speake so to Saule; because God had made him an instrument for the execution of that iudgement and destruction: so as God only properly foretelleth that which is simply to come, and no man or Angell.

He was not the fourth from Adam Cains son, Gen. 4.17. but the seuenth of the posteritie of Seth: Gen.7.18.

The second point is the testimonie it selfe. Behold the Lord commeth &c.] In which obserue three points: first, the comming of the Lord: secondly, the iudgement of the Lord: thirdly, the cause of it in the 15. verse: To giue iudgement against al men, &c. First of the party coming:

ming: Behold the Lord commeth.] Where the Apostle speaketh in the time present, which is put for the time to come: which forme of speech sheweth the certaintie of Christs comming to iudgement; who shall as certeinly come, as if he were now alreadie comming. Concerning which certaintie, it may be demaunded first, whence commeth this comming of Christ to be so certaine? Ans. From the vnchangeable will of God, which hath certainly decreed the same. For he hath appointed a day in the which he will iudge the world in righteousnes. And thus are all other the articles of our faith most certaine, in that they are grounded on the vnchangeable will and word of God.

Act. 17. 31.

Secondly, how or from whence may we know this will of God to be so certaine? Ans. From the manner of propounding the doctrine of it; wherein the euidence of the spirit plainly appeareth, saying peremptorily; the Lord commeth: euidently expressing the certaintie as if it were now present. And the same may be spoken of the whole scripture, which in it selfe is most sure and certain, because it is the most vnchangeable will of God: but how do we know it so to be will some say? I answere, by the euidence of the spirit, the authoritie, puritie, maiestie, effect, and ends of the doctrine: it neede not seeke euidence elsewhere than from it selfe, not from man or the Church it selfe. The Romish Church confesseth it is of it selfe, and in it selfe sufficiently certaine, but not to me or thee, except the Church say so: but this is a false position. The Scripture is certaine both in it selfe and vnto vs, and we know it so to be though neuer a man would acknowledge it: the heart seasoned with grace will make the mouth confesse it.

Secondly, the Apostle speaking in this forme, he commeth, for he will come: wee learne to set before our eyes the comming of the Lord Iesus to iudgement, and to make account of euery present day as the day of his comming: the Scriptures euery where commend watchfulnes vnto vs, which is to do nothing else but to make reckoning continually of this day. But some will say, we cannot make account daily of it, for we see it commeth not: neither may we enquire into the time of it. Answ. Although wee cannot exactly make account of that daye of generall iudgement, yet may we well reckon vpon the day of our particular iudgement, and the day of our owne death, that so wee may be fitted thereto: For as this shall leaue vs, so that shall finde vs. A necessarie doctrine and dutie to be enforced in these drowsie daies, wherein euery man almost putteth off the euill day, and maketh league and couenants with death and hell: the young man presumeth of length of daies: the olde man dreameth he may liue one yeere longer: both of them deferre hereupon their repentance, in that they both are of one minde, namely, that their Master will yet deferre his comming. Thirdly, we must not only carrie within vs a conceit and opinion of this day; but also must be inwardly affected with it, that we may walke in awe and reuerence before God in regard of it. 2. Cor. 5. 11. Knowing therefore the terrors of the Lord, we perswade men &c.

Now in the latter part of this verse, the attendants of the Lord in his comming are mentioned in these words: With thousands of his Saints: which must be vnderstood not only of Angels, but men also, 1. Thess. 3. 13. at the comming of the Lord Iesus Christ with all his Saints. Qu. How can this be, and how shall the Saints come with him? Ans. All men shall rise with their owne bodies, good & bad, at the sound of the Trumpet: then shall the Saints be taken vp into the clowdes to meete Christ, and shall be made a part of his attendance: but the wicked shal stand vpō the earth, wishing the mountaines and hils to fall vpon them, and hide them from the presence of the Iudge. Which affoordeth a most speciall comfort vnto all them who know themselues to be the members of Christ, they shall not need to be dismaied at that day, nor feare the face of the wicked, seeing they shall be receiued in the clowdes, into fellowship with Christ before the iudgement begin: which manner of proceeding the Apostle hauing described, concludeth with the same: Wherefore comfort your selues one another with these wordes, vers. 18. Here also may bee noted the power, maiestie, and omnipotencie of Christ in his second comming, although his first comming was base and in the the forme of a ſeruant; now he ſhall come with many millions of Angels and Saints; whom all creatures cannot reſiſt: let no wicked man thinke then either to abſent himſelfe, or eſcape his fearefull wrath: the only way to auoide it is in thy life time to meete him by repentance.

1. Thess. 4. 16, 17.

Verſ.15. To giue iudgement againſt all men, and to rebuke all the vngodly among them, of all their wicked deedes, which they haue vngodlily committed: and of all their cruell ſpeakings, which wicked ſinners haue ſpoken againſt him.

THe ſecond point in the teſtimonie, is the iudgement of the Lorde, which together with the cauſe is in this verſe deſcribed. Concerning the iudgement wee muſt knowe, that it is either generall or ſpeciall: both of them here mentioned: the former in theſe wordes: To giue iudgement againſt all men; the latter in theſe words following: And to rebuke all the vngodly among them. In the generall iudgement it may be asked how Chriſt can bee ſaid to giue iudgement againſt all men; ſeeing the Saints ſhall come with him, and hee will paſſe no ſentence againſt them? Anſ. The meaning is, he will giue iudgement vpon all men: for the godly ſhall receiue and heare a ſentence, but of abſolution: and amongſt all men he will rebuke the vngodly: all perſons ſhall come vnto iudgement without exception, of what age, ſexe, or ſtate ſoeuer they be. This vniuerſall iudgement teacheth vs, firſt, to redreſſe before this day come whatſoeuer within vs would when it commeth confound vs, for enery man muſt appeare in his owne perſon: no Procter ſhall be allowed to ſpeake or ſolicite for any man; the ſecrets of all hearts muſt bee diſcloſed, and euery man ſhall receiue accordingly to that he hath done. It ſtandeth men therefore in hand to reforme things amiſſe before hand, for they ſhall appeare nakedly euen as they are. Quoſt. How ſhall this bee done? Anſ. 1.Cor.11.21. Iudge thy ſelfe before hand, and thou ſhalt not bee iudged of the Lord; arraigne, examine, caſt and condemne thy ſelfe, ſue for pardon as for life and death, and thou ſhalt eſcape that fearefull iudgement: For hee that confeſſeth his ſinnes and forſaketh them, ſhall finde mercie, Prou.28.13. Thus doe and mercie belongeth vnto thee. Vpon the ſame ground Paul raiſeth the ſame dutie, admoniſhing all men euery where to repent, becauſe he hath appointed a day in which hee will iudge the worlde in righteouſnes, Act.17.30.31. Secondly, ſeeing there is a day of vniuerſall iudgment, ſeeke in the meane time to ſtop the mouth of thy conſcience, that it may then ſtand with thee to excuſe and acquite thee, and neuer dare to offend againe and wound it, for it is a deputie Iudge vnder God; which if it condemne thee, much more ſhall God the great Iudge, being greater than thy conſcience. Thirdly, hence in all actions our care ſhould be to approoue our hearts vnto God, eſpecially in hearing and ſpeaking the word, prayer, vſe of the Sacraments, yea and all our endeuours ſhould be to pleaſe and obey him; who one day will giue an vpright ſentence vpon them all. Thus the conſideration of the iudgement to come, made the Apoſtle Paul endeuour to approoue all the actions of his life vnto God, 2.Cor.5.11. So Peter 2.Epiſt.3.11 ſeeing all theſe things ſhall be diſſolued, what manner of men ought we to be in holy conuerſation and godlines, looking for the haſting vnto the comming of the day of the Lord?

The ſpeciall iudgement is laid down in the next words, and they containe two things: firſt, the perſons who ſhall be iudged; All the vngodly among them. Secondly, the manner of their iudgement in the word rebuke or conuince. The perſons are ſet out by their propertie of vngodlineſſe, which is a ſinne directly againſt God: and the vngodly man is he who denieth God the honour due vnto him: of whom (that we might the better know him) the Scripture hath giuen fiue notes or properties: as firſt, that he knoweth not, or acknowledgeth not the true God aright according to his word. Pſal.10.4. All their thoughts be that there is no God, that is, they acknowledge him not, in his preſence, prouidence, iuſtice, or mercie. Secondly, he ſubiecteth not his body, ſoule, and conſcience to the laws of God in al things: but taketh libertie to liue as hee liſt. Iob.21.14. They ſay to the Almightie,

We muſt be cõdemned by our ſelues, or by the Lord.

Depart from vs, we will none of thy waies. Pſalm.50.16. They hate to be reformed. Thirdly, in heart and life he dependeth not himſelfe vpon the will, power, prouidence, and good pleaſure of God; but on ſomething out of God in himſelf, or ſome other creature; Abac.2.4. whereas the iuſt man liueth by faith, the wicked man exalteth himſelfe, and is puffed vp as bearing himſelf vpon ſomething beſides the Creator. Fourthly, he worſhippeth not from his heart the true God, he lifteth not vp his ſoule in prayer, or thankſgiuing: but as a beaſt receiueth bleſſings contenting himſelfe within himſelfe, neuer looking higher to the hand reaching them out vnto him. Iob. 21.15. Who is the Almightie that wee ſhould ſerue him, and what profit is it to call vpon him? Pſal.14. He neuer calleth vpon God. Fifthly, he hateth the Church and people of God, and when occaſion ſhall ſerue he will teſtifie it by perſecuting the ſame. For he that loueth not God, loueth not his adherents. Pſa.44.5. They ſmite downe thy people O Lord, and trouble thine heritage. Theſe be the notes of them againſt whom ſentence ſhall paſſe when they ſhall be iudged: from whence two duties are to be learned. Firſt, to denie all vngodlines, and to put farre from vs all the properties thereof. Secondly, to exerciſe our ſelues vnto godlines and all the duties therof: as firſt to learne to know God aright, both in his owne attributes, and alſo in his affection to vs ward, neuer quieting our ſelues till wee know him to be our Father, our Redeemer, our Sanctifier: and this knowledge of him is life eternall. Secondly, to ſubiect our ſelues, our liues, wils, affections, ſpeeches, and actions, to all his lawes: for to ſhake off the yoke of obedience to any part of his word is rebellion. Thirdly, to goe out of our ſelues, as being nothing in our ſelues; and in our hearts depend vpon the will and good pleaſure of God, liuing by faith, making him our rocke, our tower, our fortreſſe, and ſtrong defence in all eſtates, yea in life and in death our aduantage. Fourthly, to worſhip him not only outwardly (as hypocrites may doe) but to ſerue him in our ſpirits, giuing him our whole hearts. Fifthly, to loue all men, but eſpecially Gods Saints, and the houſeholde of faith; affecting the particular congregations; and chiefly delighting in the Saints vpon earth that excell in vertue. Thus walking with God, as Enoch did, we ſhall eſcape this moſt wofull ſentence which ſhall bee pronounced againſt the vngodly ones of the earth.

The ſecond thing in this ſpecial iudgment is the manner of it in the word rebuke.] God rebuketh two waies: firſt in mercie, when as in iuſtice he remẽbreth mercie, Hab.3. Secondly in iuſtice, yea in anger and wrath: Pſal.6.1. O Lord rebuke me not in thy wrath: and this latter is here meant. So as thus much is here ſignified, that the Lord will powre out his fury, and his wrathful indignation vpon al the vngodly of the earth. This wrathful rebuke hath two parts: firſt, the conuicting of the vngodly in their own cõſciences, of all their wicked thoughts, words and works; and this the word alſo ſignifieth, Reu.20. The books ſhal be opened, and all mens ſinnes ſhall be laid open: that is, they ſhall be ſo diſcouered, as they (being conuinced) ſhall not be able to denie them. Secondly, the puniſhment that ſhall follow that conuiction. So Dauid prayeth, Pſa.6. Neither chaſtice me in thy heauie diſpleaſure.

Doct. Hence we learne that al things are fully and perfectly knowne vnto God; and all things are open before him: Heb.4.13. yea they are naked, and as it were vnquartered before his eyes: for the Apoſtle alludeth to the cutting vp of a beaſt, or the anatomizing of the creature, wherein men are curious to finde out euery little veine, or muskle, though they lie neuer ſo cloſe: euen ſo the Lord ſhall finde out euery tranſgreſſion, although neuer ſo ſecretly conceiued and concealed, and that in ſuch ſort as hee ſhall conuince the vngodly man, whoſe mouth ſhall be ſhut ſo ſoone as euer his booke is open: which ſhould teach vs, firſt, in matter of religion to auoide all diſſembling and hypocriſie. Be that in deede what thou ſeemeſt to be: for though thou maieſt delude men, thou canſt not deceiue the Almightie, but hee ſhall conuince thee. Secondly, let thy dealing before men be plaine, ſimple, without fraud, couin or deceit; for though thou maiſt gloſe with men, who cannot conuince thee, yet the righteous Lord ſhall rebuke thee for want of righteouſnes in thy dealings. Thirdly, humble thy ſelfe ſelfe before God alwaies for all thy knowne ſinnes; yea and for thy vnknowne ſinnes alſo: for though they be vnknowne to thy ſelfe, yet they are knowne vnto him, who will one day conuince thee of them all, except thou preuent him by thy repentance.

The third thing propounded in the teſtimonie, is the cauſe of the iudgement, in theſe words: Of all their wicked deeds which they haue vngodlily cõmitted, and of all their cruell ſpeakings, which wicked ſinners haue ſpoken againſt him.] The cauſe is two-fold, the deedes and words of men: the deedes are diſtributed, firſt, by the propertie of them, being workes of vngodlines. Secondly, by the manner of performing them, they are vngodlily cõmitted. By vngodly works are meant all ſinnes againſt any part of the law of God, whether in the firſt or ſecond Table: for euery ſinne (though it be directly againſt man) hath in it a defect, and a withdrawing of ſome dutie due to God. Secondly, for the manner, theſe workes being vngodly and failing againſt the law, are done after an vngodly manner: and that worke is done vngodlily which proceedeth from an vnrepentant heart, and a minde addicted and deuoted to vngodlines, which is knowne and diſcerned to be ſuch a one by three notes: firſt, becauſe it purpoſeth to commit ſinne before hand. Secondly, in the committing of ſinne it is delighted and taketh pleaſure in it. Thirdly, after ſin it walketh in the ſame courſe, yea runneth on in the ſame waies without remorſe or repentance: and this clauſe ſeemeth to be added to put a difference between the godly and wicked, who both of them may commit vngodlines, and be found in vngodly actions; but not both committing them in an vngodly manner: for the childe of God before he ſinne hee purpoſeth it not, yea he hath a purpoſe not to ſinne; ſo as he may ſay it is not only beſids, but againſt his purpoſe. Secondly, in his ſinne he hath a reſiſting, and ſtrife againſt it, and is not wholy ſwallowed vp in the pleaſure of it. Thirdly, he lieth not in it, but reneweth and recouereth himſelfe againe by faith and repentance: ſo as though hee doe wickednes, yet hee doth it not wickedly, but weakely, being ouercome and foyled by corruption. And hence is it that this wicked worke being found in the hands of Gods children, though it deſerue death: yet through grace it ſhall be no cauſe of his condemnation.

Notes of an vngodly and vnrepentant heart.

Doct. The principall cauſe of condemnation is not this or that ſinne, but the lying and trading therein, which argueth an vngodly heart: to commit vngodlines indeede, maketh men ſubiect to condemnation; but to commit it vngodlily, this bringeth ſwift iudgement. Secondly, a wicked man ſinneth not of infirmitie, for he committeth vngodlines in an vngodly manner, and tradeth in wickednes, wickedly: the ſinnes of infirmitie befall not the graceleſſe ſinner, but the regenerate only, in whom frailty faileth grace for a time: the drunkard may excuſe himſelfe and ſay his ſinne is his infirmitie; yet is it not, but a wickednes, wickedly committed: ſo of the couetous perſon and other ſinners. Thirdly, marke Gods great mercy with much thankfulnes: in that the regenerate doing wicked actions aſwell as the wicked, are not condemned for them as the wicked are: For there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſus, Rom. 8. 1.

The godly commit vngodlines, but not vngodlily as the wicked.

The ſecond cauſe of the iudgement is the ſpeeches of the wicked, ſet out by two properties: firſt, they are cruell: ſecondly, they are vttered againſt God. An example of ſuch ſpeech we haue in Lamech, Geneſ. 4. Whoſoeuer killeth Caine ſhall be reuenged ſeuen fold: but whoſoeuer offendeth me, I wil reuenge my ſelfe ſeuentie times ſeuen fold; a cruell and bloodie ſpeech vanting it ſelfe euen againſt God himſelfe.

Vſe. Firſt, hence it followeth that wicked words and works are cauſes of iuſt condemnation. Ob. Then good words and workes are cauſes of ſaluation. Anſ. The reaſon is not good: for wicked mens ſins be perfectly wicked, but the actions of the regenerate are not perfectly good. Secondly, we are hence to bewaile the vngodly words and workes that haue paſſed vs, which binde vs ouer to condemnation, and aboue all things in the world to ſue to God by prayer for pardon: yea to giue our ſelues no reſt, till we haue within vs the witnes of Gods ſpirit, witneſſing to our ſpirits that we are graciouſly accepted, and that our vngodly workes are remoued out of his ſight. Thirdly, wee are to marke thoſe perſons whoſe liues and mouthes abound with vngodlines, and communicate not with ſuch; but mourne for them as Lot did, whoſe righteous ſoule was vexed, not onely in ſeeing the wicked workes, but alſo in hearing the filthy ſpeeches of the vncleane Sodomites. My teares (ſaith Dauid) haue bin my meate day and night, while they daily ſay vnto me, where is thy God? Fourthly, our dutie is to auoide euery wicked way and word, and endeuour to haue our ſpeech ſeaſoned with ſalt, and miniſtring grace to the hearers. Fifthly, conſider hence what we in this land may iuſtly be afraid of, ſeeing vngodlines ſo exceedingly aboundeth, godlines decreaſeth: the godly are taken away, the wicked reproch thoſe that are left euen for religions ſake, and for ſuch religious practiſes as ſtand both by Gods law, and the lawes of the land, by ſuch ſpeeches as theſe: Thou art one that runnes to ſermons; doeſt thou learne this and that there? thou art full of the holie Ghoſt, the Diuell is within thee. And ſuch like moſt wretched and vngodly ſpeeches, iuſtly deſeruing fearefull iudgements: The wickednes of inhabitants ouerturne whole kingdomes, Prou. 28.2. It behoues vs then to betake our ſelues to ſpeedie repentance; leſt ſpeedie vengeance ouertake vs vnawares.

Verſ. 16. Theſe are murmurers, complainers, walking after their owne luſts, whoſe mouthes ſpeake proud things; hauing mens perſons in admiration, becauſe of aduantage.

IN this verſe the Apoſtle returneth againe to his former purpoſe, and ſtill continueth the rehearſall of the ſinnes and vices of theſe falſe teachers, againſt whom he writeth; and againſt whom he hath alreadie alleaged twelue ſeuerall ſinnes; and in this verſe addeth fixe more, of which ſome notwithſtanding haue been touched in the ſins formerly condēned. Herein we will firſt ſhew the nature of the vices themſelues, and ſecondly lay downe the contrarie duties ſo farre as they ſhall concerne vs.

Theſe are murmurers,] By murmuring wee are to vnderſtand a certaine fruite of impatience, whereby men ſhew themſelues diſpleaſed with the worke of Gods prouidence, eſpecially when his hand is vpon them, and they are vnder the croſſe. Example whereof wee haue in the Iſraelites, who when Moſes had brought them out of Egypt, they murmured and repined that they were fed with Manna only, and wanted their fleſh-pots which they had in Egypt: ſee Deut. 1.26.27. where this ſinne is called rebellion againſt God; and therefore is no ſmall ſinne. For the auoyding and preuenting of which ſinne, wee muſt learne two duties: firſt, in ſilence and ſubiection to calme and quiet our harts in the reueiled will of God vpon vs, though therein our owne willes bee croſſed. Pſal. 4.4. Examine your ſelues, and be ſtill. Pſal. 37.7. Be ſilent vnto God, and waite on the Lord. Which is al one as if he had plainly ſaid: Let Gods will be your will alſo. Iſai. 30.15. In quietnes and confidence ſhall be your ſtrength. Herein our ſtrength muſt be exerciſed, not in reſiſting, but enduring the hand of God. Secondly, wee muſt ſhew our ſelues truly thankfull to God in all things befalling vs: yea euen in euill things, which otherwiſe may be occaſions of murmuring. Iob. 1. The Lord hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken, bleſſed be his name. Ob. But this may ſeeme harſh and contrary to reaſon to bleſſe God for croſſes. Anſ. Not a whit, if we conceiue that according to our deſerts, he might plunge vs into the pit of hell: and therefore if he mitigate of that iuſtice, and remember his mercie more eaſily correcting vs, herein all the praiſe of mercie is due vnto him.

Complainers] So called for two cauſes: firſt, becauſe they are diſcontented with their preſent outward eſtate wherein God hath placed them; the portion that God hath allotted thē liketh them not; they are diſpleaſed that they are not as others be, and that they haue not as others haue. Secondly, becauſe vpon the frowardnes of their diſpoſitiō they are eaſily diſpleaſed, and hard to pleaſe again, ſoone incenſed, and not ſo ſoone ſatisfied; and thereupon are commonly complaining of the hard meaſure they ſeeme to receiue at mens hands. But eſpecially they are ſo called in reſpect of the former reaſon. This is not the ſinne of that age onely, neither only of thoſe perſons, but is euen a common ſinne of our times, and that of the richer richer sort: for these are the poorest amongst men, euer whining, and complaining that their state is not so good as others, nor as they would haue it: and although they know (as we say) no end of their wealth, yet know they no end of their wishings and desires. We on the contrarie are hence to learne, first, to thinke well and speake well of that estate in which God in his prouidence hath setled vs, bee it better or worse. Phil.4.11. In what estate soeuer, I haue learned therewith to be contented. Heb.13.5. Be content with that you haue. First, carrie not couetous, aspiring, and malicious mindes and affections: but if thou must needes bee desiring, satisfie thy selfe with Iacobs desire: Onely the Lord be with me, and if hee giue me foode and raiment in this my iourney, it is sufficient. Secondly, our hearts must be set to obey God euen in pouertie and affliction, and beare aduersitie with an equall and moderate minde, our obedience must not onely be actiue in doing; but passiue also in suffering his wil. Phil.4.12. I can want and abound; I can doe all things through Christ that strengtheneth me. Hebr.10.34. The faithfull could with ioy suffer the spoyling of their goods. Thirdly, wee must endeuour to shew all meekenes to all men vpon all occasions, putting off all morositie, waiwardnes and difficultie to bee satisfied and appeased. Christs voyce was not lift vp in the streetes; he endured all wrongs, forgaue all iniuries; and all the members of his bodie put off likewise their wooluish dispositions: they cease to be Tigers, Lions, Cockatrises: and become Kids, Lambes, little children, easie to be handled, hardly offended, and quicklie pleased: which disposition we must put vpon vs.

Gods will must be obeyed, in being both done and suffered of vs.

Isai.11.16.

The third sinne; [walking after their owne lusts] is fitly expounded in Eccles. 11.9. where the young man is ironically willed to walke in the waies of his owne heart, and in the sight of his own eyes, &c. euen so these men liue in their sinnes, according to the leading and lusting of their owne corrupted hearts: which sin is before in the fourth verse touched; and somewhat also is further to bee spoken of it in the rest of the Epistle. Our contrarie dutie is two-fold: first, if at any time by frailtie we fall into any sin, neuer to goe on in the same, but break it off, and returne vnto God: for to walke after his owne hearts lusts, is a note of a wicked person and an enemie of God. Psal.68.21. Surely God wil wound the head of his enemies, and the hairie pate of him that walketh on in sinne. Secondly, wee are to frame our liues cleane against the lusts and inclinations of our owne hearts; waging battell continually against them, euer crossing and thwarting them: Rom.13.14. Take no thought to fulfill the lusts of the flesh. Galath.3. They that are Christs haue crucified the flesh, with the lusts thereof: for whosoeuer beleeueth truly the pardon of his sinnes by Christs death, cannot but mortifie the lusts of his wicked heart; besides that the whole course of Christianitie is nothing else but a continuall conuersion and turning vnto God.

The fourth sin. Whose mouthes speake proude or swelling things.] That is, they boast themselues of knowledge, holines, and things not to be found in the. The same with the Diuels sinne, Luk.4. All this will I giue thee, for they are mine, and I giue them to whom I will: wherein he sheweth himselfe the father of lying and boasting. It is noted also to bee the property of Antichrist, as to whom was giuen a mouth which spake great things and blasphemies, Reu.13.5. which was meant of the Emperour indeed, but so as the second beast, which is that Antichrist, should doe all things which the first beast could doe before him, ver.12. It is also the noted vice of all heretikes and seducers, 2.Cor.10.12. to exalt and praise themselues. The contrarie duties are, first, In common speech neither to praise, nor dispraise our selues, for vanitie lurketh in both: besides that, modestie will not suffer the former; and the latter is to occasion others to praise vs, which is but vanitie. Secondly, when in speech wee compare our selues with others our equals, wee must euer thinke and speake better of them than our selues. Phil.2.3. Let euery man esteeme other better than himselfe. Paul comparing himselfe with the Apostles, said he was the least of them all; because he had been a persecutor, 1.Cor.15.9. Thirdly, if any speake of his owne wants, when iust occasion is offered, hee must speake euen the most against himself. As Paul, that he was the head and chiefe of all sinners.

ners. Fourthly, if a man vpon iuſt occaſion bee moued to commend himſelfe, firſt he muſt doe it in all humilitie and modeſtie: ſo Paul ſpeaketh of himſelf in another perſon: 1.Cor.12.1. I knew a man in Chriſt which was taken vp into Paradiſe, &c. And in nothing was I inferiour vnto the very chiefe Apoſtles, though I be nothing, verſ.11.

The fifth ſinne. Hauing mens perſons in admiration.] The word perſon in ſcripture ſignifieth the face, and outward apparance of a man, and conſequently the things belonging vnto the perſon, as riches, honours, dignities, for the which theſe falſe teachers haue men in admiration. Qu. Is it not lawfull to admire a Prince, or other Potentates at all? Anſ. Yes: but when men admire them only for their perſon, riches, honours, nobilitie, without reſpect of the feare of God, or true vertue, this is vnlawfull, and the ſinne of theſe men: wherein is alſo included the contempt of the religious poore, yea and alſo of the rich themſelues, if they trulie feare God. Iam.2.1. My brethren, haue not the faith of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt in reſpect of perſons: teaching vs that it will not ſtand with true Religion, nor with the faith of Chriſt to honour men only, becauſe they are rich or noble.

A great miſerie of great men to be moſt admired, but leaſt admoniſhed.

Pſal.15.4.

Firſt, note here that no man carrieth ſo baſe a minde, and ſuch ſlauiſh affections, as the proud ambitious perſon; he magnifieth the great man, and is ſeruilly addicted vnto him euen for outward reſpects, not eſteeming him for that which is indeede worthie to be reſpected. Secondly, the condition of great men (for the moſt part) is miſerable, who haue many to admire them, but few to amoniſh them: rich men are admired for wiſedome, whereas the ſame men, if they were poore, would carrie away no praiſe thereof. Ahab had foure hundred falſe prophets who thus admired his perſon, but onely one Micha who faithfullie admoniſhed him. Thirdly, our dutie is to honour them that feare God, rich or poore, high or low: it being a note of a childe of God to contemne a vile perſon that is a wretched ſinner, but to honour them that feare the Lord, bee they neuer ſo baſe: and yet the honourable much more, if they bee found in the waies of religion.

The ſixth ſin. Becauſe of aduantage.] That is, for profits ſake: where their couetouſnes, which before was touched, is here againe taxed: the effect of which affection is to blind the minde that it cannot iudge aright of perſons or things: it maketh a man account an enemie of God rightly honourable, and to deeme the things below of higheſt regard. Let vs weede out of our hearts this bitter roote of couetouſnes, which otherwiſe will ſo blind vs, as we cannot truly diſcerne the people and things of God, but take Egyptians for Iſraelites, and accept of the red pottage in ſtead of the bleſſing.

Verſ.17. But, ye beloued, remember the words which were ſpoken before of the Apoſtles of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

IN theſe words the Apoſtle goeth about to anſwere an obiection that might be made by the Church after this manner: We cannot bee reſolued that theſe men againſt whom yee write, are ſo vngodly as you would make them: The anſwere whereto is framed in the 17.18.& 19.verſes. The effect of which is, that in the laſt times there ſhall bee mockers, and theſe be no other than the men of whom he writeth: and leſt they ſhould yet doubt of the truth of that he ſpake, he bringeth in the teſtimonie of the Apoſtles in the confirmation of the ſame: ſo as his doctrine was no other than that which was before by them deliuered. Where three things are to be conſidered: firſt, a preface to the teſtimonie, verſ.17. Secondly, the teſtimonie it ſelfe, verſ.18. Thirdly, the amplifying of it, verſ.19.

For the Preface. But, yee beloued, remember &c.] Firſt, the Apoſtle Iude ſetteth out his owne dutie and practiſe, in that whatſoeuer he ſpeaketh it proceedeth of loue: and he is not carried away in ſpeaking or writing with ſiniſter affections; and therefore he calleth them Beloued. This ought to be ỹ practiſe of al Teachers, who out of their inward loue to Gods people committed vnto them, are to vtter whatſoeuer they teach: yea and no man in any other calling may lay aſide this affection in the diſcharge of the duties therof, ſeeing it is the end of all the Commandements.

downe the dutie of the Church & faithfull people of God, which is to remember the words ſpoken by the Apoſtles of the Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Which we alſo in this age are to bee exhorted vnto for very weightie reaſons: firſt, it is a notable remedie againſt al ſinne, and eſpecially the forenamed ſinnes: Pſal.116. 11. In my haſte I ſaid all men are liars; that is, whē I remembred not the word of God; but forgat my own dutie, and was carried away with the ſtreame of my owne affections againſt faith, then I failed and was foiled. Pſal.119. I haue hid thy teſtimonies in my heart, that I ſhould not offend againſt thee. Secondly, this remembrance is a notable remedie againſt hereſies, and ſchiſmes, and all falſe doctrines, and is of much vſe in theſe our daies, wherein wee are in danger to bee ſeduced, partly by Atheiſts, partly by Papiſts, and partly by carnall Goſpellers; againſt all whom wee had need to bee well fenced, and armed by the reading, knowing, beleeuing, and remembring the wordes of the Prophets and Apoſtles, which onely are as Dauids ſling to ouerthrow the great Goliahs. Thirdly, it is an excellent meanes to ſettle the conſcience in the truth by perſwading the ſame: and the rather to be enforced, becauſe many alleage that there are ſo many Religions and opinions, that they wil be of none, for they knowe not which to betake themſelues vnto. But if theſe were diligent in the words of the Prophets and Apoſtles in reading, ſearching and ſifting out the truth in humilitie, they ſhould finde wherein to ſettle themſelues.

Secondly, by this ſecond word all Teachers are to take notice of their dutie, which is to whet the word of the Apoſtles vpon the hearts, mindes, and memories of their hearers, ſo as they may learne and remember them: and the rather becauſe in former ages religion was deſtroyed, and ſuperſtition preuailed, becauſe that men laid away the Scriptures out of their hands, and betooke themſelues to the expoſition of other mens writings; and to gloſſe vpon the ſayings of their anceſtors: whereby they brought a black darknes ouer theſe parts of the world. The Prophets and Apoſtles giue another direction. Malachy the laſt of the Prophets referreth vnto Moſes and the former Prophets; and Iude the laſt of the Apoſtles vnto the former Apoſtles, ſhewing what ought to bee the ſcope of all Teachers that would follow their ſteps.

Thirdly, hence all Students of Diuinitie are taught what they muſt moſt remember, namely the words and writings of the Apoſtles: for theſe are the key of the olde Teſtament and of the whole Scripture; which dutie if it were well obſerued, Popery, ſuperſtition and Atheiſme could not ſo farre preuaile, but fall downe to the ground, as Dagon before the Arke.

Thirdly, he nameth the authors of the teſtimony, who were the Apoſtles of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, implying their authoritie; and taking it for granted, that whatſoeuer they ſpake or writ muſt be receiued as an infallible truth, and may not be contradicted. Now the better to know both what the Apoſtles were, and what this authoritie is, conſider three points: firſt, their calling, and the greatnes thereof; They were called by Chriſts owne mouth, Ioh.20.21. As the Father ſent me, ſo I ſend you: by which compariſon hee deſigneth them to a particular and weightie calling, ſtanding in theſe points: firſt, as Chriſt was immediatly called by the Father, ſo were the Apoſtles immediatly called by himſelfe. Secondly, as Chriſt was ſent from the Father to preach to the whole world, being the great Prophet and Doctor of his Church; ſo Chriſt ſendeth them into the whole world, for the whole worlde was their charge. Thirdly, as Chriſt was ſent to reueile his Fathers will, which before was hid to the greateſt part of the world; ſo they were ſent by Chriſt to reueile the Fathers will, partly in making things more fully knowne, which were before but darkly ſhadowed: and partly in foretelling things to come, they all being Euangelicall Prophets. In theſe three ſtandeth that compariſon: in regard of which manner of their ſending they are aboue euen the Angels themſelues, nay the Angels were as it were but their ſchollers. Eph.3.10. Now vnto principalities and powers in heauenly places is made knowne by the Church the manifold wiſedome of God, that is, by the miniſtrie of the Apoſtles, the myſteries of God concerning mans redemption,

haue bin reueiled to the Angels themselues.

Secondly, consider their Authoritie, which was most authenticall, seeing that neither in teaching or writing they could erre, being specially priuiledged therefrom: Matth. 10.19. It shall be giuen you in that houre what ye shall say. The peculiar promise of direction belonging to the Apostles is recorded in Ioh. 16.13. The spirit of truth shall leade you into all truth; in which regard they were bold to ioyne themselues with the holy Act.15.28. Ghost. It seemeth good to the holy Ghost and vs, namely in ordering the Church affaires: yet here that distinction which is falsely applied to the Pope, is true in the Apostles, by reason of this assistance; that as they were priuate men, and in other causes they might, and did erre, but not as Apostles in performing their office Apostolicall.

Thirdly, their worke or office, they were Master builders of the Church of the new Testament: yea founders thereof, both by teaching doctrines, and informing the manners of men: farre passing all Euangelists, Pastors, Teachers, or ordinarie Ministers since their daies. 1.Cor.3.10. As a skilfull Master builder, I haue laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. For the furthering of which great worke in their hands, they had giuen them first a power to worke miracles for the confirming of their doctrine. Secondly, of giuing the holie Ghost by imposition of hands. Thirdly, an Apostolical rod to strike, and correct obstinate offenders; by the which Peter smote Ananias and Saphira with present death: and Paul Elymas with blindnes.

Vse. Marke that now the Pope claiming authoritie Apostolicall from Peter: it is but a false challenge; for that authoritie ceased with that office, and serued onely to lay the foundations of the Church withall, being both extraordinarie as the calling was: and personall, ceasing with the persons of the Apostles. So as if the Pope succeeded Peter in any thing, it is in the denying of Christ: it cannot be in founding the Church, which was done to his hand so many hundred yeeres before him.

The Pope succeedeth Peter onely in deniall of Christ.

Vers.18. How that they told you that there should be mockers in the last time, which should walke after their owne vngodly lusts.

THis verse containeth the testimonie it selfe, the preface of which was laid downe in the former: wherein two things are to bee noted: first, the time when wicked men shall abound in the Church: in the last time.] Secondly, what maner of persons they are; namely, described by two properties: first, they are mockers: secondly, fleshly.

For the time: It is called the last time: which is the time from the Ascension of Christ vnto the end of the world. It may be asked, how could this be called the last time, seeing it is sixteene hundred yeeres agoe? Ans. It is so called for two causes: first, because it goeth next before the end of the world, and shall be closed vp of the last day: 1.Corin.10.11. To admonish vs vpon whom the ends of the world are come. Secondly, in regard of former times, according to the seuerall ages of it, in which God altered the condition of his Church, and renewed his couenant from time to time vnto the same: as first plighting it with Adam, and afterward renewing it to Noah: thirdly to Abraham often repeating it: fourthly to Dauid: fifthly, at the returne out of the Babylonish captiuitie: sixthly, at the comming of Christ. But now Christ being come, and that fulnes of time wherein the former prophecies are fulfilled and accomplished, the shadows & ceremonies are abolished, & the new couenant of grace established; there remaineth no renewing thereof, neither any other alteration of it: but as Christ hath alreadie appeared in his humilitie by his first comming; so nothing is to be expected now but his second comming in glorie: and this is the proper and principall cause why this is called the last time.

Secondly, concerning the persons of the vngodly mē they are described, first to bee mockers. These are described by Peter, 2.Epist.3.3. In the last times shall come mockers, which will walke after their lusts, and say, Where is the promise of his comming: that is, those that shall scorne all religion, and make a mocke of God, godlines, and godly men: than which there is not a greater height of wickednes: of whom Salomon speaketh as being so far gone, that they are past all admonition, and therefore would not haue them admonished: and Dauid maketh this the highest degree of a wicked mans proceeding in his sinne, to sit him downe in the chaire of scorners, Psal. 1.

Pro. 9.8.

Popish doctrine a mockery of Christian religion.

Vse. This part of the testimonie is most truly verified in our age. First in the Romish Church, whose religion setteth vp a plaine mockerie of God, and of Christ, of Scripture and of true religion. First, for Christ they make but a mocke of him: the true Christ is a King, and so they say, but the Pope must controule him, both in making lawes of his owne to binde the conscience, as also in adding and detracting from Christ lawes what hee will: the true Christ is a Sauiour; but they make euery man a sauiour of himselfe, by meriting saluation: for they teach that Christ merited, that we might merit our own saluation: yea the true Christ is a Mediatour, but yet Saints must bee intercessors: and his Mother, whom they intitle the Queene of Heauen, must commaund her sonne by the right of a Mother, to heare their prayers, and forgiue their sinnes; what is this but to make his Mother Mediatour in his stead? Secondly, as for the Scriptures, they renounce the originall Bible, and the Greeke and Hebrew text as corrupt, and will admit of none as authenticall, but the Latin translation: yea and of that allow no sense, but that which the Pope authorizeth, and setteth downe: what is this else but to make a mockerie of the Scriptures? no Bible, no sense will serue, nor must stand, but the Popish sense, which is indeed to reduce all scripture to the Popes will and determination.

Secondly, if wee come home to our selues, we shall finde this scripture verified among the swarmes of Atheists, which make but a scorne of the word and Religion: tell any man almost of his dutie, he will be readie to say; How know you these to be Moses writings? and these to bee the Apostles writings which goe vnder their names, and may not falsehood bee written as well as truth? These are most prophane and blasphemous scorners: but such as were prophecied of before by the Apostles themselues.

Againe, amongst those that professe religion are many scorners; that let a man make but a shew of goodnes, and begin to make conscience of his waies, if he will not blaspheme and sweare as he was wont: if he will not drinke with the drunkard: if he refuse such companie as he conuersed with before, or will not doe as others doe, hee is presently condemned for a precise foole, or with such reprochfull tearmes; how then is not this prediction of the Apostle accomplished, when euen the performing of morall duties, yea and such as stand by the lawes of God and the land is scoffed at, as a blemish? When scorners are so rife, and bold euen in the face of the Church? when where God hath his little flocke, the diuell hath a large kingdome? let vs not be offended too much, when we heare and see these scorners: but then acknowledge the accomplishment of this prophecie, and contrarily loue and reuerence the word of God as a most pretious treasure.

The second sinne whereby these vngodly men are described, is, that they walke after the lusts of their owne hearts, wherein two things are included: first, that these vngodly men shall haue their hearts filled with vngodly lusts. Secondly, that they shall walk after these lusts. Concerning the former sundrie things are to be knowne: First, what this lust or concupiscence is. Ans. In the Scripture it is of two sorts, either originall, or actuall: or it may be considered two waies: first, as it is the fountaine or offspring of all other sinnes; or secondly, as it is a fruite of the corruption of our hearts. The former is an impotencie of the heart, whereby it is inordinatelie disposed to the desire of this or that euill: of which Iames speaketh, chap. 2. 14. Euery man when hee is tempted, is drawne away by his owne concupiscence: hence is the whole corruption of the heart, or originall sinne called lust, because it principally sheweth it selfe in these lusts. The latter is actuall lust, that is, euery inordinate and euill motion of the inner man against the law of God, which proceedeth as a branch or fruite from the fromer roote. Rom. 6. 12. Let not sinne raigne in your mortall bodies, that ye should obey it in the lusts of it: where, by lusts, are meant the flames and motions of lusts springing from the former fountaine. This lust I call first an inordinate motion, to distinguish it first from a holy lusting in the regenerate.

inordinate

Psal.119. 127. Dauid lusted after and desired the commandements of God, yea aboue gold and siluer; and there is a lust of the spirit against the flesh, as wel as of the flesh against the spirit.

Gal.5.17. Secondly, from a naturall lusting, which is an appetite after meate, drinke, &c. which in it selfe is no sinne. Lazarus desired without sinne the crummes vnder Dives his table. These lusts then are not to be condemned, but only lusts inordinate. Secondly, I say euery euill motion; because lust in the Scripture comprehendeth all thoughts and motions against Gods law, so is the Commandement to bee vnderstood: Thou shalt not lust, Eph.2.3. Among whom also we had our conuersation in times past in the lusts of the flesh, in fulfilling the will of the flesh, and of the minde. Where the Apostle inlargeth it vnto all motions, inclinations, passions, and perturbations of the heart, minde, will or affections: so farre as they are not directed by the law of God. This text must be vnderstood of actuall lust: of which there be two degrees: for sometime it is sudden, and sometimes voluntarie: the former is the first motion of the minde conceiued, but without consent. The latter is the motion conceiued, but with consent, purpose and deliberation; which may be made plaine in this similitude. The eye is sometimes cast vpon an obiect on a sudden, without any purpose or intention of the minde: but sometimes purposely and steadily vpon the same: and as in the twinkling of the eye it is often shut without thought or purpose: but sometimes againe of purpose and deliberation to preuent some hurt: so is it in the minde; the heart is a furnace of lust, the flames whereof arise sometimes vpon the sudden, and sometimes vpon leisure and deliberation; both these degrees must here bee vnderstood. Concerning which lusts there be three things further here to be considered: First, the qualitie and nature of these lusts; in that they are said to bee vngodly lusts; such as their root is, such are these branches: and therefore are in their nature properly sins, yea principall and master sinnes, yea and sinning sinnes, causing men to goe on in sinne. Qu. If they be sinnes, what Commandement of the ten condemneth them? Ans. Sudden lust before consent of will is condemned in the tenth: but voluntarie with consent is condemned in all the nine former. If this distinction bee not held, we cannot make tenne Commandements. For in all the Commandements lust is forbidden; necessarie then it is that lust should be thus distinguished, and also referred, as wee haue said. Quest. Some may aske: In what Commandement is original sinne condemned? Ans. Some say it is forbidden in the whole law, which is not vntrue; but yet it seemeth to be directly condemned in the first and last Commandements: for these two concerne properly the heart of man: the first respecting the hart directly so farre as it concerneth God: the last so farre as it concerneth man, whether himselfe, or others.

Vse. This teacheth vs to detest the Popish error, which teacheth vs that inordinate lusts be no sinnes, if consent of will be not added: but that is false: for if they bee conceiued in the minde, they are the sinnes of the minde, condemned in the tenth commandement. Ob. But they say, there can be no sinne properly produced without consent of will. Ans. In ciuill matters the reason is good, that none can be accessarie vnto sinne, vnlesse consent of will be added: but in diuine matters and in the Court of Conscience it is farre otherwise.

Secondly, in the lusts note the propertie of them, in these words: Which walke after; their propertie is to raigne in men, and to cause men to giue attendance vpon them: yea and to walke after them. Where they are not resisted and represſed, they make that man a vassall and slaue vnto them. Rom.6. Let not sinne raigne in your mortall bodie, to obey the lusts of it. Where the Apostle insinuateth so much that they force and compell men to the obedience of thē: the whole order and course of which regiment is liuely described, Iam.1.14. 15. by fiue degrees: first, lust tempteth, and that two waies: first, by withdrawing the heart from God: secondly, by intising, and intangling the minde with some delight of sinne. Secondly, lust conceiueth, when it causeth the will to consent, and resolue vpon the wickednes thought vpon. Thirdly, it bringeth

fourth when it forceth a man to put in execution the things consented vnto and resolued vpon. Fourthly, it perfecteth the birth of sinne, vrging a man to adde sinne vnto sinne, vntill he come to a custome, which is a ripenes and perfection in sinning. Fiftly, it bringeth forth death, that is, euerlasting vengeance and destruction: in all which hee alludeth vnto the beginnings, proceedings and end of a man; who after he is past his full strength, decaieth againe and dieth: by these degrees the lusts of the heart rise vnto this raigne and regiment in the heart of euery wicked and naturall man, where grace ouercommeth not nature.

Thirdly, obserue the number of these lusts. After vngodly lusts.] Where he speaketh in the plurall number as of many: for originall concupiscence is the seede of all sinne in euery man: and looke how many sinnes there be in the world, so many lusts are there in the hearts of men: so as seeing there is no number of the euils in the world, euen so are the lusts of the heart innumerable. Therefore truly may wee conclude, that vngodly men haue their hearts filled with vngodly lusts.

The second point in the words is, that these vngodly men shall walke after their lusts; which is then done, when men first suffer their hearts to be withdrawne from God by euill lusts and motions: secondly, giue assent thereunto: thirdly, practise them: fourthly, keepe a course and trade in sinning, which is the perfection of it. Thus a man denieth the true God, and excludeth him out of his heart, and setteth vp the diuell, yea his owne lusts for his God, vnto which hee becommeth a slaue; so as this is no small sinne.

Doct. Hence note a difference betweene the regenerate and the reprobate: for if the childe of God be enticed and drawne away from God, he grieueth for it, and giueth not readie consent vnto the temptation. Secondly, if through frailtie he bee ouercarried to giue consent, yet it is not full consent; but he doth it against his will and purpose, for his purpose is not to sinne. Thirdly, if he put lusts in execution, he lieth not in them, he will not walke after them; but recouereth himselfe, because he is incorporated into Christ: he hath the roote of grace, which shall not vtterly die in him, the seede abideth in him, which at last shall sprout vp to repentance and amendement of life: and hereby may a man know whether he be the childe of God or no.

Vse. First, whereas all men good and bad haue innumerable lusts in them, we are to take notice of the vilenes and vncleannes of our nature, which is common to the good and bad, betweene whom there is no difference but by grace: our endeuour must bee to see more and more these lusts stirring and mouing themselues against God and man. Secondly, to mourne and bewaile them. Thirdly, to pray that God would burie them all in the death and graue of his Sonne, that they stand not vp in iudgement against vs; being euery of them sufficient to procure our eternall destruction.

Secondly, we must not suffer sinne to raigne in vs, for this is the part of an vngodly person: true it is that lusts will be in the heart whilest a man is in the flesh: but they must bee resisted, that they may not raigne and rule the heart. Quest. How shall we keepe vnder the lusts of the heart from raigning ouer vs? Ans. Seeing sinne raigneth in the minde by euill thoughts, our thoughts on the contrarie must bee framed according to the word, and ordered by the counsell thereof: according to the Apostles aduice, Phil. 4. 8. If any thing be honest, vertuous, of good report, we must thinke of these things. Colos. 3. 16. Let the word of God dwell plentiously in you. Again, lust raigneth in the memorie, by remembring vanities, wrongs, and wicked speeches and actions: wee must therfore remember our sinnes, the number and greatnes of them, the curse of the law against them, the day of our owne death, and the generall iudgement; the remembrance of which shall be able to keepe out, or at least to keepe vnder these vngodly lusts. Further, seeing it raigneth in the affections of pride, reuenge, hatred, &c. wee must learne the exhortation, Phil. 2. 5. Let the same minde be in you that was in Iesus Christ: that looke as Christ was most milde, meeke, humble, patient, full of loue towards God and man, so ought our vnruly affections to bee conformed vnto his. And lastly, seeing it raigneth in the Sinne will dwell in vs while we dwel in the flesh, but it may not raigne as a commander in vs.

bodie by idlenes, eaſe, ſleepe in exceſſe, which make the bodie an inſtrument of ſinne, wee muſt alwaies diligently inure our ſelues to the duties of our callings; vſing faſting, watching, and prayer: by which meanes well obſerued, the luſts in the heart may ſtill trouble and moleſt vs; but they ſhall not rule and raigne ouer vs.

Vſe. 3. If it be the propertie of a wicked man to follow after vngodly luſts, wee ought to purge our ſelues from all the luſts of the fleſh and ſpirit, 2. Cor. 7. 1. leſt theſe defile our bodies and ſoules in the powers and parts of them: to doe
Matth. 5. 8. which the better, remember that bleſſed are the pure in heart: ſecondly, to inure our ſelues vnto the feare of God, ſeeing the feare of God is cleane, Pſal. 19. that is, it clenſeth the heart, and breaketh the necke of all noyſome luſts.

Verſ. 19. Theſe are makers of ſects, fleſhly, not hauing the ſpirit.

THis verſe containeth the application of the former teſtimonie vnto the particular perſons whom it concerneth: ſetting downe who they be that are ſcorners and followers of their luſts: namely, ſcorners are they that make ſects, ſeparating themſelues from the people of God: and followers of their luſts be thoſe who are fleſhly, and without the ſpirit: which words being applied to theſe ſeducers, faſten two ſinnes more vpon them. The firſt whereof is, that they are makers of ſects. The ſecond, that they haue not the ſpirit. For the former, the word ſignifieth a ſingling and ſeparating of themſelues from the Church and people of God, and conſequently the making of ſects to themſelues: neither may this ſeeme ſtrange that there ſhould be ſuch perſons that make ſuch ſeparation; ſeeing it is the nature of euery ſinner to flie from the preſence of God, as Adam did: and Peter when he had ſeene a part of the glorie of Chriſt, bad him depart from him for he was a ſinner. The prodigal ſonne muſt haue his portion apart, and will not be perſwaded to liue with his father; and euery vngodly man withdraweth himſelfe vnto perdition, Heb. 10. 38.

Doct. Firſt, it is a great ſinne for a man to ſeparate himſelfe from the aſſemblies of Gods people: becauſe firſt it is a flying from God and his preſence, whoſe face euery one is commanded to ſeeke; ſeeing he preſenteth himſelfe in the Word and Sacraments, and whereſoeuer two or three are aſſembled in his name, &c. Secondly, it is a contempt of Gods ordinance, which whoſoeuer deſpiſeth, deſpiſeth God himſelfe. Thirdly, out of the Catholike Church is no ſaluation: the ſaying is true, Whoſoeuer will not haue the Church for his Mother, ſhall not haue God for his Father. Fourthly, the congregations of Gods people on earth are the ſuburbes and gates of the kingdome of heauen; whoſoeuer therefore ſhutteth the gates of this kingdome of grace againſt himſelfe here, ſhall neuer enter into the gates of the kingdome of glorie hereafter.

Vſe. Our dutie hence is to ioyne our ſelues to the aſſemblies of the faithfull, not forſaking the fellowſhip that we haue among our ſelues, Heb. 10. 25. but keeping the vnitie of the ſpirit in the bond of peace, Epheſ. 4. 3. being like minded one towards another, Rom. 15. 5. ſpeaking one thing as thoſe that are knit together in one minde and one iudgement, 1. Cor. 1. 10. And if we would ſeparate our ſelues, then let vs depart from the Atheiſts and Papiſts in their corrupt doctrines and wicked conuerſation. Secondly, ſuch are iuſtly reprehended who ſeldome come to heare the word, receiue the Sacraments, and to call vpon God in the congregation: for ſo much as they can they cut themſelues from the kingdome of God, in reiecting the meanes of their ſaluation. Ob. They alleage for themſelues that if they ſhould come, they ſhould heare but a weake man like themſelues ſpeak vnto them; and if Chriſt himſelfe or ſome Angell ſhould preach vnto them, they would heare willingly. Anſ. Lay aſide all diſputing, and yeeld vnto the wiſedome of God, whoſe ordinance it is that men ſhould be taught by men, and not otherwiſe. Ob. They ſay further that they haue the Bible, and the ſermons of the Prophets and Apoſtles at home, and none can make better ſermons than they: and againe, that they can get knowledge enough to ſaluation by themſelues: and ſome ſay they haue knowledge ſufficient and neede no more. Anſ. Firſt, Gods ordinance must be acknowledged, and reuerenced in the publike Ministerie, and in the middest of the assemblies: and priuate duties must giue place to publike. Secondly, the word is not only to be knowne but affected: now although knowledge may bee gained priuately; yet the affections must bee wrought and mooued in the publike Ministerie. Thirdly, those that know the most, know but in part; and the Ministerie is instituted, not onely to initiate and begin men, but to confirme them in grace, and leade them to perfection: for which end the Lord hath giuen Pastors and Doctors of the Church to teach men, vntill they come vnto a ripe age in Christ, which is not till death.

Now for the further cleering of this point, two questions are to be resolued. 1. Quest. Seeing it is a sinne for a man to seuer himselfe from the Church of God; where and what Church is that to which a man may for euer ioyne himselfe with a good conscience? Ans. That people which heare, beleeue, and obey the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles, are the true people and Church of God, vnto which a man may safely ioyne himselfe. Diuers notes there be, but the infallible notes of the true Church are, knowledge, faith, and obedience vnto that doctrine; these were the notes of the Primitiue Church next after Christ: Act. 2. 42. First, they continued in the Apostles doctrine. Secondly, in fellowship, wherein the duties of loue are comprehended. Thirdly, in breaking of bread, that is, the administration of Sacraments; for the celebration of the Supper is put for both. Fourthly, in prayer, that is, inuocation of God with thankesgiuing. In that Commission of the Apostles giuen for the gathering together of the Church of God, they are enioyned first to teach all Nations: that is, to make them Disciples, namely by the doctrine Propheticall and Apostolicall. Secondly, to baptise them, that is, to bring and admit them into the house of God. Thirdly, to teach them to performe all things which they were commanded. In which Commission two of these notes are expressed. Ephes. 2. 19. The Church is founded vpon the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles. Ioh. 8. 31. If ye abide in my word, ye are truly my Disciples. Ioh. 10. 27. My sheepe heare my voyce and follow me. Psal. 147. 19. He sheweth his lawes to Iacob, and his statutes to Israel, he dealeth not so with euery nation. Hence we note, that wee may not ioyne our selues with the Iewes or Turkes, who renounce the words of the Prophets and Apostles: neither yet with the Papists; for though in word and speech they holde this word, yet in deede and in the sense they corrupt it, euen in the foundation.

Mat. 28. 19.

The second question. But what if there be errors in the Church, or things amisse; may wee not then separate our selues? Ans. Things that may be amisse in the Church must be distinguished: for some faults concerne the matter of religion: some the manner: the former respecteth doctrine principally: the latter the manners of men. First, for things amisse in the manners of men wee may not separate; but with Lot haue our righteous hearts vexed, and grieued with the wicked conuersation of those among whom wee liue. The Scribes and Pharisies sitting in Moses chaire, teaching Moses his doctrine must bee heard, howsoeuer the corruptions of their manners be such as they may not bee imitated, Matth. 23. 1. Yet here obserue further, that although we may not separate our selues from such corrupt persons in the publike assemblies, yet in priuate conuersation wee may abstaine from them. 1. Cor. 5. 11. If any that is called a brother be a fornicator, or couetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, with such a one eate not: that is, eate not priuately. Secondly, if the Church erre in matter of religion, then must we consider whether the error be in a more weightie and substantiall point, or in matter of lesse importance. If it be in smaller points (the foundation being kept) wee may not separate our selues. 1. Cor. 3. 15. If any mans worke burne, he shall lose, but himselfe shall be safe, yet as if it were by fire. Now if the error of the Church bee in substance of doctrine, or in the foundation, then we must consider whether it erre of humane frailtie, or of obstinacie: if of frailtie we may not separate. The Church of Galatia was through frailtie quickly turned to another Gospell, and erred in the foundation, holding iustification by workes: yet

Whom we may not separate from in publike assemblies, wee neede not priuatly conuerse with.

Paul writeth vnto it as vnto a Church of God. So likewiſe the Church of Corinth erred grieuouſly, and ouerthrew the Article of the Reſurrection: and yet Paul behaued himſelfe accordingly vnto it. But if the Church erre in the ſubſtance of religion obſtinately, then with good conſcience ſeparation may be made. 1. Tim. 4. 5. If any man teach otherwiſe, and conſent not to the wholeſome doctrine, from ſuch ſeparate thy ſelfe. An example hereof we haue in Act. 19. 9. when Paul had preached in the Synagogue of the Iewes, and could not preuaile with them, but they began to blaſpheme and ſpeake euill of the Waies of God, then he withdrew himſelfe and ſeparated from them. 1. Chro. 11. 14. 16. when Ieroboam had ſet vp the two Calues to be worſhipped, many of the beſt diſpoſed Iewes departed from him and came to Rehoboam, and ioyned themſelues with Iudah and Ieruſalem in the true worſhip of the God of their Fathers. Whence wee ſee that no man may with good conſcience ſeparate himſelfe from the Church of England; ſeeing it teacheth, beleeueth, and obeyeth the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles.

Further, conſider the manner of the ſeparation of theſe wicked men: there be three ſorts of ſeparation: Firſt, by apoſtaſie, when a man falleth wholy from his religion, from the Church, and from common grace. Heb. 6. 4. It is impoſſible that they which were once enlightened, if they fall away, &c. Secondly, by hereſie, when men erre in the ſubſtance of doctrine and religion, and that of obſtinacie. Thirdly, by Schiſme; and that is when men hold the ſame faith and foundation, and yet diſagree and ſeparate in regard of order and ceremonie. Theſe ſeducers ſeparated themſelues by hereſies: their hereſies were theſe; firſt, that men being in Chriſt might liue as they liſt, and ſo they were Libertines. Secondly, that among the people of God there ought to be no ciuil Magiſtracie, and ſo they became alſo Anabaptiſts. Here obſerue that euen in the Apoſtles time and daies were many heretikes; among whom was Hymeneus and Philetus, 2. Tim. 2. 17. and many wolues entred euen in their daies which ſpared not the flocke. Which may ſerue to ſtabliſh our mindes againſt the Papiſts, who obiect that our religion is the foundation of al hereſies: as at the riſing of which many hereſies were reuiued: in ſo much as they call all our religion hereſie, and the profeſſors of it heretikes: by which reaſon they might as ſtrongly prooue, that the doctrine of the Apoſtles themſelues was hereſie, and that the Primitiue Church in the Apoſtles time was hereticall and no Church: for in the firſt hundred yeeres after Chriſt the Church ſwarmed with hereſies, ſowen by Sathans inſtruments, to the choaking of that holy doctrine which was ſowne by the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſors in the fielde of the Church: nay rather we conclude our religion to be Apoſtolicall, becauſe the ſame hereſies which aroſe vp in the Apoſtles times againſt their doctrine, now reuiued againe vpon the reuiuing of our religion.

The ſecond ſinne of theſe ſeducers in this verſe is, that they are fleſhly, or naturall men. For ſo it is explained in the laſt words [not hauing the ſpirit] wherin conſider two things: firſt, who is a naturall man: ſecondly, that it is a ſinne to be a naturall man, for it is noted as a maine ſinne in theſe ſeducers. Touching the former, a naturall man is he who liuing a naturall life is endued with a reaſonable ſoule, and is gouerned by nature, reaſon, and ſenſe onely; without grace or the ſpirit of God: which may appeare firſt by the word naturall; which ſignifieth ſuch a man, as in whom the beſt thing is nature, and in whom there is nothing more excellent than his reaſonable ſoule, though corrupted. Secondly, by the expoſition, or rather oppoſition in the words: wherein it is oppoſed vnto the ſpirit, who is wanting vnto ſuch a one to leade him in the way of a heauenly life. Further, that yet wee may know this matter the better, there be three things to be found in a naturall man: 1. He hath a bodie and ſoule vnited together in one perſon. 2. In his ſoule he hath excellent powers and faculties, as will, vnderſtanding, affections. 3. Hee hath all the ornaments of man, yet ſo as without grace: ſuch as are, ſtrength of bodie and minde, memorie, knowledge of Arts and Sciences, ciuill policie and vertues, as Iuſtice, Prudence, Temperance, diſcretion to diſcerne what is meete to bee done, what not: theſe are ornaments incident to corrupt nature, ſeruing not to aboliſh, but to reſtraine and bridle corruption, and containe men in order, for the preſeruation of humane ſocietie. Now he that hath theſe three and nothing elſe, is but a meere naturall man.

The ſecond point is: that it is a ſin to be a naturall man. Here it may bee aſked, how it commeth to paſſe that a naturall man, becauſe he is a naturall man offendeth God? Anſ. There bee two things in euery naturall man to bee diſtinguiſhed: firſt, there is nature: ſecondly, the corruption of nature: the former is from God: the latter from mans fall: which two may be indeede diſtinguiſhed, but cannot now be ſeparated: the one is not the other; but the one is not without the other; this corruption is that ſinne which preſſeth vs down, and hangeth ſo faſt on, Heb. 12. 1. which hath corrupted the whole mā, ſo as the whole frame of man, that is, his whole diſpoſition and inclination is corrupted and euill from his youth, Geneſ. 8. 21. his wiſedome is enmitie to God, that is, euen the beſt thing that is, or can be in the fleſh, is hateful to God, Rom. 8. 5. himſelfe is dead in ſinnes and treſpaſſes, Epheſ. 2. 1. hauing no more abilitie to mooue to any thing truly good, than hath a dead man to beſtirre himſelf in and about the actions of life.

For the cleerer beholding of this corruption of mans nature, marke that there bee two degrees of it: the former whereof is a want of that goodnes and righteouſnes which at firſt was, and now ought to be found in our nature. The latter is a proneneſſe and diſpoſition vnto all euill, which carrieth the heart on euery occaſion thereunto: this corruption muſt bee conceiued as an ocean ſea, ſending out into euery channell and veine of the ſoule, and whole man, ſtreames and floods of wickednes: for looke into the principall powers of the ſoule, ye ſhall neede to goe no further for the finding of this truth. For firſt, in the minde is ſuch an impotencie, as whereby it is vnable to thinke or approoue of any thing that is truly good 2. Corin. 3. 5. Wee are not ſufficient of our ſelues to thinke of any good, but all our ſufficiencie is of God. 1. Cor. 2. 15. The naturall mā perceiueth not the things of God; which is moſt manifeſt thus: firſt, hee knoweth not God himſelfe aright; for although hee may know God as an infinite and eternall being, or in ſome other attribute, yet he cannot know him as a father to himſelfe. Secondly, hee knoweth not, neither conceiueth the corruption of his owne nature, nor his ſinnes originall and actuall in the ſtaine and danger of them. Thirdly, he conceiueth not of the remedie of ſinne, the death of Chriſt: but accounteth it fooliſhnes that life ſhould be brought out of death. Secondly, as his mind is blind, ſo a naturall mans will is rebellious, and is not ſubiect vnto the will of God, neither indeed can be. Ioh. 6. 44. No man can come to Chriſt, vnleſſe the Father draw him: inſinuating our withdrawing of our ſelues, and reſiſtance of his call, vntill he turne vs & make our wils, of vnwilling, willing wils to will that which is truly good: whēce the Apoſtle ſaith, that to will, namely that which is truly good, is not of our ſelues, it is the gift of God. Now hence wee may reſolue that queſtion: why it is a ſinne to bee a naturall man? not becauſe a man hath nature in him: but becauſe his whole nature is tainted with originall ſinne.

Ob. The naturall man may pleade that he cannot helpe it; hee was borne ſinfull: why then ſhould he be blamed? Anſ. Rom. 5. 12. In Adam we all ſinned; for when he eat the forbidden fruit, we euen eat it in him, & are no leſſe blameworthie than he was. Ob. But it will be ſaid; it is no reaſon that we ſhould bee ſaid to ſin in him, ſeeing then we were not? Anſ. Adam was a publike perſon repreſenting all mankinde, and euery particular perſon deſcēding from him; and therefore what he did, all and euery man did in him: Euen as a Burgeſſe in the Parliament giuing his voyce and aſſent, all the countrie or ſhire is ſaid to giue their voices, though they be abſent, and not preſent otherwiſe than in his perſon. God then giuing a prohibition vnto Adam, hee gaue it vnto all vs in him; and threatning him he threatned vs and all mankinde: this onely is the difference that hee being the roote or ſtocke, and wee the branches ariſing from him, hee ſinned actually, and we by relation and imputation. If then the naturall man ſtill pleade hee was no cauſe but was borne ſo, the anſwere is cleere, that himſelfe is a cauſe, although not in himſelfe, yet in Adam before he was borne he procured that he ſhould be borne a naturall man.

Secondly, it may be pleaded againe: If I be a naturall man, I am Gods creature as I am; why then ſhould I be blamed? Anſ. The former diſtinction betweene nature and corruption of nature muſt be here retained: for by the former the naturall man is Gods creature, and not in reſpect of the corruption of nature: for this he created not, as the other, but ſuffred it to paſſe by generation from man to man, for the execution of the puniſhment of the firſt ſinne.

Queſt. Why did not God ſtay this corruption in Adams perſon? Anſ. God could haue done it; why he did it not, the reaſon is neither knowne, nor to be enquired; a ſecret it is, but yet a iuſt iudgement of God ſilently to bee with reuerence reſted in, and not with curioſitie to be ſearched out.

Vſe. Firſt, ſome may hence gather, if a man be iuſtly blamed for being only a naturall man, and not hauing the ſpirit of God; then euery one hath power to receiue the ſpirit of God? Anſ. This is no good reaſon, but is all one, as if becauſe a bankrout is blamed for not diſcharging his debts to his creditors; another man ſhould conclude that ſurely he is therefore able to pay them. But theſe wicked men were blamed here, firſt, becauſe they profeſſed Chriſt, but yet had not his ſpirit: ſecondly, becauſe that in Adam they were the cauſes that they were borne without the ſpirit of God, and ſo made themſelues vnfit to receiue him.

Secondly, if naturall men bee iuſtly condemned, much more thoſe that are worſe than they, as Atheiſts, prophane perſons, thoſe which contemne the aſſemblies, and neglect the meanes of their ſaluation, and yet looke for ſaluation as wel as others. The Gentiles who were without the law, doe the things of the law by nature, Rom. 2. 24. and yet many that profeſſe the name of Chriſt, and liue vnder the Goſpell, goe not ſo farre as thoſe naturall men in doing the things of the law: ſo as euen thoſe Heathens and naturall men ſhall riſe vp in iudgement, and condemne many a profeſſor of Chriſt; of whom euen many come ſhort of the Diuell himſelfe, who beleeueth and trembleth; and yet not a few profeſſors neither know what the Diuell beleeues; neither through hardnes of heart can tremble at the iudgements of God as he can doe.

Thirdly, thoſe come farre ſhort that think themſelues in ſtate good enough, becauſe they liue ciuilly and deale iuſtly and neighbourly, as they ſay: for the naturall man can doe this, and yet ſhall be condemned: no plea ſhall ſtand at the great day of the Lord, but that which aſſureth of the pardon of ſinne ſealed vp with the blood of Chriſt. Let a mans outward and ciuill righteouſnes be neuer ſo great, yea if it could be equall to the righteouſnes of the Scribes and Phariſies, which for outward appearance was without all exception; yet if hee bring not a righteouſnes exceeding that, he can neuer be ſaued.

Fourthly, in that the naturall man is blamed for being a naturall man, this ouerthroweth all merits of congruitie, which the Papiſts boaſt of; becauſe a mans perſon not being accepted before God, all his works are ſinnes: the worke neuer pleaſeth God till the worker firſt pleaſe him.

Fifthly, euery profeſſor of Chriſt muſt ſtrip the naturall man, and become a ſpirituall perſon, that is, ſuch as the ſpirit of God dwelleth in: for firſt, as the Father worketh our ſaluation, by giuing Chriſt and his merits; ſo muſt the holie Ghoſt by applying the ſame vnto vs, elſe can we looke for no ſaluation. Secondly, as the ſoule giueth life to the bodie, which elſe were dead; ſo the ſpirit of God is the ſoule of our ſoules, and quickneth them with new life being dead in ſinne. Thirdly, wee can neuer know that wee are in Chriſt, or belong vnto him, but by the preſence of the ſpirit in our hearts: 1. Ioh. 3. 24. Hereby we know that he abideth in vs, euen by the ſpirit that he hath giuen vs.

Queſt. But how ſhall a man know whether hee hath the ſpirit or no? Anſ. Let him examine himſelfe, firſt, whether he inwardly loue and feare God in his word of promiſe and threatning: ſecondly, whether he ſubiect his heart and life vnto him: thirdly, whether his heart be continually lift vp in inuocation and thankſgiuing. All theſe are the workes of the ſpirit of God: and they

which be of the spirit thus fauour and affect the things of the spirit, Rom. 8. Quest. But I feare I haue not the spirit, how shall I obtaine it? Ans. By vsing the meanes of reading the Word, meditation, and prayer especially. Luk. 11. 13. Your heauenly father giueth the holy Ghost to them that desire him. Psal. 143. 5. 6. I meditate in all thy workes; and stretch foorth my hands vnto thee.

Vers. 20. But ye beloued, edifie your selues in your most holie faith: praying in the holy Ghost.

IN this verse vnto the end of the 23. are set downe some meanes whereby all beleeuers may be fitted to the maintenance of the faith and true religion, vnto the which the Apostle hath in the former part of the Epistle perswaded. These meanes are contained in fiue rules here prescribed: first, concerning Faith: secondly, Loue: thirdly, Hope: fourthly, Meekenes: fifthly, Christian seueritie: the first of which is contained in this twentith verse, which is, that they should build themselues vpon their faith; which is not barely propounded but inforced and vrged: first, by a motiue in this word, most holy faith:] secondly, by the meanes of it, which is prayer; praying in the holy Ghost.] In the rule note two things: first, that faith is a foundation: secondly, that the dutie of beleeuers is to build vp themselues vpon this foundation. Concerning the former: first it may be demanded what is here meant by faith? Ans. Here by faith is not so much meant the gift of faith, as the matter of it, namely the doctrine of faith and religion compriſed in the writings of the Prophets and Apostles; in which sense it is said, that the Ephesians were built vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apostles, that is, vpon their doctrine, Ephes. 2. The same was the rocke confessed by Peter, vpon which Christ promised to build his Church; and yet in the second place we must not exclude the gift it selfe: for although the doctrine be a foundation in it selfe, yet it is not so to vs, vnlesse we beleeue it, and applie it to our selues by this gift. If any man aske what doctrine is this? I answer, the summe of it may be reduced to three heads: the first whereof concerneth mans miserie by his sinne, originall and actuall: as also the dangerous fruits thereof. The second, the redemption of man from this miserie, and his freedome by Christ. The third, the thankefulnes which man oweth for this deliuerance, and ought to testifie and expresse in newnes of life.

Hence learne first what is the infallible marke of the true Church, whereby it may be discerned from the false and Apostaticall Church, and that is the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles; for this being the very foundation of the Church, where it is, there the Church must needes bee: and this note of it selfe is sufficient to point out the true Church whersoeuer. Secondly, seeing faith is the foundation of the Church, and not the Church the foundation of faith, beware hence of a damnable doctrine of the Popish Church, which teacheth that there can be no certainty of the points of religion, no nor of the Scriptures themselues, but onely by the iudgement of the present Church of Rome, and that Church must giue what sense soeuer she pleaseth to the Scriptures, else hath it none: wherein they play the part of prepostorous builders, laying the foundation in the top of the building. Thirdly, it may be demaunded how any doctrine becommeth a foundation vnto the saluation of men? Answ. Properly to speake, God and Christ is our foundation and rock, Psal. 18. 1. but because God reueileth himselfe and the meanes of our saluation in the word, it becommeth hence a foundation: as also secondly, because Christ, who is the proper foundation, is the summe of the doctrine therein contained.

Papists foolish builders, laying the foundation on the top of the house.

Vse. First, let no creature draw vs from Christ, for then wee are drawne from our foundation. Secondly, the affections of our heart towards Christ must exceed all affections of any thing besides: our loue, feare, hope, confidence and trust, must settle themselues vpon him as vpon a foundation.

The second thing in this first rule is the dutie of euery beleeuer, which is to build himselfe vpon his faith; which that a man may doe fixe things are required: first, hee must haue in his heart a deepe sense and feeling of his miserie in such sort, as not finding in himselfe whereon to be founded, hee may seele himhimſelfe to be founded vpon God and Chriſt: euen as in laying ſtrong and ſure foundations, men digge deepe; and if they finde ſure ground proceede on in their purpoſe: So this wiſe builder laieth his foundation on a rocke, Luk. 6.48. Secondly, hee muſt haue knowledge of this doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles; for vnleſſe it bee knowne it can bee no foundation. Thirdly, a holie memorie to lay vp the word of God in their heart as in a ſtorehouſe: for he that remembreth not the doctrine of ſaluation, can neuer build vpon it. Fourthly, faith, whereby not only we beleeue the truth of it, but applie it vnto our ſelues; this knitteth vs vnto the foundation, without which the word ſhall bee no more profitable vnto vs than the Iewes, who mingled it not with faith, Heb. 4.2. for this only applieth it vnto our hearts, Iam. 1.21. Fifthly, the doctrine beleeued and applied muſt take a deepe rooting in the heart, it muſt deſcend into the affections, and there be imbraced vntill it hath wrought out an experience of the ſweet comfort of it. Sixthly, there muſt be an vnfained obedience vnto the whole word of God: Not euery one that ſaith, Lord, Lord: but he that doth the will of my Father, Matth. 7. 21. This man buildeth wiſely vpon the rocke. Queſt. But what is that which muſt be done of vs? Anſ. Whatſoeuer is to bee done of vs may be reduced to three heads: firſt, faith, whereby the beleeuer truly reſteth himſelfe vpon God; cleaueth vnto Chriſt for the pardon of ſinne, and renounceth all other meanes in heauen and earth. Secondly, repentance, whereby he truly turneth from all ſinne vnto God. Thirdly, new obedience, whereby hee endeuoureth to obey God in all his Commandements.

Vſe. Firſt, here is reproued the carnall Proteſtant, who holdeth his religion but for forme and faſhion, or for feare of lawes, he is altogether without foundation, and in a pitifull condition: ſeeing when the great day of the Lord ſhall approach, whoſoeuer ſhall want Chriſt, their foundation ſhall fall before him. Secondly, we muſt neuer ſuffer our ſelues to be drawne from our faith and religion; nor loſe our hold of the doctrine of godlines, though wee ſhould ſuffer loſſe of lands, liuings, liberties, yea or life it ſelfe: if this bee once wreſted from vs, wee are fallen from the foundation, and haue loſt our hold of happines and life it ſelfe. Thirdly, wee may not take any reſt till we be builded vpon this foundation, it being the foundation and ground-worke of all our ſafetie and ſecuritie: for Chriſtian men are as houſes built vpon the ſea ſhore, who muſt looke for the waues and billowes of afflictions, one in the necke of another: euen as one ſurge in the ſea ouertaketh another; how ſhould they hold out when this raine falleth, theſe floods come, theſe winds blow and beate vpon their houſe, vnleſſe they be founded vpon this rocke? how elſe ſhould not their fall be great? but this ſure foundation eſtabliſheth the heart againſt all calamities of this preſent life, yea in the houre of death alſo, which otherwiſe is the downfall to hell, yea and in the day of iudgement the ſentence ſhall paſſe on their ſides, who are laid on this foundation: they ſhall be found worthie to ſtand before the Lambe, when the diuell and his angels, with all ſinners and ſinne it ſelfe ſhall be caſt into the bottomleſſe lake. Now as euery particular Chriſtian man is to be a practiſer of this dutie in his owne perſon, ſo alſo may it bee fitly applied to the ſtate of the whole land, which by Gods bleſſing hath had for many yeeres this foundation laid within it: through the which it hath been able to withſtand, yea and ſubdue many rebellions, treaſons, forces, and powers, intended againſt it; and beſides hath had ſecuritie and ſafetie, vnder Gods protection, with much peace and proſperitie. Would we now know the way to haue this peace and ſecuritie continued to vs and ours? the way is to continue and abide vpon this foundation, not looking backe to Poperie or ſuperſtition; but taking out the wholſome counſell of good King Iehoſhaphat: Put your truſt in the Lord and yee ſhall be aſſured; beleeue his Prophets and ye ſhall proſper. 2. Chro. 20. 20.

In this dutie of beleeuers marke further, firſt how the Apoſtle aſcribeth power to the beleeuer to build himſelfe: for although by nature men want this power (for the naturall man cannot of himſelfe ſo much as thinke one good thought) yet the regenerate whom the Lord by his ſpirit hath mooued, haue a power giuen them to mooue themſelues, ſelues, and build themſelues, that which was before to nature impoſſible, is made poſſible by grace.

ἐποικοδομεῖτε. Secondly, note further the force of the word, build vp | which requireth not onely a building, but a going on, and encreaſing in building: as if he had ſaid, Build vp your ſelues more and more. A dutie which neerely concernes men in theſe daies, wherein men decline to Atheiſme, and Poperie, (which alſo is but a painted Atheiſme) when men can cõtent themſelues to goe backe, and fall from their former loue, and are afraid to bee found either hot or cold. This diſeaſe of our daies hath this Apoſtle forwarned vs of in this Epiſtle, being one of the laſt farewels of the Apoſtles to the Church. Let vs then take notice of our declinings, and doe our firſt works, and goe on forward to perfection, building vp our ſelues daily, leſt it come to paſſe that the Lord come againſt vs, ſpue vs out of his mouth, remoue our Candleſticke with his other bleſſings, and leaue vs vnto our too late and vntimely repentance.

The motiue whereby this rule is inforced vpon the church, is drawne from a propertie of faith, which is that it is moſt holy. Wherein (to vnderſtand it) we will ſhew firſt what holines is properly: ſecondly, that faith is moſt holy. For the former, in this holineſſe there bee two things: firſt, a freedome from all fault and blame: ſecondly, an excellencie or perfection conſiſting of many diuine vertues. Holineſſe thus vnderſtood is two-fold: vncreated, or created. Vncreated is the holines of God, which is nothing elſe but the perfection of his properties and attributes: this holines is incomprehenſible, and infinite, yea the fountaine of all other holines. Created holines is a certaine gift of God, which by ſome proportion reſembleth this vncreated holines of God; the ſubiect whereof are Angels, man, and Gods ordinances, eſpecially the written word: ſo as this holines of faith is this deriued holines, and not the former.

Secondly, how is the doctrine of religion moſt holy? Anſ. Firſt, in it ſelfe, being without all fault and error, and hauing ſundrie excellencies, being full of diuine wiſedome and truth, and the onely inſtrument whereby Gods infinite wiſedome and goodnes is made knowne vnto vs. Secondly, in regard of the effect and operation, which is to make the creature, but eſpecially man holy: Ioh. 17. 17. Sanctifie them in thy truth, thy word is truth. It ſanctifieth men inſtrumentally, in that it maketh them reſemble God in many graces: by this Dauid became wiſer than his Teachers, Pſal. 129. and ſo reſembled God in wiſedome, Iam. 3. 17. This wiſedome which is frõ aboue (of which the word is the inſtrument) is pure, peaceable, eaſie to be intreated, full of mercie and good fruites, without iudging, and without hypocriſie. Thus wee ſee how it maketh men reſemble God in all theſe, yea and in all other vertues. Thirdly, it is moſt holy, becauſe it ſanctifieth all inferiour creatures to the vſe of man, ſo as hee may vſe them with good conſcience: 1. Tim. 4. 4. Euery creature of God is good, ſanctified by the word and prayer. Where (by the way) may be noted the ſuperſtition of the Romiſh Church, which halloweth Bread, Salt, Water, Palmes, &c. for the curing of diſeaſes, caſting out of diuels, & working wonders: which practiſe of theirs is nothing but the defiling and prophaning of the creatures, by ſuperſtitious prayer ſeeming to hallow them, yet without any word or warrant, either of promiſe or commandement: which is the principall inſtrument of ſanctifying the creatures vnto their lawfull ends and vſes.

Papiſts account the word ſuperfluous in ſanctifying the creatures.

Hence learne firſt, that the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles is from God; becauſe it is full of wiſedome, without any follie, full of truth, voide of all falſehood; as alſo moſt holy both in it ſelfe, and in operation and effect, and in the author, as proceeding from him who is the fountaine of all holines: it is not of men, neither needeth the euidence of men; by this propertie only (if it had no more) it carrieth with it, and containeth within it ſufficient euidence againſt the gates of hell, that it is from God, and holy as himſelfe is. Secondly, the word being moſt holy, it muſt dwel in our hearts plentifully, and our care muſt be that it may be written in the tables thereof, that it may bee an ingrafted word, bearing rule ouer our wils and affections, yea ouer our whole liues: for where it ruleth it ſanctifieth the whole man. Thirdly, the doctrine of true faith ſanctifieth vs; but as it is receiued, receiued, beleeued, and applied by faith and no otherwise, when it taketh place in vs then it sanctifieth vs: it is not the rehearsing of the articles of it, nor the knowledge of it, nor carrying about with vs the words of it that can worke grace, but the hiding of it and mingling it with faith in the heart: from which we gather that it is a foule error of the Papists, to teach that the Sacraments conferre grace, by the worke wrought, and that as the penne writeth by the hand of the writer, and that of it selfe, the hand mouing it; so the Sacraments of themselues sanctifie, being administred by the Minister: but this is erroneous, for the Word and the Sacraments are both of one nature, the Sacraments being none other but the word made visible: but the word read or vttered sanctifieth not by the worke done, but by being beleeued and applied by faith: therefore no more doe the Sacraments by being administred, but by apprehending Christ in them: grace must be conferred by the spirit of grace, and not by the vertue of any action in the Sacraments.

The last point in this first rule, is the meanes whereby beleeuers are to build vp themselues in their most holy faith, and that is prayer [praying in the holie Ghost.] Wherein euery member of the Church is put in minde of a principall dutie, namely, that whensoeuer wee feare, or foresee a falling, and defection frō the faith, by reason either of weakenes within, or persecution without, thē time it is to repaire vnto God by the prayer of faith, craving at his hands strength, and power not onely to bee preserued from reuolt, but also to bee confirmed in the faith and doctrine wherein we stand. The Apostle hauing
Eph.6.10. exhorted the Ephesians to stand fast and be strong in the Lord, and hauing prescribed some meanes tending to that purpose; in the 18. verse hee concludeth the principall of the rest to bee prayer; praying alwaies with all prayer and supplication in the spirit: and that it is so, appeareth by two reasons: first, by prayer faith is exercised, yea and increased, according to the increase whereof, the other graces of zeale, hope, patiēce, and constancie are likewise confirmed and animated. Secondly, faithfull prayer hath a faithfull promise made vnto it, Aske and ye shall haue, seeke and yee shall finde, knocke and it shall be opened vnto you: these promises we must lay hold vpon and applie vnto our selues, for the stirring vp of continuall prayer, and strengthening of grace, especiallie in time of temptatiō, and in sense of frailtie, and then God will be good in hearing and helping, as his promise is.

Now in this meanes obserue the manner of making prayer in these words, In the holy Ghost, which are added for foure causes: first, to giue vs to vnderstand that although a man be regenerate, yet he cannot pray as he ought, vnlesse hee be still mooued, helped, and stirred by the holy Ghost. God giueth sundrie graces in the conuersion of a sinner: first, a preuenting grace, which yet is not at all effectuall, vnlesse it be seconded and helped with a supplie of a second grace: for that is true euen of the regenerate, Without me yee can doe nothing, Ioh. 15. God giueth first the will, and then the deede, Phil. 2. 13. yea and the continuance of the doing of that which is truly good: Hee that hath begun the good worke, will performe or finish it, chap. 1. 6. Here let grace be euery way grace, lest it be no grace at all; let God who is all in all haue all the glorie of all; as for the doctrine of mans merit and humane satisfaction, which robbeth God, to enrich man, it here falleth to the ground. The second is, because prayer is a singular and especiall worke of the holy Ghost in vs; who stirreth vp in vs these grones and sighes which we cannot expresse, Rom. 8. and maketh vs crie Abba Father, Zach. 12. 10. this spirit of grace and compassion is promised to bee powred out vpon the house of Dauid and inhabitants of Ierusalem: and from hence a man may examine and finde whether he be the childe of God or no; for if he haue the spirit of God he is his, and if he haue these holy motions and desires to pray, and can send out these cries vnto God vnfainedly, he hath the presence of the Spirit; and he that hath not this spirit in these blessed fruites of it, is none of his. Thirdly, these words are added, to teach vs that when wee pray, wee must doe it our hearts; for where the spirit of God dwelleth, thēce must prayer proceed, but his abode is in the heart, and therefore prayer (that God many acknowledge it to proceed from from the spirit) must bee hartie: and so of all other spirituall duties: Colloss. 3. singing with grace in your hearts: Rom. 1. whom I serue in my spirit: where the Apostle expresseth a reason why prayer should proceed from the heart, because prayer is of the same nature with faith and the spirituall worship of God, yea indeede is a part of it answerable vnto God himselfe who is a spirit; but all these are seated in the heart, and spirit, and consequently prayer it selfe ought so to be: neither is it the outward action or words which is simply the worship of God, but so farre as they consent and proceed from the heart. Which teacheth vs that whatsoeuer religious dutie wee are to turne our selues vnto, wee are first of all therein to approoue our hearts vnto God. Fourthly, that there may bee a distinction made betweene the true beleeuer and the hypocrite and carnall man. The hypocrite he prayeth outwardly for forme and fashion; the naturall man in affliction prayeth of compulsion, as a man that is racked and tormented, without any loue of God at all; both of them without any inward sense, or rectified disposition of the heart: but the beleeuer hee prayeth in the heart and in faith, the spirit of God disposing his heart aright vnto prayer.

Quest. How doth the holy Ghost direct the heart? Answ. By fiue waies or meanes: first, by illumination, whereby hee reueileth God to man, as also his owne estate; both of them in part. Secondly, by conuersion, whereby hee turneth the heart vnto God once made knowne. Thirdly, by direction, whereby hee directeth the heart to deale as with God himselfe, taking it from outward meanes. Fourthly, by feruent and constant desires for things spirituall or temporall. Fifthly, by faith, whereby we can rest on God for the accomplishment of the things wee haue heartily desired.

Quest. Whether may we not pray to the holy Ghost, seeing here it is said, praying in or by the holy Ghost? Ans. We may not onely pray in or by him, but vnto him: for although wee haue no particular example hereof in the Scripture, yet wee haue sufficient warrant: for the three persons being vndiuided in nature, must be also vndiuided in worship, and one being worshipped, all must be worshipped. Secondly, wee are baptized into the name of the holie Ghost, as well as of the Father and Son, and therefore hee is to be prayed vnto, euen as they are. Ob. But wee are not commanded to pray any where by the Father or Sonne, as here by the holie Ghost, which argueth that the holie Ghost is not the author of our prayers, as they are. Answ. The Apostle here would haue vs obserue an order in the working of the Trinitie, for all the three persons are authors of our prayers; the Father and Sonne make vs to pray, but by the holy Ghost; the holy Ghost maketh vs pray, but more immediatly, for he is the immediate author of our prayers: which teacheth that when we pray, it is not of our selues, but from the spirit which stirreth and sendeth vp heauenly requests for vs: herein then wee must renounce our selues, magnifie the grace of God within vs, and shew our selues thankfull by entertaining carefully such holie motions of this most holie Spirit of God.

Vers. 21. And keepe your selues in the loue of God, looking for the mercie of our Lord Iesus Christ vnto eternall life.

THese words containe the second rule of the Apostle tending to the preseruation of faith, and true religion concerning loue, and it is indeede of speciall vse, and direction for the framing of our liues: Christ calleth the loue of God and men the summe of the whole law: Paul calleth it the end of the Commandements. This caused Paul to keep faith & good conscience: 2. Cor. 5. 14. The loue of Christ constraineth vs. Now for the better informing of our vnderstandings, and our furtherance in obseruing this rule, fiue things are to be considered: first, what is meant by the loue of God? Ans. Wee are to vnderstand by the loue of God a diuine vertue in the hearts of the beleeuers, whereby they loue God and Christ, properly and simply for himselfe, rest in him, and cleaue vnto him as the most absolute good: for by Gods loue in this place is not meant that loue whereby God loueth man, but whereby man loueth God. Quest. Why doth the Apostle here omit the loue of man? Ans. Because the loue of man to man is included cluded and to bee vnderstood in the other as a fruit necessarily flowing from it: for first, whē a man loueth his neighbour, herein after a sort he loueth God: for then is God loued not onely when our affection of loue is directed vnto himselfe, but also when his ordinances, his creatures, image, and other things pertaining vnto him are loued. Secondly, the Apostle Paul calleth the loue of the neighbour the fulfilling of the law; Gal. 5. 14. which cannot be vnlesse we include also therein the loue of God, or rather it within Gods loue, and ioyne them both together. Now if the loue of man be the fulfilling of the law, how much more is the loue of God, which by the same reason must include the other? Thirdly, it is a true rule in Diuinitie, that the first Commandement must bee included and practised in all the nine following, as being the foundatiō of them all. Now the maine dutie of the first Commandement is the loue of God, which must goe with the practise of all the other, so as al the duties of the other Cōmandements are included in ỹ same.

The loue of God groweth not naturally in our owne grounds.

The second point is, whether this loue of God bee in man by nature, or giuen by grace? Ans. It is not from nature, but a gift of grace following faith and iustification. Ioh. 14. 14. If yee loue me, yee will keepe my commandements; both which proceed from one beginning: as no man then can by nature keepe the Commandements, so no man can by nature loue God aright. Rom. 8. 5. The wisedome of the flesh (that is mans best things, his best thoughts and affections) is enmitie to God, therefore can there be no true loue of God in nature. 1. Tim. 1. 5. The end of the commandement is loue out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience and faith vnfained. Againe, wee must first beleeue that wee are loued of God, before wee can loue him. 1. Epist. Ioh. 4. We loue him, because he loued vs first. It will bee obiected here, Luk. 7. 47. Many sinnes are forgiuen her, for she loued much: where it seemeth that loue is the cause of forgiuenes of sinnes. Ans. I answere, this word (for) doth not signifie here a cause, but a reason drawne from the signe, as it is also elsewhere vsed; this then is the sense, many sinnes are forgiuen her, and hereby ye shall know it, because or in that she loued much.

Note hence first that doctrine of the Church of Rome to bee false, whereby they teach that before iustificatiō there must be a disposition and aptitude in a man thereunto, standing in a feare of hell, loue of God, &c. for by this doctrine ỹ loue of God in man should go before iustification, which is a fruit and follower thereof. Secondly, that is as false, that loue is the soule and life of faith, for though in time they be both together, yet in the order of nature loue followeth after faith, & therfore cannot be the forme and soule thereof. Thirdly, it hath bin the opinion of some, that faith apprehendeth Christ by loue, and not by it self; but this is also erroneous: for loue in order followeth apprehension of Christ, and therefore Christ is not apprehended by loue. First we beleeue, and being knit vnto Christ by faith, then our hearts are knit vnto God by loue.

The third point is, what is the measure of loue whereby we must loue God and man. Ans. According to the two distinct parts of the word of God, are prescribed two distinct measures of loue. The measure of the law is to loue God without measure, for it requireth that wee loue God with all the powers of our bodies and soules, and with all the strength of all these powers, Luk. 10. 27. This measure is not now in our power to performe, no not although wee bee borne anew: for being still flesh in part, some of the powers of our strength are withdrawne from the loue of God. The Gospell is a qualification of the law, and moderateth the rigour thereof; it freeth a man not frō louing God, but exacteth not this loue in the highest measure and degree, but accepteth such a measure as standeth in 3. things: first, in beginning truly to loue God: secondly, in the daily increase in this loue: thirdly, in being constant in the same vnto the end: this measure the Lord accepteth for perfect loue, in those that bee in Christ, in whom the imperfection is couered. Deut. 30. 6. The Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart, that thou maist loue the Lord thy God, with all thine heart, and all thy soule, that is as if the Lord had said, I will ingraft the true loue of my selfe in your hearts which you shall increase in, and constantly proceede in the same, and then then I will account and accept of it, for the full measure of loue that my law requireth: which distinction is the rather to bee considered, because the Papists teach, that the loue which the Lord requireth of Christians, is the same for substance and measure which the law prescribeth: and for the perfection of our loue, they say a man may doe more than the law bindeth him vnto; as if he gaue all his goods to the poore, it is more than euer God in his law hath commanded: and if wee loue God aboue all creatures (which they say a man may doe though imperfectly) it is the loue which the law prescribeth. But all this is most false, and so the Apostle Galath.3.10. concludeth it, as many as are vnder the workes of the law are accursed. If all men bee condemned by the law, then is no man able to performe the loue and duties which it requireth: but he taketh the former for granted, for else his argument could not hold; and therefore that none can performe the loue which the law enioyneth is true. Secondly, the common opinion of men is, that they euer loued God with all their heart, and it is pitie hee should liue that doth not so: but it is a meere delusion, for if it were so, what needed any qualification or moderation of the law by the Gospell?

Papists are none of them that can confesse that they are vnprofitable when they haue done all they can.

The fourth point is, wherein standeth the loue of God? Ans. 1.Epist.Ioh.5.3. This is the loue of God, that ye keepe his Commandements. Ioh.14.13. He that keepeth my Commandements is he that loueth me: the reason whereof is this, he that loueth God, loueth his word, and he that loueth his word will bewray his loue in yeelding answerable obedience thereunto; and in one word this keeping of the Commandements standeth in these three things: first, in faith, for it must bee the worke of a true beleeuer: secondly, in conuersion vnto God: thirdly, in new obedience: which sheweth many a man how miserably he hath been heretofore deluded by Satan: for euery man professeth and pretendeth the keeping of the Commandements, and yet the most are so farre from doing them that they know them not, neither care to know them.

The fifth point is, how a man should preserue in him the loue of God and of man? Ans. First, the meanes whereby man may preserue himselfe in the loue of God is two-fold: first, euery one must labour daily to haue his heart setled in the sense of Gods loue towards himselfe: for the more he shall feele Gods loue confirmed vnto him, the more shall his loue bee inflamed and increased towards God againe; euen as the more wee feele the heate of the Sunne, the warmer wee are. Secondly, wee must keepe a daily obseruation of Gods blessings spirituall and temporall, which is a speciall meanes not onely to confirme and augment our loue, but preserue it constant to the end. Psalm.18.1. I will loue thee dearely, O Lord. Why what made Dauid thus resolue himselfe? the reason is rendred in the next words; The Lorde is my rocke, my fortresse, my strength, and hee that deliuereth mee. Secondly, men must vse the meanes whereby they may preserue their loue to men; and these are of two sorts, for some stand in meditation, others in practise. The meditations are foure. The first is the consideration of the spirituall and neere coniunction of all those that are true beleeuers, of which number wee professe our selues all to be, who haue all one Father, God: one Mother, the heauenly Ierusalem the Catholike Church; all begotten of the immortall seede, the word of God: all liue by one faith in Christ, and all are heires of eternall life and glorie. This was Pauls motiue perswading him hereto: Ephes.4.3.4. There is one Lord, one faith, one baptisme, one God and Father of all: see Phil.2.1.2. The second meditation is, that the duties of loue which man sheweth to man, especially the faithfull, God accepteth as done to himselfe; so saith the Wiseman: He that giueth to the poore, lendeth vnto the Lord. And Matth.25. When I was hungrie, ye fed me, &c. namely in my members vpon earth. The third meditation is the consideration of that curse, which is due to them that neglect duties of loue to man when occasion is offered: Matth.25. Depart ye cursed, I was hungrie, ye fed me not: to auoide this curse, we must embrace the Apostles counsell, to walke in loue. The fourth is, to consider that the loue of man to man is a grace of God, which leadeth a man by the hand to the first degree of happi-

pines: 1.Ioh.4.16. He that dwelleth in loue, dwelleth in God, and God in him; that is, hee hath entred the firſt degree of happines, for hee hath fellowſhip with God: and verſe 12. If wee loue one another, Gods loue is perfect in vs. Now as nature it ſelfe can tell vs a happines is to be ſought for; ſo let this grace leade vs to the degrees and beginnings of it.

The ſecond ſort of means ſtād in practiſe; and the rules of practiſe be ſixe. The firſt is the practiſe of the law of nature, being the ſumme of the Law and the Prophets, by Chriſts own teſtimonie: Whatſoeuer ye would that men ſhould doe vnto you, doe you the ſame vnto them. The meaning of which golden rule is this: Looke what we would haue other men to think, ſpeake, and do to vs, that muſt we thinke, ſpeake, and doe vnto them, and no worſe: and on the contrarie, conſider what we would not that men ſhould thinke, ſpeake, or doe vnto vs, that wee muſt abſtaine to ſpeake, or thinke, or doe vnto them. The practiſe whereof would cut off many wrongs, contentions, fraudes, and iniuries both in word and deed.

The ſecond rule of practiſe is in Gal. 5.13. Doe ſeruice one to another by loue: that is, let euery man in his place and calling become ſeruant to another, and ſo preſerue loue by the duties of loue. The reaſon hereof is, becauſe God (although he might if he had pleaſed preſerued man without man) would haue man preſerued by man, and that euery man ſhould be his inſtrument for euery mans good in regard both of bodie and ſoule. For which end he hath furniſhed men with ſeuerall artes, ſciences, trades, and callings, that one man might ſtand in need of the help of another. Secondly, we are placed in the world that here we might ſerue God indeed, not in ſpeculation onely, but alſo in our whole practiſe in our ſtandings and callings, he will be ſerued of vs in our ſeruing of man, for theſe two muſt goe together, and as it were hand in hand, the ſeruice of God and the ſeruice of man. Whoſoeuer therefore imploy their callings principally for the purchaſing of their profits, pleaſures, honours, and not for the good of men, they abuſe their callings, prophane their liues, and miſtake the proper end of them, as though they were borne onely to liue vnto themſelues and ſerue themſelues, and neither God nor man beſides: from which too common a practiſe hath that diuelliſh ſpeech ſprung, and by Satan put into the mouthes of many men: Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all. A ſpeech well beſeeming thoſe who are at open enmitie with the duties of true loue.

God will be ſerued of vs in our ſeruing of man.

The third rule is in Phil.4.5. Let your moderate minde bee knowne vnto all men. Wherein is commended that meeknes of minde, whereby wee can with moderation and equitie beare with men for the preſeruation of loue: ſee Phil. 2.3. This moderation ſtandeth in foure actions: firſt, in bearing with defects and infirmities of nature, as haſtines, frowardnes, deſire of praiſe, ſlownes, and ſuch weakeneſſes, it is the part and propertie of an equall minde, not to be ſeuere, or haſtie againſt theſe, but rather to paſſe by them, as Salomon ſaith: It is the glorie of a man to paſſe by an infirmitie. Secondly, in couering many, yea a multitude of ſinnes: yea and if a man be called to reueale and diſcouer them by way of teſtimonie, it cauſeth a man not to aggrauate the crime, but equally to ſpeake euen as the thing is. Thirdly, in conſtruing mens meanings, words, and actions (if it be poſſible) in the better part, euen ſo farre as the word of God giueth vs libertie: for it is a fruite of malice to miſconſter men, to make an offence where it is not giuen, or not to bee taken, and that is ſo long as the wickedneſſe is not apparant. Fourthly, in reſtoring him that is fallen into a fault, by the ſpirit of meeknes, curteſie, and humanitie: euen as a Surgeon dealeth with a broken arme or legge, not with roughnes, or anger, but with mildnes, yea and pitie towards the offender, ſo ſetting him as it were in ioynt againe.

The fourth rule is in Rom.12.10. Be affectioned one towards another with brotherly loue. How may that bee done? Anſw. In the next words, in giuing honour goe one before another, not in taking honour as our nature is; but in preferring others before our ſelues: and here wee muſt not conceiue of this honor as a meere ceremonie, ſtanding in ſome outward geſture; but it is a reuerent opinion conceiued inwardly in the the heart, whereby euery man thinketh better of another than of himselfe, and accordingly yeelds him more honour. But some will say here, this is hard to doe, to esteeme of euery man better than our selues, and how may we attaine vnto it? Ans. Whosoeuer iudgeth this so hard a lesson, let him enter into the serious examination of his owne heart, without partialitie, let him looke narrowly into himselfe, and hee shall espie such a bodie of sinne for measure and manner, as he cannot finde in any man besides; so as in the true sense of his estate he can neuer abase any man so farre as he can himselfe, whereby he shall come to iudge euery man worthie to bee preferred and honoured before himselfe.

The fifth rule is in Ephes. 4.26. Let not the Sunne set vpon your wrath. A very necessarie rule; for seeing we be but men, we cannot be without many sinfull motions, and especially of reuenge vpon occasion: but here we are counselled forthwith to stay and represse them, yea and to break them vtterly off: that although anger, wrath, and reuengefull thoughts will arise vp in our hearts, yet we must extinguish them, and not suffer them to continue with vs, no not for the space of a day. The same Christ himselfe hath taught, Mar. 11.25. When ye stand to pray, forgiue, if ye haue any thing against any man. So often then as we are to pray (which is at the least daily) so often are we to forgiue iniuries offered to vs, for we pray to be forgiuen as our selues doe forgiue others: men content themselues to carry their wrath a whole yeere together, and if they forgiue once a yeere at Easter, or at the receiuing of the Sacrament once a quarter, it is as much (they thinke) as they neede to doe: but they forget that the Sunne must not goe downe vpon their wrath.

The sixth rule, Rom. 15.2. Let euery man please his neighbour. Some will say, how can this be, for some will neuer be pleased, if wee condiscend not to their corrupt and wicked desires? Ans. The next words expound the Apostles meaning; for good: What is that? Ans. For his edification: so as the generall commandement admitteth this limitation; that men must be pleased, but onely so farre as it tendeth to Gods glorie, their owne good and edification. So Rom. 12.18. Haue peace with all men; but yet with a double limitation: first, if it be possible: secondly, if it be in you; or so much as lieth in you, wee must not carrie crosse and thwart mindes, as being enemies vnto peace, but applie our selues to the preseruation of it in our selues and others: thus shall we testifie our selues to be admitted into Gods kingdome, wherein the lion and lambe play together, and the yong childe with the Cockattice, Isai. 11. Whereby thus much is signified, that men once conuerted shall be so changed and altered, that if they were neuer so fierce and cruell against the Church, and one against another before, yet now they shal be framed to a peaceable and meeke disposition towards all men.

Please men in God, and for good.

Now to perswade vs to the practise of these rules: consider first that these are the last times, wherein most men are louers of themselues, and louers of men for their owne aduantage, euen so farre as by them they may attaine and retaine their wealth, pleasures, and pompe; but few are they that loue men for God, or his graces in them: now seeing the times more call for these duties, let vs bee the more carefull in them. Secondly, loue amongst men is the bond of societies; for what else linketh man to man but loue? which therefore the Apostle calleth the bond of perfection, and truly, for it maketh men speake and thinke one thing, and perfecteth their societie. Seeing then Christian societies are Gods ordinances and preserued by loue, wee are to labour the more in the preseruation of it. Thirdly, the office and action of loue is most excellent, for the manifold gifts and graces which God bestoweth on men for the vse of the Church and Common-wealth, are all hereby made profitable thereunto, all ordered hereunto aright, and all hereby applied to their right ends and vses: the gifts of knowledge, tongues, artes, wisedome and such like, without loue they puffe vp, but it is loue that edifieth, 1. Cor. 13. and which causeth man to applie and vse these gifts to the good of man. 2. Tim. 2.3.

The third rule for the maintenance of faith concerneth Hope, in the next words, looking for the mercie of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt vnto eternall life. Wherein is contained a deſcription of hope, which is this: Hope is a gift of God, whereby we waite for the mercie of Ieſus Chriſt to eternal life. For the better conceiuing of which grace, conſider in the words three things: firſt, the perſon on whom wee are to waite by hope, namely our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, together with the properties of this waiting, which are foure: firſt, it muſt be certaine without doubting: for the Apoſtle aſcribeth a full perſwaſion and aſſurance vnto our hope, as wel as vnto our faith, Heb. 6. 11 neither doth hope make a man aſhamed by diſappointing him of the thing hoped for, Rom. 5. 5. Secondly, it muſt be againſt hope, that is, againſt all humane hope, reaſon, ſenſe, and whatſoeuer may be grounded vpon theſe. Thus Abraham beleeued againſt hope, Rom. 4. 18. Thirdly, it muſt be a patient waiting on Chriſt: Rom. 8. 15. If we hope for that we ſee not, we doe with patience abide for it: for otherwiſe the thing hoped for deferred, maketh our waiting painfull and tedious. Fourthly, it muſt be grounded vpon the word and promiſes of life. Pſal. 130. 5. My ſoule hath waited, and I haue truſted in his word: Heb. 6. 18. the ground and anchor of our hope is made not onely the promiſe, but the oath of God who cannot lie, although he ſhould not ſweare, that we might hold faſt the hope that is ſet before vs.

The ſecond point is, the thing for which we muſt waite, which is not for gold, ſilner, honours, pleaſures, but only for the mercie of God in Chriſt vnto life eternall: by which we muſt not vnderſtand the beginnings of mercie, for theſe we alreadie here enioy, and hauing the preſent hold thereof, need not hope for the ſame, but for the full meaſure, and accompliſhment of Gods mercies hereafter to be enioyed. The like manner of ſpeech hath Paul, Rom. 8. 23. We waite for our adoption and redemption, not that wee are not alreadie adopted and redeemed; but that it is not as yet fully finiſhed and accompliſhed in vs, as hereafter it ſhall be.

The third point is, the fruite and profit of this waiting; and that is life eternall, and therefore is added, vnto life eternall, giuing vs to vnderſtand, that our waiting ſhall bring vs vnto, and ſet vs in the poſſeſſion of this life. So as the deſcription ſtandeth in ſetting downe two effects of hope, deſcribed firſt, that it cauſeth to waite on Chriſt for mercie: ſecondly, that it doth not faile nor make a man aſhamed, for he waiteth vnto eternall life, and in this expectation is put in poſſeſſion of the ſame. From the former effect we learne firſt to put a difference betweene hope and confidence: firſt, by hope we waite on Chriſt, but by confidence we reſt vpon him, and quiet our hearts in him. Secondly, hope is of things to come, and confidence of things preſent, at leaſt made preſent by faith. Matth. 9. 2. Haue confidence, and thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. Whence we may diſcerne an error in Popiſh religion. They teach with vs that a man is to haue confidence in Chriſt, but they include it vnder hope, and will not permit that it ſhould bee referred to faith, becauſe then they ſhould be drawne to grant a ſpeciall faith. But that is erroneous, ſeeing confidence is not of things to come as hope is, but of things preſent: and therefore although confidence goeth with hope, yet it is no branch of it, but proceedeth from faith. Secondly, ſeeing this waiting is a certaine expectation of Chriſt, hence I gather that there is a ſpeciall faith; for if there bee a ſpeciall hope, there muſt needes be a ſpecial faith to ground this ſpeciall hope vpon: for wee can neuer certainly waite for that, whereof we are vncertaine whether it belong vnto vs or no: he that hath receiued the earneſt, may certainly waite for the whole ſumme; but it is faith which receiueth the earneſt of the ſpirit, from whence our hope is raiſed. Heb. 11. 1. Now faith is the ground of things hoped for: for which cauſe it is that hope alſo hath his full aſſurance aſcribed vnto it as well as faith. And hence wee may further take knowledge of another of their errors, whereas they teach that hope indeed is ioyned with a certaintie, but they diſtinguiſh of certaintie, which is (they ſay) either of the will or vnderſtanding: hope they graunt hath the certaintie of will, but not of iudgement and vnderſtanding: but this is falſe, ſeeing the Apoſtle Heb. 12. commandeth to reioyce in hope; which no man can doe, vnleſſe the iudgement be certaine and ſetled; he that is not certaine of mercie, can neuer hope certainly for

mercie. Thirdly, wee learne hence to waite by our hope in Chriſt for life euerlaſting euen to the death, that muſt be the white which muſt euer be in our eye, at which wee muſt continually direct our aime. We haue many examples of holy men who haue gone before vs in this dutie: Iacob when hee was making his will, inſerteth and as it were interlaceth this ſpeech: O Lord, I haue waited for thy ſaluation, Gen.49.18. Moſes had his eye euer vpon the recompence of reward, Heb.11.26. Iob would truſt in the Lord, yea although he ſhould kill him, Iob.13.15. Dauid was much and often in this expectation of the Lords mercie, Pſal.40.1. In waiting I haue waited on the Lord, that is, I haue inſtantly waited: and mine eyes haue failed me, whileſt I haue waited for my God, Pſal.63.3. and Pſal.16.9. My fleſh ſhall reſt in hope: his hope was that his fleſh ſhould riſe againe vnto life euerlaſting. Obiect. But how cā we nouriſh this hope (will ſome man ſay) ſeeing we are ſo toſſed & perplexed with ſo many miſeries and grieuances in this life? Anſ. Paul meeteth with this obiection, Rom.1.3 We reioyce in tribulation. Qu. How can we doe ſo? Anſ. When wee ſubiect our ſelues vnto God in afflictions, he ſheddeth abroad his loue in our hearts, and this breedeth patience, which bringeth foorth experience, and experience hope, which maketh not aſhamed; being the helmet of ſaluation, and our anchor which ſtaieth our ſhip in the troubleſome ſea of this life. Fourthly, if wee muſt by our hope waite on Chriſt; then in all our requeſts and petitions vnto God we muſt abide the Lords leiſure, not limiting him, or preſcribing the time vnto him of hearing; for herein our hope muſt exerciſe it ſelfe.

Further, from the obiect of this waiting, which is the mercie of God, we may learne diuers points: firſt, that there is no ſuch merit of worke as the Papiſts dreame of, for then might we waite for iuſtice, and of due lay claime to life eternall. But here we haue another leſſon read vs, namely that the Saints of God iuſtified, ſanctified, and ſo continuing, (for to ſuch Iude wrote, as verſe 1.) muſt waite for the mercie of God vnto life eternall. Yea let a man keepe all Gods Commandements hee ſhall merit nothing, he doth but his dutie. In the ſecond Commandement the Lord ſaith he ſhewes mercie on thouſands: but who are they? euen to them that loue me and keepe my Commandements. If Adam had ſtood in innocencie, he could not haue merited any better eſtate than hee was in; how much leſſe can wee ſince the fall? nay Chriſt as hee was man alone, could not merit, nor did not, but in regard of the perſonal vnion. But the Papiſt will here ſay, that life eternal is promiſed vpon condition, and if wee can keepe the Commandements wee may merit. I anſwere, if wee keepe the condition of our ſelues wee may merit indeed; but this is impoſſible, for euen our keeping of the condition were of mercie; and mercie and merit will neuer meete and ſtand together. Secondly, if we waite for mercie in Chriſt, then muſt wee altogether deſpaire in regard of our ſelues of euer attaining life euerlaſting, for hope ſendeth a man out of himſelfe, and cauſeth him wholy to relie himſelfe vpon Chriſt. Thirdly, if we muſt waite for the accompliſhment of mercie, which tendeth to life euerlaſting, then much more muſt wee in our dangers or troubles waite for Gods mercie in our deliuerance. If wee muſt waite for the greater, wee may for the leſſe. Hab.2.3. At laſt the viſion ſhall ſpeake, and not lie; though it tarrie, waite. And Iſai.28.16. He that beleeueth maketh not haſte. This meeteth with mans corruptiō, who in preſent trouble will haue preſent help, or elſe he wil fetch it from hell it ſelfe, from Satan and Sorcerers: but ſuch neuer learned to waite on Gods mercie for ſaluation; for then could they waite his leiſure in leſſer matters for health and eaſe, and with more comfort make farre leſſe haſte.

Wicked mē in preſent troubles muſt haue preſent helpe, though from Satan himſelfe.

Secondly, from the ſecond effect or fruite of hope, namely, that it deceiueth not nor diſappointeth him that hopeth; note firſt a difference betweene humane or carnall, and religious or Chriſtian hope. The former often deceiueth men, at leaſt when death commeth all ſuch hopes periſh: but the ſecond neuer deceiueth a man in time of need, no not in death it ſelfe. Secondly, hence a man may and muſt beleeue his owne perſeuerance in grace: for where this hope is, ſuch a man cannot fall wholie from Chriſt, for then his hope ſhould diſappoint him: neither from his owne ſaluation, becauſe this hope laies hold on the mercie of God vnto eternall life, and herein can neuer fruſtrate his expectation, or make him aſhamed. Thirdly, if our hope bring vs to the fulnes of happines, and to the accompliſhment of mercie hereafter, then it bringeth vs to the beginnings of this happines euen in this life; for the beginning of life eternall is in this life, and ſtandeth in the conuerſion of ſinners vnto God, and in amendement of life: and whoſoeuer hath true hope, hee is thereby ſtirred vp vnto daily repentance and reformation of life: 1.Ioh.3.3. He that hath this hope, purgeth himſelfe, euen as he is pure. Now there is none of vs but wee ſay wee hope for life eternall, and looke to bee ſaued by the mercie of God in Chriſt: it ſtandeth vs thē in hand to trie the truth of this hope within our ſelues, and manifeſt the truth of it vnto others, and both theſe by this note, namely that we finde it to purge our hearts and liues, and that it conforme vs vnto Chriſt: for if we hope to be like him after this life, we muſt labour to reſemble him euen in this life, by being in ſome meaſure pure, holy, innocent, meeke, louing, &c. euen as hee was: for otherwiſe if our liues be not in ſome reformation of our ſelues, and conformitie to our head ſutable to the profeſſion of our hope, it is but pretence of hope, and will make men in the end aſhamed.

We muſt waite for mercie, and not for iuſtice, as the Papiſts teach by their doctrine of merits.

Verſ.22.23. And haue compaſſion of ſome, in putting difference; and others ſaue with feare, pulling them out of the fire, and hate euen that garment which is ſpotted by the fleſh.

THeſe words containe the two laſt rules tending to the preſeruation of the faith, both of them teaching how we may and are to recouer, and reſtore thoſe who are fallen or declining from faith or good conſcience. For the better vnderſtanding whereof, conſider in the words two things: firſt, the way to begin this recouerie, which is in the end of verſ.22. By putting difference. Secondly, the manner how they are to be recouered; expreſſed in both the rules: the former concerneth Chriſtian meeknes: Haue compaſſion on ſome, the latter concerneth Chriſtian ſeueritie; and other ſaue with feare. Concerning the former: the way of this recouery is to put a difference that is, by Chriſtian wiſedome to diſtinguiſh betweene offenders. For our direction wherein, wee muſt know that men erre and offend two waies: firſt, in opinion and iudgment: ſecondly, in practiſe and life. Againe, thoſe that erre in opinion are alſo diuerſly to bee diſtinguiſhed, according to the diuerſitie of their errors: for ſome erre in the foundation of religion, and matters of greateſt importance, as the Papiſts at this day when they teach inuocation of Saints, iuſtification by workes, a reall ſacrifice for the quicke and dead in the Supper, with other falſe doctrines racing the foundation: others may hold the foundation, but erre in ſmaller pointes of leſſer importance. As for example, the Anabaptiſts holding that warre is not to be made, nor othes to be taken, erre groſſely: but yet herein (though in other points they doe) they race not the foundation. Theſe ought wiſely to be diſtinguiſhed, for hee that erres in the foundation, ouerturneth his faith and religion: but he that holdeth the foundation, and erreth in ſmaller points, doth not. 1.Cor.3.12. If any man build on the foundation hay or ſtubble, his worke ſhall burne, but himſelf may be ſafe. One thing it is to beate downe a wall, to pull downe a window, yea ſome one ſide of a houſe; and another to plucke vp the foundation, for this deſtroieth all. Which difference if it had been made and minded, many which haue ſeparated themſelues frō the Church of England had ſtill remained members of it. Secondly, of thoſe that erre in opinion, ſome erre of ignorance and blinde zeale, ſeeing no other truth than that they hold; as the Iewes did, Rom.10.2. who had the zeale of God, but not according to knowledge: others erre of malice, who know they are deceiued, and yet perſiſt obſtinately in their error & falſe opinion, leſt they ſhould loſe their credit, as Heretikes. Now betweene theſe alſo a difference is to be put: Tit.3.10. An heretike after once or twice admonition reiect; for ſuch a one is condemned of his owne ſelfe. But if the error be of ignorance, Paul ſpeaketh; If any be otherwiſe minded, the Lord will reueile it, Phil. 3.15. But here we muſt alwaies remember, that ſeeing wee can hardly diſcerne the ground of mens errors whether they they proceede of ignorance or malice, wee are euer to condemne their error, but haue respect to their persons, and not passe sentence rashly against them. For the error of the vbiquitie of Christs bodie hath been held and maintained by many both godly and learned Protestants; their error wee are alwaies able to condemne, but wee may not condemne their persons, no not although they haue defended it of malice, or out of the pride of their hearts, seeing the Lord might giue them repentance before or at their death. Thirdly, againe those that doe erre of ignorance must be distinguished: for some of them are misled of simple ignorance, as those who haue no meanes, or very small meanes to come to knowledge: others erre of affected ignorance, which is when men are willingly ignorant, hauing meanes of knowledge, but refuse the same. As aboue fourtie yeeres agoe the people of this land erred of simple ignorance, because they had not the meanes (which yet did not excuse thē) but now their ignorance is wilfull, and affected, neglecting at least, if not fearfully despising so great saluation: and therefore as the sin of the land is greater, so the more fearefull is the iudgement like to be, if it bee not seasonably preuented by repentance. Fourthly, there is also wise difference to bee put betweene the author of sects and heresies, and those who are by them seduced. The Sect-masters and leaders are to bee vsed with more seueritie, and sin more grieuously: Rom. 16.17. Obserue them which cause diuisions among you: as in a wisely ordered Common-wealth, the heads of conspiracies and authors of treasons are most aimed at.

All errors are not of the ſame ſize.

Popiſh doctrine departeth frō the foundation.

The ignorance of this land more fearfull than it vvas fourty yeeres ago.

Secondly, errors in practise or action is any actuall sinne, or offence in word or deede; and men that offend in these are not all to bee ranged in one ranke, but to bee distinguished. For of these, first some sin of ignorance, not knowing what they doe; as Paul persecuted the Church of God ignorantly, & through a blinde zeale. Now ignorance is twofold: first, generall ignorance, when the thing is vtterly vnknowne: secondly speciall, when the equitie of a particular fact or some speciall action is vnknowne; as oppression and vsurie in generall are knowne to bee euill; but many particular actions vnder this kinde are vnknowne to many so to be: and sometime these two ignorances are ioyned both together, according vnto which we may put difference betweene the faults and offences of men. Secondly, some sinne of infirmitie, who know what they doe, but yet are ouercarried by sudden and violent passions of anger, feare, sorrow, or such like vnto euill. Thus Peter denied his Master vpon sudden feare of danger. Thirdly, some sinne of malice, being carried vnto euill by the malice of their own will, not of ignorance, or passion as the former, of this the Apostle speaketh, Heb. 10.26. If we sinne willingly, after we haue receiued the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins. Now of this malice of the will there be two degrees: first particular, when a man wittingly and willingly sinneth against some particular Commandement; as Acts 7.51. The Iewes were stiffenecked and alwaies resisted the holy Ghost: that is, the ministerie of the Prophets in some things, not in all. Secondly, generall malice, when a man is carried wittingly and willingly to oppugne all the law of God, yea Christ himselfe, true religion, and saluation by Christ, and so reuerseth all the Commandements. This is the sinne against the holy Ghost, & of this degree the Apostle saith, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sinne: this being an vniuersall and generall apostasie. Now offenders according to these differences must bee distinguished.

Further, of those that actually offend, some sinne secretly, when it is knowne but to some one onely; and priuately, when it is knowne but to some few, and the scandall is the smaller. Some sinne publikely, when the sinne is notorious and the offence giuen great. If the offence be secret, the Apostle ruleth the case, saying; that loue couereth a multitude of such sinnes. For the second, if the offence be priuate, then must thou admonish the party betweene thee and him: if hee heare thee, thou hast saued and wonne him: if not, but hee persist in offending, tell the Church. But hee that offendeth publikely, must be publikely reprooued, that others may feare, 1. Tim. 5. 20. By these differences obserued, a notable way is made for the recouerie of those that are sliding or fallen from the faith, in matter either of doctrine, or practise.

Hence wee learne first, that it is our dutie to obserue one another in our speeches and actions; or else wee can neuer put any difference in them, the end of which obseruing must be (not as the manner of many is to imitate others in their euils, or traduce or floute men) but that of the Apostle, Heb.10.24. Let vs consider one another, to prouoke vnto loue and good workes. Secondly, for the making of this difference betweene offenders, we ought to haue in vs a christian wisedome, whereby wee may discerne aright of persons and things, and not to iudge of al alike. Our head Christ was a notable president vnto vs herein: for though many professed him, and beleeued in him, yet would hee not commit himselfe vnto them, because he knew what was in man, Ioh.2.24. Loue indeed must hope all things, beleeue all things, suffer all things, 1.Cor.8.7. but yet this Christian loue must be ordered by Christian wisedome.

Christian loue must goe hand in hand with Christian wisedome.

The second point concerneth the manner of restoring offenders, standing in two rules: first of compassion: secondly of seueritie. In the former consider two things: first, on whom compassion is to bee shewed: the Apostle saith, on some, that is, on those that erre of ignorance, or infirmitie: on those also who are caried away with ŷ violence of some sudden passion, if they repent, yea or giue any hope of amendement: all such must be restored with the spirit of meeknes, Galath.6.1. Secondly, the manner of shewing the compassion, which is not by winking at, or soothing men in their sinnes, but by admonitions and exhortations seasoned with compassion: Matth.18.15. If thy brother trespasse against thee, goe and tell him his fault betweene thee and him: if he heare thee not, take yet with thee one or two. This is the meanes first to conuince the offenders, and then to bring them to repentance with all mercie and meeknes, and confirme them therein. Thus God himselfe dealt with Adam, first conuinced him, and then in much mercie made that gratious promise, that the seede of the woman should bruise the Serpents head. Thus Christ looked on Peter, and mercifully restored him. Thus Paul restored the Galathians, being fallē from the faith by mercifull admonitions.

Ob. But if we admonish men before witnes, according to the rule of Christ, wee may draw our selues into danger, for they may take such admonitions for slanders, and vse them as witnesse thereof against vs.

Ans. If therefore the fault bee secret, we must onely admonish our brother alone; and if that will not serue to reclaime him, leaue him to God to turne him: and if it be priuate, that is, known to some few, it is Christian wisedome to admonish him before some two of those that can testifie of this sinne, that so the partie admonished may be conuinced, and the admoniſher cleered from all shew and apparance of slaunder.

Vse.1. By this rule is condemned the rigour and austeritie of many in too seuere censuring offenders and offences. This was a fault and blemish in the ancient Church; which sometime for no faults would enioyne penance, as if a man had married the second time: yea for small and light offences were wont to enioyne a penance of two, fiue, yea and sometimes of tenne yeeres. This is the sinne also of those that are departed from our Church, condemning vs (for some wants) vtterly as no Church nor people of God, refusing to heare the word of God, to pray, and to ioyne in other religious duties with vs. It is also the sin of many of the Lutherans, who becauſe wee dissent from them in some opinions, condemne vs and our Churches to hell; and speake and write that we are limmes of the diuel. Which were too great seueritie, if wee held not the truth against them, in the things wherein we differ. Vse.2. Wee ought on the contrarie to put on the bowels of compassion towards offenders, if there bee any hope of amendement; following herein the footsteps of Christ himselfe, who was very tender ouer Ierusalem, so as hee wept ouer it. Moses when the Israelites had sinned in making their golden Calfe, he mourned for them, fasted fourtie daies and fourtie nights for them, and would not depart from God till he was intreated of him in their behalfe. Men cannot but be compassionate towards sicke, and dangerously diseased, or wounded bodies; but a rare thing it is to be so tender ouer the sicke soules of our brethren. But blessed is hee that iudgeth wisely of the poore, whether afflicted in bodie or minde.

The second rule of restoring offenders, concerneth Christian seueritie: and it is the last of the fiue, laid down in the verse 23. In it the Apostle laieth downe three things: first the rule it selfe, to saue with feare. Secondly, the reason of the rule, or manner of it; pulling them out of the fire. Thirdly, a caueat for the better obseruing it: And hate euen the garment spotted by the flesh. In the rule it selfe consider two things: first, who are to be saued by feare? namely those who otherwise are incurable, which is manifest in the opposition of these words with the former, some are to bee cured with mercie and compassion, as those which sinne of ignorance and infirmitie: but those who are hardly curable must be terrified, affrighted, and so saued by terror and feare. Secondly, what this feare is? namely, not a bodily feare, as neither the meanes causing it are: but a spirituall feare, and that of euerlasting destruction. The meanes of feare are either ciuill or spirituall. The former is the power and authoritie of the Magistrate, who carrieth not the sword in vaine against offenders; but that those that doe euill might feare, Rom. 13.4. but neither is this feare nor the meanes of it meant. The second meanes are spirituall, directly respecting the soule, not the bodie, and they be reduced to three kindes or heads: first, admonition, with denunciation of Gods iudgements against the party not repenting. Secondly, suspension, whereby offenders are debarred from the Lords Table. Thirdly, excommunication, whereby men are deliuered vp to Satan, and cast out of the societie of Gods people. Of these three this last is here most properly meant.

Feare must force whō loue cannot allure.

Ob. But some will say, Excommunication is of no force, it is lightly regarded, and therefore can bee no great meanes of feare to offenders. Ans. This censure vsed according to the word of God, cannot but be full of horror, and terror, and the most forcible (as the last) meanes of this feare. Matth. 18, 17. If he heare not the Church, let him be to thee as an heathen. What will mooue a man if this will not, that the whole Church should account of him as a Pagan or Heathen? The incestuous person, 1. Corinth. 5.5. thus censured, is giuen vp to Sathan, and deliuered into the diuels power: then which what can bee more fearefull? Both these places the enemies of this, censure, seek to elude, that they might make it lesse forcible: for that in Matth. 18. they interpret of seeking ciuill remedie, against ciuil harme or wrong, as though the sense were thus: If thy brother iniurie thee, admonish him first priuately; and if hee refuse to heare thee, bring him before the Magistrate, thou maist goe to law with him, and vse him as an heathen man, in calling him before the heathen Magistrate. But this exposition cannot stand; for to shew that it is no direction of the manner to reuenge ciuil wrongs, but appertaineth vnto the conscience, it is added in the very next words, verse 18. Whatsoeuer they binde on earth, shall be bound in heauen: and whatsoeuer they loose in earth, shall be loosed in heauen. For the other place 1. Corin. 5. they expound it of an extraordinarie punishment, which might be executed in those daies by Satan vpon the bodies of such offenders: Deliuer him to Satan: that is, say they, that hee may torment his bodie. But this cannot be a bare bodily punishment, but an excluding of the sinner from the Communion and fellowship of the Church, and must be done in the face of the Church, by the consent of the whole Church, which appeare to bee so vers. 2. and 4. Againe, if it had been meant of some such extraordinarie punishment, Paul by his Apostolicall Rod could haue done that alone, and needed not haue troubled the whole Church with it.

The second point is the reason of this rule, taken from the danger of the delay of it: Pulling them out of the fire. They are in perill of present daunger, they must therefore presently bee saued: euen as things that are in the fire must be presently pulled out violently, or else they are presently consumed: so must these offenders be presently preserued and pulled out of the fire of hell. Out of these two former points wee learne diuers instructions.

First, that their censure of excommunication is an ordinance of God, and no inuention of man: for euen in this verse wee may obserue, first, that obstinate offenders are to bee saued by terrible meanes, some must bee saued by feare. Secondly, violent and sudden meanes must be vsed, they must be as it were snatched out of the fire. Thirdly, they must bee separated from in regard of societie, in the next words: all which three things cannot agree to any thing but only to excommunication.

The censure of excommunication not to be inflicted but in most desperate cases.

Secondly, note the end of excommunication, which is to pluck men out of the fire of hell with violence; and therefore this desperate remedie is only to be vsed in desperate cases, whē there is no other way to saue the soule, and not for trifles. The Surgeon cutteth not off armes and legges, vntill the life bee disparaged; neither the Physition prescribeth ranke poyson, but in most desperate diseases. Againe, if this bee the end of it, then it respecteth the spiritual estate of men, and not the temporall; the soule properly, and not the bodie. Wickedly then doth the Pope (for the vpholding of his estate) excommunicate Kings and Princes, to depose them from their Crownes, and depriue them of their scepters, and by it free their subiects from their allegeance: this is no end of this censure warranted in the word. And thirdly, if there be such a necessarie end and vse of it, it were to bee wished that in this end it were more vsed against open and notorious sinners, whom the word cannot preuaile with to their saluation: seeing many goe on euery where obstinately in their sinnes without amendment, to the great scandall of others.

Thirdly, hence we learne that many bee so wedded and addicted to their wicked waies, that although they be in the mouth of hell, yet they feare nothing; neither God nor Diuel: nor care neither for heauen nor hell; else what neede were there of such a censure as this is? Ahab was so addicted to Nabaths vineyard that he was sicke for it: besides, he sold himselfe to worke wickednes. Manasses sold himselfe to Satan, nothing could returne him but fetters and captiuitie. Fruitful of such hath been, and is our barren age.

Fourthly, when gentle meanes will not serue to reclaime men, it is the will of God that terrible meanes should be vsed, if by any meanes they may bee pulled out of the fire: and thus the Lord vsed to deale with his owne people of the Iewes, proceeding with them according to that order in Rom. 2. 4. first by patience by long suffering calling them to repentance: but when they hardened their hearts against these meanes, then he hoorded and treasured vp wrath for them against the day of wrath. The same hath been his dealing with vs in this land; for these fourtie yeeres and more he hath hedged vs in with peace and prosperitie, together with the liberties of his glorious Gospell, still expecting our further fruitfulnes, answerable to such meanes: but we become still more barren, & lesse fruitfull; hee hath often taken in hand his pruning knife, and lopped vs by famine, pestilence, and other his iudgements, and yet behold we abound with bitter fruites of blasphemies, iniustice, prophanenes, contempt of the Gospel, which was more embraced and esteemed of twentie yeeres agoe, than now it is in these daies, which make no end of declining: that surely wee cannot now but expect that the Lord should open vpō vs the treasures of his wrath, and his storehouses of iudgements, vnlesse wee vse meanes to preuent them, and that in due time. Some will aske, what bee they? Ans. Remember two rules, first the counsell of Amos, chap. 4. 12. Prepare to meete thy God O Israel. Meanes in this land are prepared to meete our Enemies, and it is well done: but wee must first prepare to meete our God by vnfained repentance, and forsaking of sinne: for that is it which maketh the breaches of our land, & strengtheneth our enemies against vs. Secondly, the practise of Iehosaphat, 2. Chro. 20. 12. We know not what to doe, but our eyes are towards thee O Lord. Depend vpon him alone, and nothing besides him; make him thy hiding place in life and death, shroud thy self vnder the wings of his protection, and thou shalt be safe vnder his feathers.

Against the Irish Rebels.

Now followeth the third point in this last rule, that is, the caueat tending to the obseruing of it, in these words: And hate euen the garment spotted with the flesh: that is, keepe no companie, haue no fellowship or societie with them: which precept is propounded in a darke comparison or similitude, taken from the ceremoniall pollutions of the law:

law: that look as men were then made vncleane, not onely by conuersing with persons legally vncleane; but also by touching (though it was vnwares) their houses, vessels, and garments, as appeareth Leu. 15. 4. and Numb. 9. and therefore did not onely auoide such persons, but hated euen their garments: so must we vnder grace deale with obstinate offenders, auoide their persons, sinnes, yea and societies, as occasions thereof. First then in the former part of the comparison two questions may bee demaunded. The former is this:

Why should any mans flesh bee vncleane, or his garments spotted, and so detestable and to be hated, seeing they are the good creatures of God? Answ. There bee three kindes of vncleannes: 1. Naturall, 2. Morall, 3. Ceremoniall. Naturall vncleannes is, whereby the creature becommeth by his corrupted nature vncleane for mans vse, I say by corrupted nature, because this vncleannes cannot rise from created nature, but from mans sinne and Gods curse; as the Serpents are now to mans vse vncleane, that is, noisome, and full of hurt and poison. Morall is, when any creature is vsed against Gods law and commandement, separating it from the vse of man: as to marrie within any of the degrees prohibited, Leu. 19. commeth within this vncleannes. Thus a man borne of vncleane seed is vncleane, Iob 14. Ceremoniall is, when the creature being cleane it in owne nature, yet in some other respects by vertue of Gods prohibition, becommeth vncleane. Thus were certaine beasts, and fowles, and dead bodies vncleane, not in their nature, but in some respects, which especially were three: first, in regard of touching: secondly, of tasting: thirdly, of sacrificing; in which respects they might not bee vsed. Now the creature might be hated, not in regard of it self, or as it is the good creature of God: but as farre as this ceremoniall vncleannes was fastned vnto it, it being prohibited in this or other respects by God.

2. Quest. But why should any man hate the flesh, or garments of another, seeing this ceremoniall vncleannes was no sinne; yea to burie the dead corpes was a dutie to be performed necessarily: and so necessarie was it to touch them: and for garments they were naturall, and no more sin to touch them than to eate or drinke? Ans. Although legall defilement was not alwaies a sin, yet it was alwaies an euill, and prefigured the defilement of men by originall sinne: and besides, vpon Gods prohibition was to be hated. Secondly, although the defilement it selfe was no sinne; yet hee that wittingly without cause did touch or meddle with the thing defiled, did sinne, because God commanded the contrarie.

Secondly, out of the second part of the similitude, in that we are to hate the company of obstinate offenders, it may be demanded whether wee may keepe any companie, or haue any fellowship with an obstinate sinner? Ans. The familiar companie with such is forbidden, but all companie is not absolutely forbidden: for in two cases it is lawfull to accompanie with such a one, first, to doe him good with conference, instruction, or admonition; an heretike must be once or twice admonished, and if he bee not then reclaimed he must be auoided, Titus 3. 10. Secondly, when a man is bound to such a one by the bond of ciuill societie: as for example, if a man were by the Church excommunicated, yet a wife must performe the dutie of a wife; the childe of a childe; the seruant of a seruant: for these diuine ordinances abolish not, but establish ciuill societies. Then I say familiar companie must bee denied to such obstinate sinners, but not all companie; as when by the same we can either reclaime them, or else to performe some ciuill dutie towards them.

Vse. First we see here what was the end of ceremoniall vncleannes: and that was to represent that spirituall vncleannes in the whole man, by originall and actuall sinne in thought, word, and deede. Zach. 13. 1. In that day shal there be a fountaine opened to the house of Dauid, and to the inhabitants of Ierusalem, for sinne and for vncleannes: whereby is signified such an vncleannes, whereby not only our selues are defiled wholly, but whatsoeuer we touch & meddle withall, which is infected by reason of that dwelling sinne in vs, euen as it was which in the law was touched by a polluted and vncleane person. This consideration should cause vs to looke into the filthines of our hearts; which if we could, could, or did see, as it is both in it selfe, and in the vile fruites which without intermissiō it sendeth out, it would make vs humble our selues, and neuer bee at rest vntill this fountaine of the blood of Christ were set open vnto vs, and we euen plunged into it, and so clensed from this vncleannes; whereof the vncleannes of the flesh was but a figure and shadow. 2. Vse. We learne how to vnderstand the Cōmandements of the Moral law, namely not only according to the letter, and bare words in which they are propounded, which mention the maine sinnes only against God and man; but by a Synecdoche in the mentioned sinnes, all of that kind, as all occasions, also motiues, and inducements thereunto, as here the Apostle wisheth the Saints to hate the flesh, yea the garments spotted; so wee are to hate the sinne it selfe, yea and all the kindes, and all the occasions of the same. 3. Vse. Hence wee haue a direct way wherein all beleeuers are to walke: first, we must hate the companie and societie of manifest and obstinate sinners, who will not bee reclaimed. Secondly, all their sinnes, not communicating with any man in his sinne, we must haue no fellowship (as with the workers so) with the vnfruitfull workes of darknesse. Thirdly, all occasions and inducements vnto these sinnes. Fourthly, all apparances of wickednes, 1. Thess. 5. 22. that is, which men in common iudgement account euill; and all this must proceed from a good ground, euen from a good heart hating sinne perfectly, that is all sin, as Dauid Psal. 139. I hate them with a perfect hatred: and not as some who can hate some sinne, but cleaue to some other; as many can hate pride, but loue couetousnes, or some other darling sinne: but wee must attaine to the hatred of all, before wee can come to the practise of this precept; besides that all sinnes are hateful euen in themselues. A needfull dutie to be heedfully regarded in these daies, wherein are so few haters of the flesh, and so many haters of those that hate it: so many that are so farre from hating the apparances of euill, that many sins themselues are swallowed vp and made no bones of; horrible blasphemies must now credit mens speeches: the breach and violating of the Sabbath in iourneying is as good a seruice of God on horseback as neede be, or as he requireth: railings, also fightings, and such works of the flesh, are notes of valour and spirit: and so in other. Thus men who professe religion in word, denie it in deed; seeing true religion standeth not onely in the hatred of the sinnes themselues, but euen of all occasions and apparances of them: because God hath commanded them to be hated. 4. Vse. As ỹ Iewes (being not to come neer the houses nor touch the vncleane) if they did touch any such thing they were vncleane and polluted: and for that cause must wash their bodies and chaunge their garments, yea if they did but suspect that they had defiled themselues, they were presently to bee purified: so wee being defiled with any knowne sinnes, or suspecting any vnknowne; our next course must be to the blood of Christ the Lauer of the Church, suing vnto God by prayer that our sins may be therewith washed away: wee must put off our garments, that is, the olde man with his lusts, and put on the wedding garment, that is, Christ Iesus with his righteousnes, daily proceeding in the duties of sanctification; for he that hath washed himselfe, had need stil haue his feete washed, that is, daily renew his repentance, and bring daily fruits worthie amendement of life.

Vers. 24. Now vnto him that is able to keepe you that you fall not, and to present you faultlesse before the presence of his glorie with ioy. 25. That is to God only wise, our Sauiour, be glorie, and Maiestie, and dominion, and power, both now and for euer. Amen.

IN these wordes are contained the third part of the Epistle, namely the conclusion of it, and it is nothing else but a lawding and praising of God: wherein three things are to bee noted: first the person praised, which is Christ the second person in the Trinitie, the Sonne of the eternall Father; this appeareth by two reasons in the words: first, because he is here described to be a Iudge that doth present all men before himselfe, which is proper to the Sonne of God. Secondly, because he is called our Sauiour, which is the title of Christ, according to the name Iesus. And yet here must be noted that in this praising of the Sonne, the Father and the holie Ghost are not excluded: for as the nature of the three persons is all one, so is their worship all one also. The second point bee the reasons or inducements mouing vs to praise Christ, which be three. The first drawne from his power: To him which is able &c. The second from his wisedome: To God onely wise. The third from the worke of our redemption and saluation: Our Sauiour. The third point is the praise it selfe, in these words: Be glorie, and maiestie, and dominion, and power, both now and for euer, Amen. Of these points in order. And first of the person to whom this praise is giuen.

First, note how the Apostle concludeth his epistle with the praise of Christ as the Iudge, as also the Sauiour of mankinde; in whose example we are taught with willing minds to spend our daies in the honour of Christ: for that which the Saints doe in heauen, that must we doe while wee liue vpon earth; for so we pray in the Lords Prayer: but they in heauen continually doe cast downe their Crownes at the feet of the Lambe, Reu. 5.11. as worthie to receiue all honor, and glorie, and praise, and power; we must therefore bee readie vnto this dutie. Againe, he hath subiected himselfe to exceeding dishonour and abasement, yea to the death, and that of the crosse: and all that we might first honour him, and then be honoured by him: how therefore ought wee in way of thankfulnes for the great worke of our redemption, glorifie him, and aduance his honour? But in stead hereof many euen of those that professe Christ dishonour him, vsing him as a packhorse to lay vpon him all their sinnes, and so lade him with their sinnes past, and crucifie him againe with daily new sinnes, and yet they looke he should be their Sauiour to bring them to honour and immortall glorie.

The inducements follow. The first of which is take from the power of Christ, vnto him who is able &c. That wee may know the force of this reason, wee will first consider what this power of Christ is. The power of Christ is two-fold: first, absolute: secondly, actuall. By absolute I vnderstand that power of his, whereby hee is able to doe euen that which he will neuer do; of which Iohn Baptist speaketh: God is able euen of stones to raise vp seede to Abraham. By this power God could haue made many thousand worlds, whereas he made but one; and by the same Christ could haue commanded a legion of Angels to haue deliuered him from the hands of the Iewes, but would not. This absolute power goeth beyond his actuall power or will, yet is not greater than his will: for as what God doth, that he willeth: so what hee can doe, hee can also will: but this power is not here meant. The second, namely the actuall power of Christ, is, whereby hee doth and effecteth whatsoeuer he willeth, and it is of two sorts: first, his generall power which tendeth on his prouidence, whereby he ordereth all things both in heauen and earth: Psal. 115.3. Our God is in heauen, and doth whatsoeuer he will. Secondly, a more speciall power which accompanieth his grace, and alwaies goeth with it: of which Paul speaketh Ephes. 1.19. That we may know what is the exceeding greatnes of his power towards vs that beleeue, according to the working of his mightie power. Of this power working life and grace to them which beleeue, Iude here speaketh. Concerning which obserue three conclusions.

Fitst, that this power is giuen to Christ in time, Matth. 28. All power is giuen me in heauen and in earth. Acts 2.36. He is of God made Lord and Christ, importing that this power is giuen him to bee a Lord. Indeed the Son of God as God, is of equall power with the Father, and that from all eternitie: in which regard no power can be giuen him: but if we respect his office of mediation, to the performance of which he must lay aside his power, and become as a seruant subiecting himselfe to the death; thus this power may bee said to bee giuen him againe, namely when by his rising from the dead and ascending into heauen, hee was mightely declared to bee the Sonne of God: so that in Psal. 2. Thou art my sonne, this day haue I begotten thee, is in Acts 13. applied to the resurrection of Christ: as if hee had said, This day haue I made manifest by thy powerfull resurrection that thou art my sonne, and that I haue begotten thee before all worlds.

The second conclusion is, that this power is manifeſted in Chriſt the head eſpecially: namely, when it cauſed him ſo victoriouſly to ouercome death in ſuffering it; to riſe from the graue, aſcend to heauen, & ſit at the right hand of God his Father. Paul prayeth that the Epheſians might know the greatnes of this power, Which raiſed Chriſt from the dead, and ſet him at Gods right hand in heauenly places, Epheſ. 1.20.

The third concluſion: That this power conueyeth it ſelfe from Chriſt the head to all his members, Epheſ. 3.20. To him that is able to doe abundantly aboue all that we aske or thinke, according to the power that worketh in vs. Coloſſ. 1. 29. I alſo labour and ſtriue according to his working, which worketh in me mightely. Now being conueied vnto the members of Chriſt, it is not idle in them, or vnprofitable, but worketh proportionably in them al, as it did in Chriſt himſelfe: for as it cauſed Chriſt to die for our ſinnes, ſo it maketh vs die to our owne ſinnes: as this power made him to liue againe to his Father, ſo it maketh vs his members to liue vnto God; that as hee by vertue hereof roſe againe, ſo it cauſeth vs to riſe to a new life in this life, and to our eternall life in the life to come.

Further, this power is commended here by foure effects: firſt, it is able to keepe them that they fall not, namely into manifeſt ſinnes ioyned with obſtinacie: for of ſuch ſinnes and ſinners hee had ſpoken in the former words; and cannot be meant of euery kinde of fall, ſeeing the children of God fall daily, but of ſuch as Dauid prayed againſt, Pſal. 19. laſt. Keepe thy ſeruant from preſumptuous ſins, let them not raigne ouer me. The ſecond effect is, to preſent you faultleſſe, that is, firſt to iuſtifie beleeuers: ſecondly, to ſanctifie them here in part while they liue, and in death to finiſh and perfect that inchoate ſanctification. The third effect, in the day of iudgment to preſent them before the preſence of his glorie. The fourth effect, with ioy, that is, to poſſeſſe them with ioy euerlaſting.

Vſe. 1. In that Chriſt is able to keepe them that beleeue, wee may note that this his power doth order the wils of beleeuers both in and after their conuerſion. In their conuerſion it frameth and turneth their wils. Ioh. 6. No man commeth to the Sonne, except the Father draw him, that is, except he incline, and turne mans will vnto his owne, and make it of an vnwilling will a willing will. Againe, after conuerſion it is not an idle power in them: 1. Ioh. 3.9. He that is borne of God ſinneth not, that is, addicteth not himſelfe, nor ſetteth himſelfe to the practiſe of ſinne; and the reaſon is giuen, becauſe the ſeede of God remaineth in him, which is all one with this power, which is able, and accordingly keepeth him. Whereby that Popiſh error is detected, namely that in the conuerſion of a ſinner it is in mans power and will, either to receiue or reſiſt the grace of God: and that mans will can either applie it ſelfe to grace offered if it will, or elſe refuſe it: but if this were true, the power of God ſhould not order mans will, but mans will ſhould order Gods grace, yea and ouercome this omnipotent power of God. Againe, this ouerthroweth the diſtinction of grace into ſufficient and effectuall: for ſufficient grace is effectuall, ſeeing that this power of Chriſt waiteth vpon it to make it effectuall.

Gods power ſhall not order mans will, if the diſordered doctrine of Poperie may obtaine.

Secondly, hence wee ſee that this power of Chriſt in his members, is a continued power, neuer wholy interrupted, for it keepeth them in this life that they fall not into preſumptuous ſinnes. Secondly, it iuſtifieth them and ſanctifieth them imperfectly in life, and perfectly in death. Thirdly, after death it preſenteth them vnto their glorie. Fourthly, after the laſt iudgement, it poſſeſſeth them with vnſpeakable ioy. Thus the righteous man by vertue of this power, becomes like a tree whoſe leafe neuer faileth nor fadeth, Pſal. 1.3. And hence is it that hope is ſaid to be a ſure anchor, Hebr. 6. verſ. 19. for this propertie hath it, not from it ſelfe (as alſo loue and faith in themſelues are changeable, and nothing indeede is in it ſelfe vnchangeable but God) but the power of Chriſt is it that maketh it an anchor ſure and ſtedfaſt. By which conſideration, thoſe two vncomfortable errors are confuted: firſt, that the childe of God being regenerate may fall maliciouſly, and euen wholy away. Secondly, that hee may fall finally: ſeeing God putteth his hand vnder, and this power of Chriſt is able to keep them that they fall not (though

Thirdly, we must labour to haue experience of this power of Christ in our selues, working in our hearts the death of our sins, and quickning them againe vnto the life of grace and of God: for this power of Christ consisteth not in any fancie, but in an effectuall feeling in the heart of euery true beleeuer. Paul prayed that the Ephesians might feele in themselues this proportionall power to Christ his power in his death and resurrection, Ephes. 1. 19. himselfe counted all things dung in comparison of the knowledge of this power, Phil. 3. 10. and that he might haue experience hereof, hee will reioyce in his owne weakenes, 2. Cor. 12. 9. And what will this power be profitable vnto vs (be it neuer so powerfull in it selfe) vnlesse we finde our selues thus strengthened in grace and godlines by it?

Fourthly, wee may not content our selues with a forme and shew of godlines, but strive to attaine the power of it; or else let vs neuer professe Christ, and please our selues only in such a profession: for whosoeuer is truly Christs, in him this power worketh mightely in subduing sin, in striuing against temptations, in stirring vp zeale of Gods glorie, and in a word in making men fruitfull and abundant in all well doing: yea it can no more hide it selfe where it is, than can the Sunne at noone day, but it will cause men to shine as lights in the middest of a froward generation: which fruites and effects, if a man cannot finde in himself, let him suspect himselfe that he is not as yet knit vnto Christ, for then hee would bee by vertue of this power in some proportion conformable vnto him.

Fifthly, this doctrine ministreth a stay and prop to our faith and hope, seeing that Christ hath such a working power as this is, whereby hee is able to make good, and accomplish whatsoeuer hee hath promised concerning our saluation: thus he strengthened his Disciples, Ioh. 17. But be of good comfort, I haue ouercome the world: and thus Abraham beleeued aboue hope, because he knew that God was able to performe what hee had promised, Rom. 4. 21. teaching all the sonnes of faithfull Abraham vpon what prop they are to leane, and stay vp themselues while the promises are delaied. Here the Papist teacheth that in regard of God indeed and his promise, we may beleeue our owne saluation; but in respect of our selues, and in regard of our owne indisposition we must still doubt, and it is presumption (saith he) to beleeue it. Answ. But this is false, for wee must not doubt in regard of our own indisposition, but must certainly by faith lay hold on our own saluation, seeing that Christ by his power correcteth, yea and abolisheth in his members this indisposition, fitting them (notwithstanding it) and keeping them vnto life eternall.

Sixthly and lastly, we must strive to become like vnto Christ, seeing y same power that was in him is conueied and deriued from him into euery one of his members, that as hee liued in obedience vnto his Father, both doing and suffering whatsoeuer his Father enioyned and willed; euen so ought we: look what was his disposition and conuersation whilest hee conuersed here vpon earth, so ought wee to be disposed and conuerse, resembling him in meekenes, humilitie, patience, loue towards our Father, and brethren, yea and towards our enemies; and as hee was minded, the same minde ought also to be in vs, Phil. 2. 6. So much for the first reason mouing vs to the praise of Christ, drawne from his power.

The second motiue is in the verse 25. To God onely wise, drawne from his wisedome; wherein three things are to bee obserued: first, that Christ is God: secondly, that he is wise: thirdly, that he is only wise. For the first, this is a notable testimonie and to bee obserued against the Arrians & Atheists, to confirme the Diuinitie of Christ, who like dogs most blasphemously with blacke mouthes barke against their Creator, affirming him to bee one of the great seducers of the world: against whom (that we may bee the better armed) I will first propound one or two euident reasons, and then answere their allegations. The first argument: Consider that whosoeuer haue taken vpon themselues to be called Gods, the iust iudgement and vengeance of God hath befallen them, and they haue been destroyed by the hand of God. Adam and Eue because they would haue been but like God, or as Gods, were grieuouſly puniſhed in themſelues and all their poſteritie. Herod becauſe hee was contented that the people ſhould call him God, the hand of God was inſtantly vpon him, and the Angell of God ſmot him, and hee was eaten vp of lice. But Chriſt profeſſed himſelfe to bee God, yea and diſputed Ioh.7. againſt the Phariſies that he was the Sonne of God, and yet no harme befell him: nay he proued manifeſtly by his doctrine, and miracles, by his death and glorious reſurrection, that he ſpoke true when he ſaid he was God and the Sonne of God.

The ſecond reaſon: Chriſt wrought miracles, which could not be done either by naturall or Satanicall power; as to raiſe the dead, to make them which were borne blind to ſee; and theſe by a diuine and omnipotent power, and not as an inſtrument but as an author of them; and therfore he was true God. Now, if they alleadge here, that wee haue no proofe hereof, but out of the new Teſtament, which they reiect as they doe the other Scriptures. I anſwer, that many of the ſame things in effect are extant alſo euen in Heathen writers themſelues. Ob. But they alleage againſt the Diuinitie of Chriſt, that Chriſt is inferiour vnto God: Ioh.14. 28. The Father is greater than I: 1.Cor. 11.3. God is the head of Chriſt, as the man is the womans head: and chap.15. 28. The Sonne ſhall be ſubiect vnto him that ſubdued all things vnder him. But as none is aboue God, ſo God is inferiour to none, and therefore Chriſt is not God. Anſ. The two former places muſt bee vnderſtood of Chriſt as hee is man and Mediatour: which hindreth not but that as he is God he is equall to the Father. The third place in 1.Cor.15.28. muſt be thus vnderſtood: that the Son is made eternally ſubiect vnto the Father, not as hee is God, but in regard of his humanitie. Secondly, of his myſticall bodie, that is, the Church: ſo as this ſubiection & inferioritie of Chriſt, is nothing elſe but a manifeſtation of the difference of Chriſt as hee is Man and as he is God, and of the inferioritie of his Manhood to the Godhead: which ſhall bee eſpecially reueiled at the day of iudgement. The ſecond obiection: Acts the 20.35. It is a more bleſſed thing to giue, than to receiue: but Chriſt receiueth wiſedome, life, yea and his ſubſtance from his Father, and ſo the Father is more bleſſed than he? Anſ. That place ſpeaketh of ſuch a receiuing, as preſuppoſeth want, which is more miſerable than to bee able to giue, which argueth plentie and abundance: but Chriſt receiueth not thus his ſubſtance, wiſedome, and life, for he neuer wanted them: when he receiued them he had them; and hauing them hee receiued them, and both had and receiued them before all worlds, and ſo that allegation is to no purpoſe. The third obiection: Chriſt is a Mediatour and prayeth vnto God, and ſo hee is not God, for nothing prayeth to it ſelfe. Anſw. Chriſt is directly a Mediatour to the Father the firſt perſon in Trinitie: now becauſe the perſons haue all one nature and will, therefore he is alſo Mediatour euen to himſelfe as the ſecond perſon, as alſo to the holy Ghoſt. Let vs bee ſtill armed againſt theſe wicked hell-hounds, and deteſt their Satanicall deluſions and ſuch damnable doctrines, derogatorie to the honour of the Son of God.

The ſecond point in this ſecond reaſon is, that Chriſt is wiſe. This wiſdome of Chriſt is a propertie common to him with the Father and holy Ghoſt, wherby he perfectly knoweth all things as they are. Concerning which, remember theſe eight things: firſt, that this wiſedome of Chriſt is of it ſelfe, and hath the beginning from it ſelfe, and not from any other: for though he receiueth it from the Father, yet it is all one with the Fathers, and therefore it is not begotten nor proceedeth from any, but is the fountaine of all wiſedom in the creatures, mē or Angels. Secondly, we by our wiſedom conceiue things by formes and apparances preſented to our mindes; but Chriſt he knoweth all things by the things themſelues, and not by any repreſentations thereof; he needeth no helpe from the thing it ſelfe to conceiue of it as we doe. Thirdly, we know and conceiue of things by ſenſe and diſcourſe, but Chriſt doth this by one ſimple act of vnderſtanding. Fourthly, this wiſedome of God is all one with God himſelfe, for his wiſedome is his ſubſtance. In men and Angels it is not ſo, but a qualitie diſtinct from their ſubſtances. Fifthly, this wiſedome wisedome is infinite, for hereby God knoweth both himselfe and all other things past, present, or to come; things good and bad; things that are, and things which are not; yea the very motions and thoughts of the heart. Sixtly, this is alwaies a certaine and infallible knowledge; neuer coniecturall as ours is. Seuenthly, it is most perfect, both because it doth not onely know some things, but there is nothing which it knoweth not, as also because nothing can be added vnto it, nor detracted frō it: in all which it differeth from ours. Eightly, it is a distinct wisedome, seeing God knoweth not in grosse and confusedly all things; but distinguisheth euery particular thing and action, euen as they are; hee knoweth euery haire of our heads and the places thereof, euery lighting of a sparrow vpon the ground. The consideration of which points sheweth the admirable greatnes of this wisedome of Christ.

The third point is, that he is only wise.] Where is not excluded the wisedome of the Father and holy Ghost, but all the wisedome of al creatures, as Ioh. 17. This is life eternall to know thee the only God; where the Sonne and holy Ghost may not bee excluded. Ob. But some will say, the creatures haue wisedome, and so the Sonne is not only wise. Ans. The wisedome of the creatures is but a created wisedome: God is onely wise by a wisedome vncreated, theirs is but an image and shadow of this. Yea compared thereunto it is no wisedome at al, so as still God may be said to be onely wise.

Vse. 1. Seeing Christ is affirmed to be God, note that his death although it was but momentarie and short in time, yet it was of endlesse merit. Quest. But how can this be that a short death of so few houres should counteruaile the eternall torment due to sinne? Ans. The person that died being God, the dignitie of the person counteruaileth the eternitie of the punishment: so as the Sonne of God suffring, although it was not for halfe a day, it was as much as if all men had died for euer; so infinite and endlesse it was (though not in time) yet in merit and efficacie. 2. Vse. Seeing Christ hath such an absolute wisedome distinctly knowing all things, wee are taught to feare & tremble before him, doing all things as in his presence; he beholdeth vs with all our actions, there is not a word in our tongue but hee knoweth it wholy, yea he vnderstandeth our thoughts, and that a farre off. See Psal. 139. 2. 3. 3. Vse. Such as are in distresse, resting themselues vpon Gods mercie in Christ, may herein stay and vphold themselues with this comfort, that Christ is God and able to relieue them, yea hee is the only wise God, and therefore hee knoweth all their miseries distinctly, he knoweth how farre foorth it is good for them to suffer, how to turne their suffering to the best vnto them, as also the best and fittest time when to deliuer them seasonably out of their trouble: and therefore patiently commit thy selfe into his hand, and relie thy selfe vpon him as on a mercifull redeemer. 4. Vse. If Christ bee only wise, then we must take counsell of him, and learne wisedome of him: Learne of me. If it be asked, how shal we learne of him seeing he is in heauen? I answere, hee hath left his word with vs in the Scriptures, there we may learne his wisedom, there we may haue his directions. If it bee asked, what is the summe of that counsell there contained? I answere, it standeth in the hearing and doing of his Commandements, to which three things are required: first, to beleeue on him, and depend vpon him alone for saluation. Secondly, to turne vnfainedly withall our hearts vnto him. Thirdly, to obey him in our liues and conuersations. This is the right wisedome: for the teaching of which, Wisedome her selfe vttereth her voyce, and calleth to the children of men, Prouerbs 8. vers. 4.

Our wisedome must be fetched from Christ who is only wise.

The third reason is taken from the worke of our redemption, in the words Our Sauiour.] The which reason that we may rightly vnderstand, foure points are to be propounded. First, what kind of Sauiour Christ is? Ans. He must bee conceiued, first a perfect Sauiour, sauing perfectly all that are saued. Heb. 7. 25. He is able to saue perfectly all that come vnto him; yea hee perfectly saueth by himself (and not by any other creature) whosoeuer attaine to saluation, for this also is required vnto his perfection: Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath set out to be a reconciliation through faith in his blood. Hebr. 1. 3. By himselfe hee hath purged our ſinnes. Where note an error in the Church of Rome; which teacheth that Chriſt did by his death merit, that we might by our owne works merit ſaluation: but this is falſe, Chriſt ſaueth not man by man, or by any creature but by himſelfe, yea he ſhould not ſo be a Sauiour, but an inſtrument, by whom we muſt ſaue our ſelues. Secondly, hēce wee learne to acknowledge him an alone Sauiour, without any fellow, partner or deputie: Acts 2. There is no other name vnder heauen giuen to ſaue vs, but the name of Chriſt; and if hee haue any partner, he is but halfe a Sauiour. Hence wee ſee that the Romane Religion, although in word it honour Chriſt, yet in deede it dēieth him, in ioyning to Chriſts all-ſufficient ſatisfaction, others ſatisfactions: and ſo likewiſe they ioyne to his ſacrifice vpon the Croſſe, their ſacrifices in their Maſſe; to his meritorious interceſſion, the interceſſion of the Virgin Mary and other Saints, and that not by way of requeſt, but of the merit of their interceſſion. Thus they ſet vp many Sauiours in ſtead of this our perfect and alone Sauiour.

Popiſh doctrine admitteth not that Chriſt ſhould be a Sauiour, but an inſtrument whereby we muſt ſaue our ſelues.

The ſecond point is, from what danger doth he ſaue vs? Anſ. Saluation euer implieth perdition, ſo ſaluation by Chriſt implieth endleſſe deſtruction, which is the thing from which he doth ſaue vs. In which endleſſe perditiō note firſt the foundation of it, that is our ſins; noted in the expoſition of his name, Mat. 1. He ſhall ſaue his people from their ſinnes. Secondly, the degrees, which are three: firſt, in this life a ſubiection to all kindes of miſeries inward and outward; in ſoule, bodie, goods, name, in our ſelues and others. Secondly, in the end of this life, death, being in it ſelf a curſe, and an entrance into hell. Thirdly, after the firſt, the ſecond death, which is euerlaſting deſtruction in hell fire for euer. Now Chriſt is a Sauiour to ſaue and free vs both from this foundation, our ſins themſelues; as alſo from the degrees, from the bondage to Satan by ſinne: ſecondly, from the firſt death ſo far forth as it is a curſe: thirdly, from the ſecond death and euerlaſting deſtruction.

The third point is: How doth Chriſt ſaue men? Anſ. According to that order which God hath ſet downe in the couenant, not of workes but of grace: wherein God promiſeth to giue Chriſt with all his merits and graces to euery beleeuer. Now according to the tenour of this couenant, firſt Chriſt with his merits is giuen vnto the beleeuer, hee againe is giuen vnto Chriſt: by vertue of which donation a man may ſay Chriſt is mine, his benefits are mine alſo, as truly and as ſurely as my land is my owne. Hereupon to make this mutuall donation effectuall, followeth a ſecond thing, which is the vnion of vs with him by the bond of the ſpirit, and this is a myſticall but a true vnion, whereby he that is giuen vnto Chriſt is made one with him. After this commeth a third thing, which is a communication of Chriſt himſelfe and all his benefits vnto beleeuers. This is done two waies: firſt, by way of imputation, which is an accounting and accepting of his obedience and ſufferings as ours, for the diſcharge of our ſinnes, and acquiting vs from them. Secondly, by a kinde of propagation, whereby grace is deriued from his grace, and infuſed into thoſe that are ſet into him: For as many candles receiue light from one great Torch or light, and as many ſtreames flow from one fountain or head ſpring, and as from one roote proceed many branches; euen ſo al his members drink of his fountaines, are enriched by his treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge: yea indeed & liue by no other life, than that which by his ſpirit hee inſpireth into the faces of their ſoules: and hereby he ſheweth himſelfe to bee a roote, euen that roote of Ieſſe and that ſecond Adam conueying vnto all his branches righteouſnes and life, as the firſt Adam (being a roote alſo) deriued corruption from himſelf to al his poſteritie ſpringing and ariſing from him; ſo is that place 1. Cor. 1. 30. to be vnderſtood, He is made of God to vs wiſedome, righteouſnes, ſanctification and redemption; becauſe he is the root and fountaine of all theſe graces vnto vs, of whoſe fulnes wee receiue them.

The fourth point is: Of whom is Chriſt a Sauiour? Anſw. Our Sauiour, that is, a Sauiour of the Catholique Church: Eph. 5. 23. The Sauiour of his bodie: that is, his Church. More plainly, the perſons that are to be ſaued by him, are ſuch as truly beleeue in him, and teſtifie their faith by their conuerſion vnto God, and forſaking their ſins.

For

First, that it is most necessarie, that the person that is to be saued should be thus qualified, if hee bee of yeeres (for with infants it is otherwise) for matke the order prescribed to be obserued in the Word and Sacraments, in which God requireth in the first place repentance and faith, and then afterwards maketh promise of saluation by Christ, Luk.24.47. That repentance and remission of sinnes should be preached in his name. Repentance for sinne must goe before remission of sinne: Acts 2.38. Repent and be baptized, there is the first: for remission of sinnes, there is the second. This is the rather to be obserued, because many go preposterously to worke, beginning there where God endeth: comforting themselues in their Sauiour, and in the promises of life by his meanes, but let goe saith and repentance, at least deferre them. This is the cause of much wickednes, and a false comfort, not fetched from that order which is appointed by God.

Secondly, those who bring the beginnings of faith and repentance (if so be the beginning be true) constant and still increasing, to these Christ becommeth a Sauiour: Matth.9. Christ came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance: that is, those who acknowledge themselues to bee sinners, confessing and forsaking their sinnes, and not such as presume of their owne righteousnes: Matth.25. I am sent to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel: euen those who in their owne iudgement are lost, who are in the mouth of the lion, and in all mans iudgement lost. Isai.45.1. The well of water of life is promised to all those that thirst: that is, such as want water and long after the welsprings of it, and wish after nothing so much: Isai. 42.3. A bruised reede he will not breake, the smoking flaxe he will not quench; euen small beginnings of grace be they neuer so weake nor feeble, so they be true, he despiseth not. Thus are the persons to bee qualified vnto whom Christ will become a Sauiour. Now because all men are not thus disposed, it followeth that redemption, and the worke of saluation is not vniuersall.

True grace though neuer so weak is accepted.

Vse. First, the multitude of our people are iustly blamed as enemies of Christ: for if they bee asked how they look to be saued; they answere, by their good seruing of God, and their iust and honest dealing among men. Now this their seruing of God is but to repeate ouer the Tenne Commandements, the Creed, and the Lords Prayer: and their good dealing is but to deceiue no man, or not to offer them open iniurie, and here they stay themselues; not all this while euer looking after Christ, as men not standing in neede of him, or of his righteousnesse, but set vp themselues for their owne Sauiours, and know not any other way to life then their owne which carrieth them from Christ. Secondly, wee are taught to conceiue of Christ as of our Sauiour; which wee shall doe if wee bee touched with the sense of our sinne, and danger by it, and with the neede wee haue of his most precious blood, which will cause vs to prise it aboue the most precious things, which the world can conteine. When our hartes are thus affected, then wee conceiue of him as we ought. Thirdly, wee must carrie our selues as persons saued alreadie by Christ; for he is a Sauiour vnto vs euen in this life, and our saluation is begun and is in part here. This we doe when wee ioyne with the profession of faith a true conuersion vnto God. Reasons hereof: First, because regeneration although it bee no cause, yet it is a part of our saluation: for by it a man is freed from the corruption of his sinne in part, which whosoeuer looketh for remission of sinnes must atteine vnto. Secondly, whomsoeuer Christ saueth from hell, he first saueth them from their sinnes: he redeemeth men not only from deserued condemnation, but also their vaine conuersation. If thē thou wouldest know whether Christ hath saued thee from hell or no; looke into thy selfe, and trie whether his death hath wrought the death of sinne in thee or no: for if thou art not turned from sin, thou art not saued from hell. Thirdly, to whomsoeuer Christ is a Sauiour by merit, to him he is a Sauiour by efficacie also, for he is a Sauiour both these waies: by the former he procureth pardon of sin; by the latter hee turneth the heart of the sinner from sin vnto God: this if it bee wanting, there can be no true assurance of the other. Lastly, the saluation of a sinner standeth not in the fruition of riches, honours, wealth, or deliuerance from the miſeries of this life, but properly in righteouſnes, and life eternall, the recompẽce of the ſame; which fruite whoſoeuer would reape, he muſt ſow the ſeedes thereof in righteouſneſſe, and ceaſe from hencefoorth to be the ſeruant of ſinne.

He that is not by Christs death turned from sin, is not by it saued from hell.

The third generall point in this concluſion is, the praiſe of Chriſt it ſelfe in the laſt verſe: Be glory, and Maieſtie, and dominion, and power, both now and for euer, Amen. Which words cõtaine the forme of the praiſe of God and Chriſt; where foure things are to be conſidered: firſt, what bee the things that are here aſcribed to Chriſt? and they be foure: firſt, Glorie: by which wee are to vnderſtand an infinit and incomprehenſible excellẽcie, wherby Chriſt excelleth all things that euer were, are, or euer ſhall be. Now as there be in God two things diſtinct: firſt, eſſence, which is the Godhead it ſelfe ſimply conſidered. Secondly, perſon, as Father, Sonne, holy Ghoſt: ſo accordingly the glorie of God is two-fold: firſt, the glorie of eſſence: ſecondly, the glorie of perſon. The glorie of eſſence is the Godhead it ſelfe, or God himſelfe, who is glorie it ſelfe, or the excellencie of the diuine attributes is the glorie of God: Rom. 1. 19. That which may be knowne of God is his wiſedome, glorie, power, iuſtice, and mercie. And verſ. 23. They turned the glorie of the incorruptible God &c. Whatſoeuer therefore that may be knowne of God is a part of his glorie: Exodus 33. 19. Moſes deſireth the Lord that he would let him ſee his glorie; the Lord anſwered him, Thou canſt not ſee my face and liue. Where to ſee the face of God and his glorie is all one, and ſo of all diuine attributes.

The glorie of the perſons is diſtinct from the other, as the perſons themſelues are by their perſonall proprieties, as the Fathers glorie is to beget the Sonne, the Sonnes glory is to be begotten of the Father, the holy Ghoſts is to proceed from them both. Thus Heb. 1. 3. Chriſt is called the brightnes of the glorie, and the ingrauen forme of his Fathers perſon. Ioh. 1. 14. We ſaw the glorie thereof as the glorie of the onely begotten Sonne of the Father. Both theſe are here to bee vnderſtood; both which are incomprehenſible, and therefore our care muſt be to walke by faith, whereby wee may attaine vnto it, rather than more curiouſly to ſeeke to comprehend the knowledge of it.

The ſecond thing attributed to Chriſt is Maieſtie. Whereby we are to vnderſtand that highnes & greatnes of God and Chriſt, whereby he is in himſelfe, in his workes, and euery way wonderfull, Luk. 9. 43. Whẽ Chriſt had wrought a famous miracle of caſting out a Diuell, it is ſaid they were all amazed at the mightie power of God.

The third thing is dominion; which word properly ſignifieth power and authoritie, and by conſequent dominion, as the ſecond word tranſlated power ſignifieth properly dominion: but it commeth all to one. By dominion is meant an abſolute power and ſoueraigntie in gouerning and commaunding all creatures.

The fourth thing is power; which ſignifieth that abſolute might of God, whereby hee doth whatſoeuer he will. Here by the way wee muſt obſerue that of theſe foure, Glorie is the chiefeſt, the other three are but as parts of his glorie, and are added to make a deſcription of his glorie. For the glorie of God is herein manifeſt in that he is full of Maieſtie, dominion, and power.

The ſecond thing to be obſerued is, that theſe foure are giuen to Chriſt alone; for the word only muſt be referred to the whole ſentence, the Father and holie Ghoſt not being excluded thereby, but all falſe and Idoll Gods.

The third thing is the time of praiſe: Now and for euer: for there is no time wherein it is not to be expreſſed.

The fourth thing is the Affection, which is euer to be vſed in the praiſing of Chriſt in the word Amen, that is, verely, or ſo be it: ſignifying that the affection of the heart muſt euer be ioyned with this religious action of the praiſe of God.

Vſe. Firſt, wee learne hence, that wee are bound to giue praiſe and glorie to God and Chriſt: Pſal. 65. 1. O God praiſe waiteth for thee in Sion, it is one of his rights, properly due vnto him. 1. Cor. 5. Whether wee eate or drinke, or whatſoeuer we doe, it muſt all be done to his glorie. Secondly, looke what is Gods principall end in all his actions, that ought to bee

ours

ours in our actions. But his principall end of all his actions is his owne glory: Prou. 16.4. The Lord made all things for himselfe, that is, for his glories sake; which end wee also must aime at in all our actions. Thirdly, the end of al Gods blessings is to moove vs to set out the vertues of God, 1. Pet. 2.9. which is then done of vs, when with our mouth wee confesse, and in out liues we expresse his mercie, wisedome, power, and such other his properties. Fourthly, that wee may not thinke that this is an arbitrarie dutie left to our owne libertie, or put in our owne power whether we will performe it or not; wee must know that it sitteth neere, or ought to sit neere vs, and is a case of necessitie to preferre the glorie of God before our liues, yea before the saluation of our soules. In the Lords Prayer we are taught first to pray for the glorie of God simply without any respect to ourselues, and afterwards come to the petitions concerning our selues and others. Ob. But here it will be said, God is the fulnes & perfection of all glorie, how can we then adde any glorie vnto him? Ans. The glory of God is taken two waies: first, for that infinite glorie which is in himselfe, or rather which is himselfe, to the perfection of which nothing can bee added, neither can any thing bee detracted from it to make it lesse perfect. Secondly, for that glorie of his which is in, and from vs, the which is nothing else but the acknowledging, confessing and praising of this his glory, in which sense we may bee said to giue him glorie, or not to giue it. Ob. But it may be alleaged that God being the perfection of glorie in himselfe, he needeth not glory or praise from vs; and therefore the dutie is not so absolute necessarie. Ans. Our praise of God is not needfull in regard of God: Psal. 16.2. O Lord my goodnes extendeth not vnto thee, but it is needfull in regard of our selues being creatures, and in this respect bound to honor and glorifie our Creator. Secondly, because (although it is not his happines) yet it is our chiefe good and happines to praise him. Thus are we to take knowledge of our maine dutie, and on the contrarie of our maine sinne who herein haue so often failed, dishonouring the Lord by our wicked thoughts, speeches and actions, and that continually, and so haue robbed him of his glorie, for whose glorie alone we were created.

2. Vse. In this forme of praise obserue the foundation of all diuine and religious worship, all which may be referred vnto foure heads: first, adoration, the ground whereof is Gods Maiestie and glorie; for it followeth well if God be full of Maiestie and glorie, then wee must adore him, wee must submit our selues before him, wee must subiect our consciences to his lawes, wee must beleeue all his promises, and tremble at al his threatnings. Secondly, faith: The ground of which is Gods dominion and power; for if he be the soueraigne Lord of life and death, if hee haue such absolute power to saue and destroy, then must wee place all our faith in him for our saluation. Thirdly, prayer: and fourthly thanksgiuing, both which hath their grounds and foundation in his power, dominion, and glorie; so in the Lords Prayer after the petitions, is added as the ground of prayer the reason of all the requests, for thine is kingdome, power and glorie.

3. Vse. Hence wee must learne to adore and reuerēce the iudgements and workes of God, howsoeuer they seeme vnto vs, and may bee harsh in our shallow reason; for he is glorie it selfe, Maiestie it selfe, power it selfe, and he worketh that for his owne glorie which we cannot comprehend. If God therefore loue Iacob, and hate Esau, for nothing seene in themselues, but because he will so doe, which might seeme to the eye of flesh a thing vniust and partiall, let vs stop our mouthes at this most righteous iudgement of God; for he is all power and dominion, hauing soueraigntie and absolute Lordship ouer al his creatures, to make some vessels of honour, and some of dishonour; some of mercie, and some of wrath, all men being as the clay in the hand of the Potter: & therefore the Apostle Rom. 9. so soone as hee had propounded this famous and memoriall example, to shut the mouthes of men, which otherwise would haue been opened against this iust and incomprehensible proceeding of God, he brought them presently to the consideration of the power and soueraigntie of God, vers. 17.19. We our selues think it no iniustice to kill the creatures, because God hath giuen vs a Lordship and dominion ouer them; and shall we denie it to bee iust in God to destroy likewise his creature, ouer which hee hath infinitely more soueraignitie than man hath ouer them?

4. Vse. We are to be afraide to sinne against God; we must resigne our will vnto his whatsoeuer it is, and simplie subiect our selues vnto the obedience of the same, fearing in the least thing to offend him; and all this because of his Maiestie, power, and dominion ouer vs; for this is the liuing holy and acceptable sacrifice which he requireth of vs, Rom. 1. 12. euen our reasonable serning of him.

Further, whereas all these are to bee giuen to God alone, note first, that the wicked Astrologer with his Arte is here condemned, seeing all glorie is properly belonging vnto God: but the Astrologer arrogateth to himselfe that part of Gods glorie which consisteth in the foreknowledge of things to come, in that by erecting of a figure and the aspect of the starres, he takes vpon him to foretel things meerely casuall and contingent, as of life and death, woe, or wealth, peace or warre; wherein he entreth vpon Gods possessions. Isai. 41. 23. Besides that the starres neither by creation, nor by any ordinance of God, can bee any meanes to foretell things to come. Secondly, detestible is the Romish doctrine, which giueth the glorie and power of God to Saints, as of hearing the prayers of all men in all places, and knowing the hearts. Secondly, it giueth to the Pope power to make lawes and to binde the conscience. Thirdly, it ascribeth to the Pope & his Shauelings power to forgiue sins properly; all which bee incommunicable properties of the Godhead.

Now for the time for euer.] Learne that it is the duty of euery child of God to dedicate himselfe vnto the praise of God, and that continually, Psal. 119. 117. For this shall be the eternall calling and condition of those who shall possesse the kingdome of glorie, and it must be begun euen in this life.

Lastly, from the affection in the word Amen.] Note that whatsoeuer wee are to performe in the seruice of God, it must bee not of fashion; but with the earnest affection of our hearts: Psalme 103. 1. My soule praise the Lord, and all that is within me praise his holy name. It is said of Iosias that hee turned to God with all his soule, and all his heart, according to all the law of Moses; so wee in like manner in our conuersion to God, in our prayers, praises, or whatsoeuer holy worship and seruice we tender vnto him, must beware lest in drawing neere him with our lips, wee withdraw our hearts from him: which wee shall the better performe, if we carry in mind his owne commandement, My sonne giue me thy heart.

FINIS.

Laus Christo nescia finis.

THE PVBLISHERS POST-SCRIPT.

MAny excellēt points might I, as gemmes and pearles in this Commētarie, commend vnto thy cōsideratiō (Christian Reader:) but that one shall suffice to giue notice of, and direct thee vnto, as worthiest of my penning and thy perusing; which, as it is most ioyned with the scope of this whole Epistle; so most seasonably is it fitted to our present cōdition, and most diligently trauased by this our Author, namely, that The seducers of the last age, especially here aimed at by the spirit of God; deuiers of the maine grounds of Religion in doctrine, and practise, are the Papists and the present Romish Church. The necessarie consequent whereof is directly prooued, namely, That we may neuer ioyne with them in their religion: but for euer contend against them for the faith once giuen to the Saints: which wee can neuer doe if wee auoide not their doctrines, as the rockes on which wee shall necessarily suffer shipwracke, or death it selfe, vnto which they cannot but carrie the professors. The antecedent or former part seemeth (by the way) to be a direct and naturall answere vnto a Popish pamphlet, alreadie by three learned men sufficientlie confuted; wherein H.T. by twelue triuiall articles (in comparison) goeth about the bush to prooue, that Protestants haue neither faith nor pietie, religion nor good life. To whom our Author in the exposition of the third verse reioyndeth, and (doubling the number of those articles with aduantage) in the same order prooueth the Romish faith to be aduersary in fixe and twentie seuerall, solid and maine grounds vnto Christian faith and practise. I will no longer stand on this part than I haue shewed who these Papists be, meant by the Author from whom wee must depart; and that for this end, that the sequell of our separation from them may bee acknowledged most iust and necessarie. By such a Papist wee vnderstand not euery one who in some things may bee Popishly affected, for true faith may stand with some errors, and the end of that faith be the saluation of mens soules: so bee the partie aberring be framed to these two rules: First, he must of necessitie hold the foundation, namely, that in Iesus Christ alone, and in no other name, either Angell or man, himselfe or others, saluation is to be sought for. If a man vpon this foundation build some wood, hay, stubble, or chaffe, though these shall be burned, yet himselfe shal be saued, notwithstanding as it were through fire. Secondly, those errors must not be ioyned with either a willing, or wilfull ignorance, for such errors are desperate and bring swift damnation. And thus where God reueiles no more but naked Christ, and where there is a subiection of the heart to the word, causing it to depend on the Ministrie for further and more full instruction, the acknowledgement of euery diuine truth is not of such absolute necessitie to saluation, but that true faith may stand with some (euen Popish) errors. The Ruler is said to beleeue (and that was by a iustifying faith) when as yet he was onely ouercome by the Maiestie of Christ; appearing in the miracle of raising his sonne, to assent vnto and acknowledge ỹ maine truth that Christ was the Messiah: but so, as himselfe and his household depended on his mouth for further instruction, and became his disciples. Yea euen the Disciples themselues were long after their calling and conuersion very ignorant in no small points of Christianitie. Philip, of the first person in Trinitie: Lord shew vs the Father.

And secondly this ignorance (the mother of their errors) was accompanied with a desire of knowledge: for they were euer questioning with him, desiring him to open vnto them his parables, and resolue their doubts, instantly listning vnto the gracious words of his mouth, and in a word were blessed euen in hungring and thirsting after righteousnesse. The persons then here aimed at are absolute & perNote well. fect Papists, against whom alone this

The second point is our consequent dutie, standing in our standing out with these aduersaries of Gods grace and Gospell: neuer offering to communicate with them in their cup of fornications; nor once bethink vs of leaguing such abhorring natures as are light and darknes: and truth (which is of an vnstained nature) with most foule and deformed falsehood. For we cannot drinke
1.Cor.10.21. of the cup of the Lord & of Diuels. Which point let me with good leaue a little further declare: not that I loue to kindle or keepe in any coales of contention, (the Lord put farre from me such vnpleasant thoughts) but calmely to shew the ouersight of diuers mediatours, attempting to reconcile ours with the present religion of the Romish Synagogue: esteeming it to bee too much peremptorines so farre as wee doe to depart from them: yea censuring it, either as wilfulnes on the one hand, or scrupulositie on the other, to bee so opposite vnto them as we are: reputing it a matter of no difficultie to frame both sides to a meane, either side (as they say) yeelding a little: nay it is buzzed out, into the eares, by the tongues of common men, that there is no such discrepance and difference betweene vs in matters of moment as is made; but that the substance of both our Religions is not farre from the same: so as many are in a mammering whether way may be better: whereunto (after the Hebrew διὰ τριῶν τρόπων, imitated also by the Greeks and Latins, that I may begin with the last for the helping of memorie) first wee may bewaile, in beholding into what a fearfull (if not desperate) degree of declining many are alreadie come: that after so many yeeres profession of the truth, powerfully both published, and protected, they should not only admit a dangerous deliberation; but euen call the very maine grounds thereof into question: whereas if it bee in a motion to Idolatrie, they ought instantly to say with Sidrach; We are not carefull what Dan.3. to answere in this matter. But this iudgement of God is iust vpon them, that whereas they neuer receiued the truth in loue of it, they should lose of their ground, and bee left vnto further delusion. Good cause haue we all to lament the remembrance of our ruine, through this Satanical stratagem: If the woman will needes bee so vnwise as (not needing) to enter parley with Satan, whom she ought to haue resisted: and that in matter of such moment, as wherein Gods truth, his glorie, and her owne glorious estate must bee questionable: most iustly must she bee left of God, snared by Satan, foyled through her owne follie, throwne from her estate, (though of innocẽcie) and dispossessed (not alone wee all know) euen of Paradise

Beſides, how farre ſhort come theſe men in zeale to the truth, not onely of our aduerſaries the Papiſts themſelues, among whome no doubts or queſtions in their grounds and principles are tolerable; but euen of the Iew who will admit of no diſpute againſt his Religion: yea of the barbarous Turke himſelfe, who inflicteth death on whomſoeuer they conuince to haue called a word of their Alcaron into queſtion?

Secondly, concerning thoſe who cannot diſcerne ſuch eſſentiall differences betweene our Religions, both of vs (as they ſay) profeſſing ſaluation by the ſame Chriſt; and all the articles of the ſame faith; I wiſh them no worſe than that their eyes were cleered with the eye-ſalue, that they might ſee, that he that ſeeth not ſuch a Papiſt as is mentioned to profeſſe a falſe Chriſt, and a falſe faith, ſeeth in Religion ſcarſe any thing at all: neither doubt I but (to whom malice, or ignorant ſuperſtition ſhutteth not their eyes) to ſhew plainly in few words, that whatſoeuer in words they confeſſe with vs, yet in doctrine and deed they altogether reuerſe it and diſſent from vs, in caſes wherein wee may neuer conſent vnto the. And firſt, ſeemeth it a ſmall matter of difference, that in generall they charge our whole doctrine of nouelties, whence ordinarily they tearme the Teachers thereof Nouators? and in ſpeciall, firſt, that our doctrine of iuſtification by faith alone (for this ſtriketh at the head, and vnbowelleth all their ſhifting deuices) is but a new deuice of ours? as appeareth in their Champians challenge. But confounded herein was he, his cauſe and abetters: our learned men at the conference with him in the Tower not onely mightely by the Scriptures conuincing; but out of Greeke and Latin Fathers alſo, who liued aboue a thouſand yeeres ago, oppreſſing him with thoſe very formall words, that faith onely iuſtifieth; ſo driuing him to ridiculous ſhifts, and newly coyned diſtinctiõs (ſo neere the Mint was he) before vnheard of: euen as in this controuerſie being much ſtraitned, they were forced to caſt about for that as falſe as new diſtinctiõ of iuſtification into the firſt and ſecond, neuer heard of for ỹ ſpace of a thouſand and fiue hundred yeeres after Chriſt.

2. Let mee adioyne hereunto the challenge of our Englands Iewell, who vndertook, and performed the proofe, that in ſeuen and twentie points (none of them trifles) the Papiſts are different, not onely from ours, but from the doctrine of the Primitiue Church: and that neuer one of thoſe their new deuices was once heard of, or receiued in the Church of God for the ſpace of fiue hundred yeeres after Chriſt. If then they challenge our doctrine of Nouelties: and we haue proued (they not improouing) that theirs is of no ancient, and not neere Apoſtolicall authoritie. I hope this cannot ſeeme a circumſtance betweene vs; for there can be but one truth, and that is moſt ancient.

3. Againe, can it ſeeme ſo ſmall a moate in the eye of any man of ſight, that the ſacrilegious Synod of Trent teacheth, (curſing the contrarie minded) that on their Romiſh Altars, ſacrifices propitiatorie are daily, properly, and truly offered for the ſinnes of the quick and dead? ſeeing that this doctrine vtterly derogateth from, yea and abrogateth that moſt perfect and only once for all offered, whereby their ſinnes are expiated that ſhall ſee the Lord in the holie of holies.

4. Further, let any indifferent and ſingle eye behold, and conſider whether thoſe bee but triſling differences which our reuerend Reignolds hath worthily diſputed, both againſt Bellarmine in his bookes intituled, The Idolatrie of the Roman Church: as alſo againſt Hart, both in the two principall queſtions concerning Peters and the Popes ſupremacie: (by which their doctrine they would make Kings and Princes but vaſſals and feodataries vnto the Pope; to whom they aſcribe abſolute power to excommunicate Kings; to diſcharge their ſubiects from their obedience, and allegeance; to diſpenſe with their oathes of loyaltie, and faithfull ſubiection; and diſpoſe of their Crownes at his pleaſure: which no good ſubiect (much leſſe Chriſtian) can ſay is a triuiall point, or a little to bee yeelded vnto) as alſo to thoſe fiue concluſions annexed, wherein hee hath ſubſtantially and learnedly determined, that the faith profeſſed by the preſent Church of Rome is not the Catholike faith. That their Church is ſo far from being the Catholike Church, that it is no ſound member of the Catholike Church, and conſequently that the reformed Churches of Great Brittaine, France, Germany, &c. haue lawfully: that is, by warrant of Gods word ſeuered themſelues therefrom.

5. Neither may wee yeeld that to be a circumſtantiall queſtion diſcuſſed betweene our learned Whittaker and Stapleton concerning the Authoritie of the holy Scriptures, which they ſo farre debaſe & ſubordinate to their Church: ſeeing through that great booke of his (neuer like to bee anſwered by them) he gauely prooueth that the foundation of Papiſticall faith is laid vpon man, and not vpon God; and ſo it is an humane faith, and not diuine; vnto which their whole ſeruice is ſutable, according to Durandus his deſcription in his Rationale. And laſtly, none but inconſiderate men would auerre either that the moſt learned Proteſtãts of Europe haue ſpent their ſtrength, and beaten their braines only for the beating of the ayre in matters immateriall: or that thoſe who haue as yet vncontroleably publiſhed, that the Popiſh Teachers haue reuerſed the whole Decalogue, with the moſt of the Articles of the Creede, and Petitions of the Lords Prayer, haue differed and ſquared in points not eſſentiall: or that ſo many zealous Martyrs, many of them of very profound knowledge ſhould giue their liues, and moſt innocent blood, for matters of ſhadow (as is pretended) rather than of ſubſtance: for thus to impeach the labours of the former, or ſtaine the ſufferings of the latter, would ſcarſe beſeeme any but either a Papiſt, or ſome ſpeciall fauourite of theirs.

1. Booke, 2. chapt. pag. 77.

3 Thirdly, to ſuch as are of minde that a harmeleſſe mediation may be made; me thinkes it no other but the feeding of a fancie: beſides that, it is not harder to make them preſerue, and yet neither without preiudice. In which point, as I would not ſeeme too rigorous or auſtere, well knowing how ſweete is the name, and yet more pleaſant is peace it ſelfe; ſo would I chuſe an honorable warre, before a diſhonorable peace; a free and iuſt diſſention, before a baſe and ſlauiſh agreement, ſuch as theirs would be: For Nahaſh the Ammonite will make no concord with Iabeſh Gilead, vnleſſe euery man ſuffer his right eye to be pulled out, that ſo he may bring ſome ſhame vpon Iſrael. And firſt it ſeemeth to me a matter harder to bee brought about, than I out of my ſhallow reach can expect euer to ſee effected: both in regard of our ſelues, as alſo of them: for if the truth bee with vs (as wee are bound to confeſſe, both in reſpect of it ſelfe, and the [a] law whereby it is eſtabliſhed) [b] then our turnings backe muſt not reproue vs; but hauing found the old way, we are to walke in it, (without turning aſide) that wee may in it finde reſt for our ſoules. The Lords counſell to his Prophet muſt bee our direction in this caſe: Some of them go not thou to them, but let them come to thee: for to loſe our hold of the truth, much leſſe to leeſe any part of it, as in exchange with falſehood, were not onely a wrongfull betraying of it ſelf, but a wilful wronging of our ſelues and poſterities; whom Gods bleſſings for the preſent hath made able to hold it entire, not onely without danger, but with encouragement, power, & protection. But more hopeleſſe or impoſſible rather in reſpect of them ſhall our meeting in the midway ſeeme to be, to whomſoeuer with iudgement ſhall perpend theſe foure ſubſequent conſiderations.

First, that their faith being not [c] Apoſtolicall, their Religion a [d] falſe Religion, their Church a [e] falſe Church, and their worſhip a falſe worſhip: it will proue not a matter of repairing (as requiring leſſe coſt and labour) but of founding their faith, before they can bee raiſed vnto vs: which how hard it is for them to bee brought vnto, who are ſo ſetled in their lees and dregges for ſo many hundred yeeres, they cannot be ignorant, who know how difficult it is for a Blackemoore to change his skin, or a Leopard his ſpots: for ſo hard is it for thoſe who are accuſtomed to euill, to be drawne to good.

Secondly, that ſo long as the Pope holdeth his headſhip ouer the Church, with that erroneous poſition, that he cannot erre; (which hee is likely to lay downe with his Crowne and Croſier, (for ſooner to part with them were a foule error) if by much ſweate ſome indifferent parley were cõpaſſed (himſelfe ſtill remaining both partie and iudge, as hee was in the Councell of Trent)

Noli quæstuosum vlcus tangere Erasm.

Thirdly, their cautelous circumspection, lest by any meanes the knowledge of our doctrine might perhaps bee scattered among them, argueth an vtter auersation in them for euer acknowledging it, which appeareth in sundry their practises: 1. In that they bind the consciences of all Catholikes, to a perpetuall separation from all our Ecclesiasticall assemblies in religious publike duties; which is the ground of all Recusancie: to which purpose they teach it to bee a sinne to heare our sermons, for that were a [f] participation with blasphemies: and for prayer with vs so straite laced are they, as they may not say Amen in publike or priuate, (suppose at their tables) if any Protestant bee present. 2. In that they censure most seuerely al their subiects that trauell or traffike into Protestant countries, blasting them with excommunication. 3. In that they haue erected in their Cities an Inquisition to examine vpon oath any forreiner or stranger, whereby they ransake not onely all his carriages, but euen his conscience also, lest he should bring any opinion within him; or instrument without him; that standeth not with their minds and liking: wherein not onely some little escape, but euen suspition it selfe prooueth often capitall. 4. In their warines, lest any of our books, especially of our translations of the Bible should be had, or read among them: whence it is that no bookes, which passe not the Inquisition, may bee sold in Italy: to which purpose also studiously they teach it to be a sinne against the first Commandement to reade any of their prohibited bookes, of which they haue a large Index very common, and consequently being such a mortall sinne, it must necessarily be confessed at time of shrift: yea as men euery way foreseeing what way our doctrines might bee induced among them, to shut vp surely euery crany and entrance, they scarsely suffer to see, or bee seene in the light their owne greatest Writers, such as Bellarmine, Gregory de Valentia, &c. that our positions, allegations, and answeres (though answered by themselues) in those books may not be made known; lest perhaps it should befall others of them as it did Pighius, who reading ouer Caluins Institutions, with purpose of refuting it, was (ere he was aware) won to the defence of the doctrine of iustification by free imputation according to the Apostle. So as Spaine maketh not a more diligent annuall search that the Iewes among them haue no armes in their houses, than both Spaine and Italy vigilantly secure themselues in this behalfe: and no marueile if our books be so auoided, seeing that they inhibite men from reading the Scriptures themselues, lest they should become heretikes: condemning it, and [g] bringing men in daunger of their liues for reading them, as for an hereticall practise. In a word, at this day such a night doe these Owles delight to liue in, that among themselues euen their Regulars (much lesse their Laicks) may not without licence from the Pope, or their Prelates, reade the Bible, no not in the Catholike translation.

[g] Fox, Acts and Monuments.

Fourthly, consider their irreconciliable hatred against ours, farre aboue all other (although most hereticall and damnable) religions; for why else can they content themselues with so studious preuention of the Protestants profession onely; whereas both Iewes and Grecians euen in Rome it selfe the Popes Sea, are suffered with their Ceremonies, Synagogues, Seruices, yea & Circumcision it self administred to the dead as well as to the liuing? which lowdly proclaimeth, that farre they are frō iudging, & deeming so indifferently of our differences, as some among our selues seeme to doe: and that they would sooner be wone to the Iewes or Turkes in profession then the Protestants: which [h] one of them saith is in nothing better then that of the Alcaron; and in many things far worse and more detestable. And good reason (me thinkes) they haue of suffering among them the forenamed Sectes and Heretikes, as from whom together with the heathen, the whole body of Poperie is peecemeale patched together, and yet the name of a Protestant bee as much detested of them, as the Iewish names were of the heathen Kings. For which cauſe Daniel & his fellowes muſt haue all their names changed before they may bee brought into the preſence of Nebuchadnezzar, whēce their ordinary practiſe proceedeth, that in their writings, their bitternes and diſdaine ſuffer them not to name, but in moſt reproachfull tearmes, the firſt reformers and reſtorers of our Religion: calling them vſually, Caluiniſts, Puritans, Innouators, and Heretikes; neither doth this inbredde malice of Papiſts againſt our Religion ſtay it ſelf heere, but hath broken out into moſt barbarous butcheries, and moſt cruell bloodſheddings, which yet they could neuer account ſufficiently ſauage: not of their owne ſubiects only, and within their owne Territories: but within other dominions: not of priuate only, but of publike perſons: not of meaner, but of moſt noble, yea Royall diſcent: and not of perſons only, but of Cities, States, Kingdomes, and Countries. But where ſhould I begin, or if I ſhould, where ſhould I make an end of inſtācing their moſt matchleſſe, and endleſſe tyranny? (euer a note of falſe Religion, and inſeparable to the Romiſh) whoſe curſed rage (like that of Symeon and Leui) Gen. 34.39. and 47.7. euen fierce and cruell, cauſing them to ſtincke among the inhabitants of the earth, hath made the ſtreetes of infinite Cities (which either their force, or fraud and falſe arts could caſt open) to runne with the blood of Proteſtants, as did once Ieruſalem with the blood of the Saints which Manaſſeh ſhed like water. What ſhall I neede to ſpeak of that notorious bloodie inquiſition in Spaine & Italy the chiefe ſeates of it? what of the many miſerable maſſacres, Canniball like conſpiracies, and tragicall murthers in France and the low Countries? In our owne country, who but ſtrangers at home are ignorāt what fierceneſſe, feares, and fires, were raiſed to conſume the innocent bodies of the Saints liuing and dead: in ſuch ſort as euery corner of the Land ſeemed as hot as Nebuchadnezzars furnace, euen ſeuen times hotter then it vſed to be: wherein were to bee caſt whoſoeuer would not fall downe, and worſhip the Image which the Romiſh Nebuchadnezzar had erected? Neither yet were thoſe fires thought furious inough for ſuch; as might haue appeared, if the Lord had not taken the rodde out of thoſe wicked hands in that ſeaſon whē he did: & ſince that time; what a number of diueliſh plots and conſpiracies were attempted againſt the noble perſon of her late Maieſtie of bleſſed memorie, by Arden, Someruile, Babington, Parry, Lopez., Squire, and others? and thoſe ſtratagems not performed by perſons exorbitant, but with the priuitie of the Pope, and Principals of their religion, backing the ſame not only with their [i] doctrine, to which it is moſt ſutable (as appeareth by ſundrie their ſeditious poſitions; lately collected by M^r. Morton) but with pardons, promiſes, paies to particular [k] perſons: and cōmandemēts generally to all ſubiects whoſoeuer, as appeareth by the Popes Bull againſt her late Maieſtie: Volumus & iubemus vt aduerſus Elizabetham &c. ſubditi arma capeſſant. And yet (as though all were well) they can couer al the ill hearing of ſuch traiterous practiſes, vnder the name of Catholike pretenſes: for the furthering of which intentions, what may not, and muſt not be attempted? Now to theſe purpoſes maintaine they innumerable Catholike intelligencers & inſtruments (I meane their Prieſtes and Ieſuites) ſent out by them, not only as eies to ſearch out the ſecrets of ſtates & countries, and watch their beſt aduantages: but as hands (full of blood) to execute whatſoeuer miſchiefe vpon any of the Lords annoynted ones, not only oppoſing thēſelues to the Papal power; but which is more, if they be but ſuſpected not ſo firme to the Pope as they wiſh; or (which is moſt of all to bee marked) though they bee their owne dead ſure; yet if they ſhew not themſelues as ready to execute the Popes bloodie deſignes, as he to command: which was the caſe of the late King of France, ſlaine treacherouſly for no other cauſe by a Iacobin. What argument then can bee brought to perſwade vs of their euer according with vs in whole or part in our Religion? of which they deeme no other, then as of a peccant humor neceſſarily to be purged out euery fewe yeares, either by murther, if it preuaile in the head: or by maſſacre, if in the body of any countrie; and rather then it ſhould not, they will not ſticke with Blaſius at the commandement of their great Gracchus to

The late most diabolicall and furious attẽpt against his Maiesty & the whole state that euer was inuented; (the like wherof both in the contriuing and whole carriage could neuer be shewed, no I thinke if there were Annals and Chronicles kept in hell it selfe) cryeth out against them long ere this time in all the corners of Christendome. God Almighty still deliuer his Highnes and Royall race from them: and by his Maiesties meanes, vs and our Land from them. For how much better had it bin, that his Maiesty had bẽen moued to haue banished these vipers out of his Realmes, then those who professe the Picture in fine. same Lord Iesus, and labour (though with acknowledgement of too much weakenes & wants,) to be found faithfull before the Lord and their Soueraigne? But not to depart from our purpose: These bee the waies wherein the Popish Baalamits would meete vs, and with vs; if the Lord should not meete with thẽ, comming against them in euery corner. While then they walke in Iud. 11. these waies of Caine, what booteth it Psal. 130. 7. vs to speake of a peace with them? for while wee speake of peace, they are bent to warre.

But bee it some peaceable consent and agreement were on their part promised; yet that one consideration of the treacherie in their compactes, would keepe any iudicious man from setling his conceite, and affection vpon any ingenious conclusions with them: which treacherie is not only practised by the persons of faithlesse Papists: but is prescribed as a maine precept of that most infidell doctrine of theirs; nay which euen infidels themselues would blush at in this behalfe: for doth not their doctrine make it lawful for them to vse any Æquiuocatiõs, or reseruatiõs (as they terme them) with their aduersaries, almost vpon any aduantage? yea and that (lest they should not come to the height of impiety) in giuing answere not only on their words, but vpon oath before the lawfull Magistrate, though not their liues but their least liberties only be touched? Which doctrine till it bee reuersed, how dare wee take their words or any assumpsit from them in any thing wherein we would not be ouerreached? But suppose again such peaceable conclusions were not promised only, but purchased: what yet were we better thẽ before? what billes, or bonds would or could they lay in sure inough for our security, so long as their doctrine standeth in force published in word & writing, that fides hæreticis non est seruanda, & that Leagues with them Tollet. Instruct. Sacerd. are more honorable in breaking then in making? how long can we conceiue, would the continuance of our peace last longer, then by it they could with aduantage vndermine vs?

But because I must shut vp many matters in few words, let vs see the preiudice which would ensue vpon such pretended mediation, in matter of Religion: and first seeing they are a seed of the wicked, corrupt children, hauing forsaken the Lord, in whom from the sole of the foot, to the crowne of the head, there is nothing but wounds, and swellings and sores full of corruption: and seeing themselues are become open Idolaters, their Cities cages of Idolatrie, their seruices all Idolatrous, hauing thus forsakẽ the couenant of their youth; seeing filthines appeareth on their skirts; & finally seeing by seeking their iustification by the workes of the law, they are abolished from Christ, and fallen from grace: (the which particulars haue been clearely proued by many our vnanswered, and vnanswerable bookes) to communicate with them by accepting; yea not abstaining from the least appearance of any of these euils; were no other but to expose and lay our selues open, and naked to all manner of danger, of infectiõ of our soules, defectiou from our God, & in the end of destruction both of body and soule. It was a dangerous disease which Israel brought out of Ægypt, hauing through their long continuance there, by reason of those marishes, and the Riuer Nilus, (to which Lucretius in a distich appropriateth this disease) contracted the same vpon them: for the prouing, and purging wherof, the Lord instituted so many ceremonies and separations: but farre more fearefull was that inward leprosie, euen that abhominable Idolatry which they brought forth with them, and which cost them so deare both in the wildernes and in the land of Cana-

Nay which is more, and as worthy the noting, we may obſerue how the Lord euen in ciuill things draggeth his people from their ſociety and fellowſhip: for firſt Iſrael is charged, that they ſhould goe no more backe to Ægypt that way; ſo as the danger was (if any) by their neighbours, whoſe countries were adiacent vnto them: the which the Lord vſeth all meanes to preuent: both in that he willeth his people to nouriſh a perpetuall emnity with the Moabite, and Ammonite, the peace and proſperity Deut. 23. 6. of whõ they may neuer ſeeke all their daies: as alſo to debarre them from preſſing into his people, he chargeth that neither Verſ. 3. of them euer enter into the congregation of the Lord, to the tenth generation: intending hereby that they ſhould not riſe to preferment, authoritie, or Magiſtracie among them. ſtraite prohibition, that no Iew (except the Leuite) ſhould marry out of his owne Tribe, much leſſe without his owne people: whereof although I acknowledge other more main cauſes (as the diſtinction of the Tribe of the Meſſiah from the reſt; the cleare acknowledgement of his race: the execution of the Lords whole regiment Eccleſiaſticall and Ciuill in that policie, fitted according to that diſtinction to their ſeuerall offices, and poſſeſſions) yet I thinke this is one included reaſon not to be neglected, eſpecially ſeeing they had ſtraite charge againſt it. Againe, in caſe a ſeruant Iew would marry a ſtranger into his Maſters houſe, he was not at his departure to carrie his wife and children, for they were to bee his Maſters: but if hee would abide ſtill with her, hee was then ſhamefully to come before the Magiſtrate, and for euer renounce his libertie, vntil the Iubily releaſed him: by which ſtraite lawes the Lord would reſtraine euen ſlaues and ſeruãts (who for the moſt part are neglected) from matching themſelues with ſtrangers. Such another law to this purpoſe is recorded, Deut. 21.10. that if an Iſraelite in warre, ſhould ſee a bewtifull woman taken captiue, whom he did affect for his wife, it was ordered by God, that firſt all meanes ſhould bee vſed for the alienating of his affection, as that hee muſt haue her home a moneth before, and not marrie vpon any ſudden motion. Secondly ſhee muſt ſhaue her head to make her as ill fauored in his eies as might be. Thirdly ſhe muſt nouriſh her nailes, to make her yet more ſordid. Fourthly ſhe muſt put off the garment wherin ſhe was taken, and put on baſe, and neglected garments fit for a penſiue captiue. Fifthly ſhee muſt bewaile her father and mother a whole moneth, to ſhew how hardly, and ſorrowfully ſhe was brought from her fathers houſe, into the power of ſtrangers: and then if by al theſe meanes the man could not be drawn fro̅ her loue, it was permitted to him to marrie her for his wife: which law letteth vs ſee how hardly the Lord endureth, & is drawne to admitte the leaſt liberty in this behalfe. How many ciuill things might I inſtance in, wherein the Lord ſtraitened his people, that they might bee vtterlie vnlike the Gentiles in habit, manner of liuing, behauiour, and other like circumſtances, otherwiſe in themſelues very indifferent? which I had heere inſerted, but that I muſt conſider that I write an addition, not a booke; an admonition, & not an expoſition: & if yet theſe ordinances of God himſelf, ſeeme in ſome mens opinions too ſtraite, and not to be imitated of vs in regard of the Papiſts, towards whom wee are not to be ſo ſeuere, as ſo far to ſeuer our ſelues; that is but the ſeeking of a knot in a ruſh, and to be acute in diſtinguiſhing, where God hath not diſtinguiſhed; and in effect to affirme, either that the Idolatry of the Romiſh Church is not ſo vile and groſſe, as is that of other Idolaters: or elſe (ſeeing our people conuerſe with them more then any Idolaters) that to communicate with their Idolatrie, is nothing ſo dangerous now, as it was for Gods people, to participate with the Idolatry of the heathé againſt Gods expreſſe Commandement. But if with any ſuch the teſtimony of man, be greater then the teſtimony of God (as it is commonly with the Popiſh minded, who flie from the Scriptures vnto men, becauſe their doctrine is from below) let them looke vnto thoſe moſt auncient Councels, which were the purer, for ſixe hundred yeares after Chriſt; and they ſhall finde that the Church would haue her children diametrally oppoſed euen on lawfull things, to the Iewes, and heathen of whom they were in danger to be corrupted. Thoſe were more famous, of Nice, [y] which decreed that the feaſt of Eaſter ſhould not bee kept of Chriſtians, at that time, and in that manner that the Iewes did: that in nothing they might agree with them. That alſo of Bracea [z] decreed, that Chriſtians ſhould not decke their howſes with bay-leaues and greene boughes, (than which what can be more indifferent?) neither reſt the ſame day fro̅ their callings wherin they did: nor keepe the firſt day of euery moneth as they did. It would be too tedious, and argue forgetfulnes of my ſelfe, and no remembrance of my reader to recite the teſtimonies of other Councels, Fathers, and our owne principal Writers in this behalfe: which otherwiſe eaſily had I bin carried vnto by the tenacity and ſtiffenes of many in this argument. But to end: as our Sauiour wiſhed his hearers:

Coniugia extera Deus & reipub. cauſa, & conſcientia vetuit. Iun. in Deut. 21. Exo. 34.16. Exo. 21.4.

[y] An. Dom. 315.

[z] An. Dom. 610. Tom. 2. Can. 73.

Beware of the leauen of the Pharisies; so let euery man beware of the leauen of the Papists: for what is Popish doctrine else, but a Phatisaicall leauen, alwaies to bee purged out of Churches, and states; as the Iewes vpon some occasions were to purge al leauen out of their howses. Let no man say it is but a little, and such a difference which may be tolerated: for euen the Pharisies doctrine was much of it more true, thē this Pharisaicall doctrine of theirs; yet was their leauen hid in it, (as in this) the nature whereof is (though it be but little) yet to sowre the whole lumpe. In a word, as Num. 14.8. Caleb & Iosh̄ua said of Canaan, the land is a very good land; If the Lord loue vs, hee will bring vs vnto it: euen so, if the Lord loue vs, hee will expell these Giants from vs, and giue vs security in our owne land from the Anakims: or if not, if any of these strangers abide with vs, our faithfull prayer and hope is, that (as Salomon numbring all the strangers in the land, set them to worke in his Temple, euen a hundred three & fiftie thousand and sixe hundred: so our wise and peaceable Salomon and Soueraigne will continue, to set euen thousands of these to worship with vs in the Temple: yea and in this one circumstance passe Salomons wisdome, in not chusing ouerseers of themselues, to cause them to worship. The Lord Iesus strengthen his Highnes heart, vnto this and many mo honorable workes, and make vs happie in his long and prosperous Raigne, to his renowne and glorie in this life, and fruition of the blessed Crowne of righteousnes at the peaceable end of his through-comfortable daies. Amen.
